HIS TONGUE CUT OUT.

John Natika's Terrible Experience at the Hands of a Russian Mob.

New York Truth. No better illustration of the ferocity of the Russian mobs, in their attacks on harmless Jews, can be had than the case of John Nitaka, now at Castle Garden, where he arrived in company site Dr. Koch has introduced to the with thirteen of his co-religionists on board the steamer Greece last Saturday. The unfortunate man is completely dumb, his tongue having been cutout at its roots by a band of drunken marauders. He is a pitiable object to see, especially when he attempts to this country pulmonary consumption make himself understood by dull nasal is a scourge of such distressing prevasounds and gesticulations. Yesterday lence and mortality that it may be morning his unfortunate condition reckoned first among the maladies was brought to the attention of Capt. Heintzman, who requested him to make a written statement of his terrible experience. In accordance with with but slight hope. Whether this request John Nitaka wrote a story, will be true for all time, in spite of four foolscap sheets long, in Russian. Dr. Koch's observations of habits of the same read in part as follows:

"My name is Jon Natika. I can not speak, because my tongue was cut out in Russia. I lived in the neighborhood of Kieff, my business being that of a clothier. Last October the peasants became very abusive to us leverybody had the small pox. Court Jews and many were brutally ill-treated. At first they let me alone, burned down one of my outhouses. I of them breaking into my room. They dragged me out of bed, and beat and When I pleaded poverty they took me out into the garden, clad as I was in my night shirt, and, putting a rope around my neck, hung me up to a limb of a tree. When I was half suffocated they let me down again and asked me if I would disclose the place where the money was hidden. Again I retused, upon which, without further ado, one of the men forced open my mouth and while the others held. my mouth, and, while the others held subsequently recovered in the hospital, and furnished the police with the names and description of my assailants, who were, however, re leased on the trial." Here Natika's narrative ends. Some of his companions furnished to a Truth reporter the remainder of the harrowcan be convicted of an assault unless the complainant testifies to the fact in person and by word of mouth. In Natika's case there could naturally be no question of verbal testimony, inasmuch as, having lost his tongue, the complainant was dumb. This quibble was immediately taken hold of by the lawyer for the plaintiffs, and, to the surprise of everybody, the president of the court ordered the prisoners— four in number—to be discharged. The day after this decision took place another Jew was mutilated in a man-ner similar to Natika, in one of the suburbs of Kieff.

Natika and his companions will probably be sent to Texas by the Hebrew Aid society. Dr. Koch's Discovery.

N. Y. Times.
The public may justly complain of the slowness of the secular and scientific press to recognize the news value of the highly important results of Prof. Koch's discovery of the parasitical source of tubercular disease. Prof. Tyndall'a letter to the London

The rapid growth of the continental capi tals, the movement of princely nood les and fat, yulgar duchesses, the de bates in the Servian Skupschina, and the progress or reseding of sundry royal gouts are given to the wings of lightning; a lumbering mail coach is swift enough for the news of one of the great scientific discoveries of the age. Similarly, the gifted gentlemen who daily sift out for the American public the pith and kernel of the old world's news leave Dr. Koch and his bacilli to chance it in the ocean mails, while they challenge the admiration of every gambler and jockey in this republic by the fullness and accuracy of their cable reports of horse races. In its purely scientific aspects, Dr Koch's discovery that pulmonary con sumption and all tubercular diseases are produced by a "minute rod-shapeed parasite" is one of the most impressive and striking achievements of the human mind. tration of what can be done for humanity by that modern science which elderly orthodox gentlemen are fond of declaring is made up half of em-piricism and half of the bravado of reckless self-assertion. In pushing one step further our knowledge of the pathology of the human body, Dr. Koch has given science a new title to its honors, and imbued with new force and meaning the command, "Know thyself." But science has yet much to do to seize the results of this discovery and apply them to the alleviation and cure of disease. We cannot doubt that every intelligent reader of Prof. Tyn-dall's abstract of Dr. Koch's lecture instantly recognized the importance of the proof it affords that consumption is contagious. It cannot be said therefore, that for the present the new knowledge we have gained is void of practical interest. But to draw from t its great possible benefits is the work of the future, and, tortunately, a work which the physiologist and physician may hopefully undertake. The popular interest in the little paraworld will deepen in proportion as medical science demonstrates its power to annihilate him or rob him of his fatal power Tubercular diseases, it is said, are the cause of one-seventh of the doaths of the human race. In which our changeable climate is sup posed to foster. And it is a disease against which medical skill contends Translated by an official interpreter, bacilli, cannot be foretold. But the analogy of that other dreaded scourge -small pox-affords ground for hope everybody had the small pox. Court chronicles mention its disfiguring effects but in December a band of peasants upon the faces of kings and nobles, and half the advertisements for runcomplained to the pristay (police captain), but no one was arrested. I accumulated a little money, a fact which the moujiks soon learned. They wanted to as a safeguard against the invasion of get my money and asked me for it. his kinsman of the original type. Dr. When I pleaded poverty they took me Koch's experiment has thus far failed to produce any modification in the bacillus sufficient to warrant the experiment of inoculation upon a human subject. We may be very sure, however, that the attempt will not be given up by physiologists antil it is proved to be hopeless or the supply of rabbits and guinea pigs gives out. But inoculation for con-sumptive diseases is not the only end me, cut out my tongue with a pair of shears. They all then ran away, while I almost bled to death. I done to stay the ravages of the bacilli when they have already fastened upon the system? Do they sometimes lie dormant for years in the lung:? Is it the bacillus itself, the germ of consumption that is, or only a tendency to the disease that a consumptive parent transmits to the child? Why ing tale.
