Heavy Damage Suit Against the Cut-off Contractors.

The U. P. Takes in Another Western Railroad.

Miscellaneous Notes on Track Topics.

The papers were filed in the office of the clerk of the district court yesterday in a suit for damages brought by Otto Gerber against Mitchell Vincent and Murphy, in which the plaintiff demands a judgment for $15,000. Vincent and Murphy are the contractors for the work known as the Florence cut-off, a big job of cutting and excavating which will shorten the line of the Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha road six miles.

In the early part of February last while this work of excavating was going on, there was an accident one day whereby two or three men were seriously injured by the caving in of a bank. One of these men was Otto Gerber, the plaintiff in this case, and on his petition he alleges that the accident was due to the negligence of the defendants. He states that on the 6th day of February, he, with a large number of others, was at work at the foot of a high bank, and that they were acting under the immediate direction of the defendants, who were at the time at work cutting in at the top of the hill to loosen the earth so that it might fall. It did fall suddenly that a large mass fell upon the plaintiff, crushed him to the earth, and rendered him for a time wholly unconscious. He was brought to Omaha on the same night and placed in the care of the sisters at St. Joseph's hospital where he has been most of the time since. In addition to the bruises, etc., received at the time, both thighs were fractured and the lower portion of the right leg broken in two places, so that he is now an inch shorter in stature than previous to the accident. His loss of time and wages put at $300, his expenses at $500 and damages for being made a cripple for life at $15,000, making a total of $15,800. Parke Godwin is attorney for the plaintiff.

A BUSTED COMMUNITY.

The Dens of the Demi-Monde Being Rapidly Vacated—A Deluge of "Dreemakers" Looked For. The city marshal is actively carrying out the order recently made by the city council compelling the closing up of houses of ill-fame on Tenth street. The resolution introduced by Councilman Dallone calls for the enforcement of "Chapter Sixteen," with strict adherence to the intent of the law therein contained in regard to "disorderly houses." The substance of this chapter was published in THE BEE.

Notices have been served on all the frail ones residing in the limits designated by the resolution, which are Eleventh and Twelfth streets between Douglas and Davenport, to vacate their premises at once, and the notice was accompanied with the information that the refusal to move would be liable to result in their arrest. A number of the women have already moved away and the remainder are being urged to follow. The largest of the biggest houses of the kind on 12th street has discharged her girls and closed up. There are two other houses of the better class in the district named, and what action they will take is unknown.

The city officials do not regard this action as a wise course to pursue, and say that in the event of the women refusing to vacate, they could do so. As it was the payment of the monthly fine was voluntary, and if they will not plead guilty to the charge of prostitution, it would be a difficult matter to prove the thing on them, except by circumstantial evidence.

Another difficulty comes up in the fact that they will now be scattered in all parts of the city and be an eyesore to many, while by confining their presence to one locality this would be avoided. The women are now renting rooms in different parts of the city, and say they will open up in the "dress making" business, the old dodge. Others are migrating to the vicinity of the road house, and a city official said to a reporter that if they should rendezvous in that quarter, it would be the old story of fifteen years ago, when a robbery or murder was committed almost daily occurrence. The city attorney has been consulted as to what can be done with those who refuse and who have paid their monthly fine, and is looking up the law on the subject. Council Bluffs may reap the benefit of the raid yet.

Death of Alfred Cox.

The sad news has just reached this city of the death of Alfred Cox, a brother of Mr. H. E. Cox, foreman for Milton Rogers & Son, which occurred at Las Vegas, New Mexico, on Sunday, May 28th, at 10 a. m.

The deceased formerly lived in this city, learning the tinner's trade, and working for a time under his brother. He left Omaha for New Mexico about two months ago, leaving his wife and child in this city. His illness was but four days duration, and was that dreadful disease the black measles. At the time of his death, Mr. Cox was but 29 years of age, and had every reason to look forward to a long life of usefulness and comfort to his family. The remains were buried at Las Vegas, the law prohibiting express companies from transporting them under such circumstances.

Base Ball.

A game of base ball was played on Thursday afternoon between two picked nines of the B. & M. headquarters. The contest was west of the regular grounds on Eighteenth street, the game lasting from 2:40 to 4:15 p. m. The two nines were as follows:

First Nine. E. O. Brandt, A. L. Goodman, Wm. Foreman, W. A. Brown, Joseph Hannan, C. R. Davidson, Byron D. Bent, J. T. Fennell, Geo. J. Sterndorf, L. D. Jensen, Arthur B. Smith, John Thomson, C. Creary, W. T. Lewis, Chas. Creighton, W. E. Van Tuyl.

The first nine won the game by a score of 19 to 6. E. O. Brandt was captain of the winning nine, and L. D. Jensen of the losers. Seven innings were played.

TERRIFIC GAS EXPLOSION

Boyd's Opera House Shaken from Center to Circumference.

The Lunar Railroad, Built on Wind and Propelled by the Keely Motor

About eight o'clock last evening a handful of people who happened to drop into Boyd's opera house, were brilliantly lighted up regardless of expense, were taken off their feet by a stunning explosion of gas that emanated from the self-acting, rotary motion gas-holder, known familiarly as John Pope Hardnut. Fortunately the audience were prepared for the grand display of explosives, and no serious alarm was felt for their safety.

The only person in imminent danger was Little Mac, who stood upon the stage and uncorked the escape valve. In a Pickwickian sense McDonough rose to the full majesty of his sublime hour, and addressing the empty chairs, before him said that he felt highly complimented in confronting such a brilliant, intelligent and vast concourse. He warned such as were present that he would not be responsible for anything that might happen, as he did not know just exactly what effect compressed hydrogen had upon their systems, but if any of their remains were picked up this morning in the vicinity of the city, he would guarantee them a decent burial and the proper memorial service on decoration day.

Presently the whole house began to shake, and away to and fro on its rock foundations. The empty opera chairs were holding on tight to the floor to keep from playing the trapeze game. The stage proper was surging to and fro like the billows of the sea, and above was heard a roar like the catars at Niagara.

McDonough began to look very uncomfortable and wished he was home, and Pat McArdle, who was caught on the fly and stationed as a sentry back of the gas meter took French leave from his post as a matter of safety.

From those who witnessed the explosion we learn that the rip-roaring projector of the great lunar railroad, the Sierra Nevada, in between the Atlantic and the Pacific drew heavily on Julia Verne and Munchausen.

With $250,000 at his back and the Keely motor in his front he double-tracked the distance between New York and Omaha in ten seconds, and landing on the crest of the Rocky mountains, ten thousand feet above the sea level, built a viaduct from the Sierra Nevada in five minutes, and landed safely with one hundred train loads of dead-head passengers at Frisco and the Golden Gate in less time than it takes to cross the Big Muddy between Omaha and Lillianville.

As president of the United Labor league of America, an organization made up of briefless lawyers, and men who live by their wits, he had at his disposal more millions than the Rothschilds, Vanderbilts and Goulds. Pat O. Hawes, General O'Brien, E. M. Bartlett, and other capitalists that are associated with him in this gigantic project, generously placed all their millions at the disposal of the workmen of America, who were to control and operate the concern under the directions of the great cypripis, regardless of expense and luxury.

As a matter of safety, Mayor Boyd had the fire department on hand, and under his personal supervision he took all the remains after the explosion to Coroner Jacobs.

At midnight a coroner's jury was impelled with Dr. Conkling as foreman. In two seconds and a half the jury brought out a verdict of "natural death. Among the thirty-five victims of suffocation by gas poor McDonough was the most awfully awful. His features were almost as black and blue as when Hanscom held him by the beard a few hours previous, and his cheeks were as swollen as if he had just got over one of his fits of poetic phrenzy.

It was a sad, solemn and melancholy spectacle, and prominent among the mourners were John M. Thurston, Frank Walters, Gen. O'Brien and the darkey who had been hid in John Pope Hardnut's wood pile.

HOBBIES

Nat Goodwin and Eliza Weatherby's Frolics. One of the popular companies which come and go with the changing seasons for the delectation of the amusement lovers of the country generally is the "Frolics," with Nat Goodwin and Eliza Weatherby. The party will give "Hobbies" at the opera house to-night and at the Saturday matinee, and "The Member for Slocum" Saturday night. The sale of seats has already begun. The Washington Post says: "Those of the Washington post-goers who saw Nat Goodwin in his great play of 'Hobbies' last season will be delighted to learn that in deference to a desire which could not be ignored he has consented to vary his programme and give the funniest and wildest of all farces for the remaining three performances of this week, namely: to-night, to-morrow night, and at the matinee to-morrow afternoon. 'The Member for Slocum' has proven entertaining, but somehow the Nat Goodwin we all admire so much does not show himself so entirely to our satisfaction as in good old 'Hobbies,' with his paralyzing limitations of the leading actors of the day and all the rest of the comedy business, which he has become so famous. It has the fire of real genius, and we know we gratify our readers, who, much as they have enjoyed the new play, will hail this change of bill when we announce it."

PATIENCE.

On Monday evening the Comley-Barton Opera company will appear for the second time this season at Boyd's. The popular comic opera, "Patience," will be reproduced this time, in which the apostle of aestheticism is as well taken off. The Denver Tribune of yesterday says:

"The Comley-Barton Opera company made its first appearance in Colorado at the Grand opera house last evening. It is beyond the peradventure of a doubt the best organization of the kind that has ever visited Denver. During the season we have had the Melville troupe, the Oates gang and other similar outfits, but none which could in the slightest degree compare with the Comley-Barton company. The performance of 'Madame Favart' last night was in every respect an excellent one. The cast was very evenly balanced, the choruses were good and the orchestra excellent. The good and the stage mounting superb. Judging from the initial performance, Messrs. Howson and Bell are the only members of the company who can fairly lay claim to greatness (this term is used in a strictly theatrical sense), yet each principal in the cast was thoroughly good as to quite disdain harsh criticism. Those who failed to see 'Madame Favart' last evening missed a treat of unusual excellence; but the opera is to be repeated Friday night and surely all will be there to see and hear. This evening the favorite 'Olivette' will be given to an overflowing house. The receipts last night exceeded nine hundred dollars; the week's business will be enormous."

MOONLIGHT MIRTH MAKERS

A Highly Successful Lawn Party at Hanscom Park. The private lawn party held at Hanscom park Wednesday proved a grand success both socially and financially, and great credit is due to Mr. Harry B. Hunt and the other members of the committee of arrangements for their untiring energy and zeal which they exercised in rendering this pleasant affair so successful.

The indefatigable Prof. Steinhilber, with his skilled band of artists, furnished the music and Mrs. Moore aided by Mrs. Friess and the two Misses Meany, superintended the refreshment department.

This is the first entertainment that the committee have started, and as they attained such a large amount of success they intend getting up some more very shortly.

The party although somewhat large, was nevertheless quite select. Among those present we observed the Misses Meany, the Misses Koster, Miss Jennie Peyton, Mrs. Friess, Miss Buchanan, the Misses McMahons, and Messrs. H. B. Hunt, F. M. Moore, J. A. Throckmole, J. R.
