EXIRA, IOWA.

The Metropolis of Audubon County Flourishing.

Its Location, Hotels, Business Mer. and Other Notes.

Correspondence of the Bee. EXIRA, Ia., May 27, 1882.-The own of Exira is ten miles south of Audubon, and seven miles north of the centre of the south line of the county; was the county seat of Audubon county until its younger rival captured the prize. The town at present contains about 700 people, has a good graded school, a large school building of beautiful and modern design and finish, and with an imposing appear- state. The capital provided is $8,000. ance that almost startles the traveler wno has wandered among these prairie

There are four good churches, two mills, elevators, hotel, a good live newspaper with an independent democratic-amendment label, and a dozen or two of good stores, besides the usual number of shops, restaurants and town thought they had a good positic n and they held it, leaving the railroad nearly a mile away across the Nishna flats. A good bus line is promptly on hand, however, to transfer the travelers and their baggago.

The city was laid out with a public square, and the principal business houses clustering about it. The ground is diversified, it being on the first explored, a naturally rolling first explored, a naturally rolling prairie, giving good drainage and variety, without the inconvenience of treublesome grades. One of the pe-culiar features of this town is the large shade trees which have been planted by the early settlers, and constantly protected by the thrifty burgers. The principal hotel ac-commodations are offered at the HOUSTON HOUSE, by Mr George Calph, who seems to take as much pride in the monster tree at his front door, and which comes up through his open portico, as he does in entertaining a candidate for congress.

The principal dry goods and general merchandise house is that of

at the nerthwest corner of the park.

Mr. Hallock has another universal store at Oakfield, which is the largest business house there, as it is here, and handles a large amount of stock. Mr. Hallock is also one of the "granger kings," for as a farmer he is ranked among the few who spread over a large territory, and nobody knows the end of his possessions. He has 700 acres in corn this year, fed several hundred head of cattle during the winter, and has 300 hogs in the field, which he is feeding for immediate market, and other "farm Electrician items" in proportion.

The store at this place is probably the largest and finest in the town and the stock is complete, while Mr. T. E. Cotton, the superintendent of all this business, is located here and is a thorough and cultivated business gen-

The proprietors of the bank. MESSES. WHITNEY AND VAN GORDER, Office Cor. Broadway & Glenn Ave. are also the owners of the Audubon county bank, at the county seat, and Mr. E. Watson, the cashier and managing officer here, is an experienced and efficient gentleman who seems to be an important spoke in the business wheel of the town. This bank was established in 1876, is prepared for a general banking business, is just fit-ting up its rooms with modern taste and convenience, and has a large business with the stock and grain dealers. J. B. CONNEARDY seems to have the leading grocery house and a good situation, and we judge from what we saw in our short visit that he has a large trade from this great, rich farming region that surrounds this well known and substantial town.

THE DEFENDER is edited and published by Milliman & Dicus, two practical newspaper men, who are earnest workers, and independent enough to face the music like the "Drummer boy of Shiloh," and offer to the public a carefully edited and well patronized weekly that now and then "stirs up the animals" for a change. Capt. Chas. Stuart's elevator and lumber yard here is only one link of his chain of business, which is quite large here; while the Bateman Bros. have another fine elevator and a large business. The mills, the lumber yards and the farm implement houses are doing a large business, and thereseems to be a busy throng going and coming from the great drug store and music house of H. S. Burton.

Proprietor of abstracts of Pottawattamie ounty. Office corner of Broadway and Main treets, Cauncil Bluffs, Iowa. JOHN STEINER, M. D., J. M. RENDLEMAN, M. D., is one of the old practitioners, and for many years has held the post of the "leading physician" of the county, and his name is known in every family and by every fireside in this and the joining counties.

Exira continues to grow, for business te good and quite a number of fine buildings are to be put up this season. Trade is good. Crops everywhere are looking unusually promis-ing, and everybody is happy.
