TRAVELING SHAD.
How a Million and a Half of the Fish Were Transported to Missouri and Texas Waters.
A carload of white shad arrived at St. Louis from the United States government hatcheries at Washington. There were one million and a half of shad in the car. They were in milk cans, each of which it was estimated held twenty thousand fish. The car containing them, says the Globe Democrat, remained in the Union depot yard until last evening, when it was started over the Iron Mountain road for Texas. Last night no less than 250,000 of the fish were dropped into the Black and Big rivers, in this state. The remainder of the lot go to Texas, where, at Jefferson, half will be deposited in the Red river, and at Fort Worth, Tex., where the remainder will be given their freedom in the Trinity river. Only a little white shad were deposited in the Ouachita river, near Arkadelphia, Ark., and these fish are now being caught in that stream near Hot Springs. The car which brought these fish to Missouri's waters yesterday was fitted up in good style. In the middle of the car the cans of fish were stored. One end of the car was used as a dinner-room and kitchen, and the other end as a sitting and bed room. The car and its contents were in charge of G. H. Moore, G. C. Sherman and A. S. Mayo, messengers appointed by the United States fish commission to see to the faithful distribution of the fish. This is the second trip of this corps this season, and they will from this time forward remain busy at work, for congress has taken such an interest in the matter that the commissioners are enabled to supply requests as fast as the delivery can be made. To facilitate the work a new car for this special traffic is being built by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company, and as soon as it is upon the road Missouri's rivers will receive one million of the white shad. Just now, besides the car mentioned above, cans of young fish are being sent to various points in regular baggage-cars and by special messengers. These shad are considered the best fish in the market. The lot which passed through here yesterday left Washington Saturday night. They were taken from the United States hatcheries near the navy yard at Washington. The female shad when ready to spawn are taken in nets and the eggs are taken from them. These eggs are spread out, and afterward the melt from the male shad is spread over them. Almost instantly after the melt is spread the eggs begin to swell to about half the size of a pea. The eggs are then put into crates, placed on ice, and sent to the hatcheries, where, by the constant turning and motion of the Donald McDonald process, in two or four days the fish are hatched. Their heads are then about the size of a small bird-shot, their bodies being like a thread, and about half an inch long. They are placed in cans, from twenty to thirty thousand to the can, according to the size of the latter, and in this way removed to the other rivers. The messengers in charge of yesterday's cargo are the same who brought four thousand German carp and dumped them in the Forest park ponds here last fall. They are hatching the regular German carp at Washington, as well as other fish in season. The carp season commences about the middle of September and ends Oct. 1, and when that time arrives the ponds of carp will be drawn off and thousands of them brought to western waters. To I. G. W. Steedman, of the Missouri fish commission, belongs the credit of this state faring so well in the matter of restocking the rivers, as it is by his efforts that the present lot of fish are added to them. The Iron Mountain railroad has kindly furnished free transportation, as does also the Missouri Pacific, for the fish-car.

THE LIES OF THE SEASON.
What Will Be Fashionable—The Old Favorites.
Brooklyn Eagle.
"What is the style of spring lie this season?" asked a one-eyed man as he dropped down by the exchange editor's side. "Have they retitrated the interconvertible snake, that breaks up into precincts and comes together at the call of the presiding link?"
"Haven't seen anything of it," replied the exchange editor, plunging his shears into the account of a hundred feet and landed a river in a cottonwood grove without disturbing a ripple.
"I'm glad of that," said the one-eyed man, rubbing his hands slowly. "I never liked that lie. It always seemed far fetched and unwholesome; besides, you couldn't help thinking that a frog might swallow a quorum of the snake and not leave enough to transact business. Did you see anything of that lie about THE DRAGON OUT IN ILLINOIS, with wings like a corn patch, and a current of brimstone? Is the dragon still this season?"
"Haven't struck him yet," answered the editor, eliminating the profanity from a far western account of a mine explosion, in which forty men were blown through the side of a mountain seven miles thick. "If he's around he's flying very low."
"That pleases me, too," smiled the one-eyed man, stroking his chin. "The only objection I ever had to that dragon was the smell. It never sounded reasonable. If he had said he smelled of brimstone and molasses it might have worked in a girl's boarding house as a fair spring lie, but they couldn't fix it to do for men unless they perfumed him with blue pills. It was a great mistake. If you struck any fresh particulars about the sea serpent since the thaw?"
"Too early for him," returned the editor, writing a new head-line to an account of a baby who fell out of a window sixty feet and bounded back without split, bruise, or chip off.
"He'll be around by the 14th of July."
"The 14th of July," murmured the one-eyed man. "I reckon you're right. Yes, you're right; with a head like a barrel and Hospitality.

Detroit Free Press.
Over beyond Strasburg I came upon a farmer sitting on a log in front of a house which I at first took to be a stable, because a mule stood with his head inside, but he was a hard-up man, and no mistake. I dismounted to talk with him about the battlefield of Cross Keys, and after a bit he said: "Stranger, I'd invite you to dinner, but I presume you don't relish dodgers and bacon."
Then we talked a little more about Fremont's trip, and he said: "Stranger, I'd like to feed that hoss, but my old mule has had browse mighty fine to keep on his legs this fall."
Then we talked about Stonewall Jackson and his march up that road, and the farmer branched off with: "Stranger, I would like to offer you a drink of 'sunthin' warmin', but fact is I ain't seen a pint o' whisky since the war."
Then I inquired how far it was to Pt. Republic, and whether the bridge had been rebuilt, and he answered me and added: "Stranger, I do feel as if I orter ask ye to see the fam'ly, but the old woman's down with chills, Sal's off over the ridge, and the fire went out an hour ago."
I mounted my horse and handed him a cigar. That broke him up. He turned it over and over, looked up and down the road and from me to the house, and finally seized my leg and exclaimed: "Stranger, I'm poor and way down and sometimes wicked, but I'm right 'ther' when a man calls my hand! I can't feckly nor warm ye, nor give ye whisky, nor tobacco, but if ye don't git off'n that hoss and come over to the spring and have some water with me, I'll never forgive ye on nirth."
We drank to his luck.

A Georgetown Man Astonished.
From The Washington Republic, May 24.
A Georgetown merchant, who may be called Snipes for short—though that isn't his name—conceived the brilliant idea that he would take a trip over to Washington for the express purpose of seeing the sights. He told a friend that he had never been inside of any of the public buildings, notwithstanding the fact that he had lived in Georgetown since 1837. His friend suggested that it was highly proper that he should begin his tour of inspection at once, and kindly offered to aid him in the start by showing him through the treasury department. The following morning Snipes appeared promptly at his friend's desk at 9 o'clock and they began their trip by visiting the secret service division, where, upon looking through one of the large albums containing photographs of noted criminals, Snipes was suddenly noticed to grasp the arm of his friend, a deathly pallor overspreading his classic brow, and, pointing to a certain photograph, in an excited manner exclaimed: "Great heavens, that's me!" It seems his friend had borrowed from Mr. Snipes a photograph of her beloved husband the day before, and while Snipes was gazing thoughtfully at the picture of Jesse James hanging on the wall his friend had inserted it in the album in the place of one of the counterfeiters. No Georgetown man asks Snipes if he has ever been through the treasury department unless his life is insured.
