The performance went beautifully the applause was liberal, McCullough was playing best. Raymond was the crookedest and most miserly of "Polydors," and the savage intensity he threw into his acting surprised al who imagined he could only play light comedy. All went more than well until "Ignomar" offered himself as a slave to "Polydor" in payment of "Myron's" little account. "What, you? screamed "Polydor," and apparently overcome by the thought, he "took a tumble" and fell upon "Iggomar," ''Ignomar" stepped back in dismay, when "Polydor," on all fours, crept nimbly between his steady legs and tried to climb up on back. The audience "took a tumble" then, and the roof quivered and the walls shook with roars of laughter. "D-n you," groated "Ingomar," sotto voce, "if I only had you at the wings?' But "Polydor" nimbly eluded his grasp, and, knocking right and left, the dozen supes, who were of the proscenium. Here he clung, and, to make matters, worse, grinned cheerfully at the pursuers he had escaped, and rapidly worked the string of a trick wir, the long hair of which fispped up and down in the most ludicruos fashion. It was impossible for the play to proceed, and the curtain was rung down, leav ing "Polydor" still on his lofty perch, while the audience laughed and shouted itself hoarse. And this is the reason why Mr. McCullough said, "No. sir, never again!" to Mr. Raymond's

The explanation of Mac's refusal to have explanation of Mac's refusal to have Raymoud in the cast is given as follows: called "La Force et La Lamiere," and this company sold the rights for Great Britain and its colonies to an English company. Meantime M. Simon Philippart, who was managing director of the company" La Force et La Lumiere," being absent from Paris, intrusted the management to M. Ernest Volckmar. The latter soon acquired full knowledge of the Faure accumulator, and took out patents for the same process. Then M. Volckmar went to England and, associating with himself a Mr. Sellon, sold his patent to an English company called the "Electric Power Storage Company." The capital of this company was no less than $4,000,000, out of which the vendors of the so-called patent, Messre. Volckmar and Sellon, received $150,000 in cash and 30.000 fully paid up $50 shares, making altogether $1,650,000 for a patent the validity of which they ent the validity of which they distinctly refused to guarantee! In order to give the shares of this company some value it was necessary to do something, and a favorite dodge with these company premoters was re-sorted to. Subsidiary companies to purchase the patent for different countries or districts were started. first was called the Indian and Oriental Electrical Storage and Works Company, and has acapital of $2,000,-000. It acquired for the modest sum and left, the dozen supes, who were on as the army, he skipped to the frent of the stage and climbed up out of the proscenium. Here he clung, and, to make matters latter company is curious. While Messrs. Velckmar and Sellon were acting for themselves they refused to guarantee the validity of their patent, When acting for the parent company in its contract with the Indian Company they insert this clause: "One of the conditions of purchase is an indemnity against any claim for infringement of patents which may be made within a defined period!"

How needful it is for the newspaper press to warn the public against this kind of mushroom companies is evident from the fact that the shares of the present company are now selling at a premium, although the validity of the patents is a subject of litigation both in France and England. On the London Stock Excha ge the peculation in the shares of the various electric-light companies is enormous. Te ms which a few mouths ago were to most people mere scientiison is a name known as well as the were taking the applications and money. Many persons rolled up Wednesday afternoon seven men were drowned in the Alta mine at Gold Hill, Nev., by the bulkhead on front, and then went away, not even asking for a receipt for their money. Electric scrip on which £4 had been paid has been selling at £30, and £10 paid-up shares have been selling at £60.

The whole question of the success cheaply the light can be produced, and shareholders will be delighted to learn that Mr. Lane Fox, when speaking at ciety, recently pledged his acientific credit that "a 150-candle light would soon be produced by electricity, at the cost of a twelve-candle light of gas—namely, a farthing an hour." Political economists, who were lamenting the cossation of the construction of railroads, are finding some consolation in the new industry which the use of electricity must bring about.
