It is held by many writers and orators that the only use of argument is to counteract the force of debate held by them I leave for my readers to judge. As statistics will most assuredly prove, the past history of his theory xplatus itself to all those who can read. I do not wish to make an attack on the principles of church morality, but will say that while he attacks my principles and sets me down as one of the bad elements and an advocate of crime and immorality, he must accord to me the privilege of de-fense, and also expect to have his side of the question attacked. Therefore, nyseif and the reverend gentleman cannot agree as to what would be the best course to pursue to bring about the greatest results, that would promote the morality of the community to the greatest extent. His alleges that crime is committed to a greater extent under the traffic of alcohol and brought up with 'em, if you want a beer than under any other method, but I say he is under a mistake, and shall ask the reverend gentleman to compare statistics with me, to prove man in South Carolina who can talk his theory. America is surely a blessed land and the unity of church and state; sle gift of nature, sufficient esuse for the commonwealth of Iowa will lose indirect benefits, grans is worth more thousands of dollars in revenue if the to the world than all the other cereal that eight away from us because they mistake. We can afford to take our best soil for projuction of this crop; and this is the real plan for bringing them up to the highest fertility. In gi7ss the whole west finds its best friend. Without the rich and abundant grasses of the plants, the hondreds and thousands of cattle, upon whica so many people depend for a living, and which go to feed so many thousands of people, would never had existence. The hap crop alone is said to surpass in money value any other single crop in the land. Since the introduction of the hay press, hay is baled and sent to markets hundreds of miles distant, and the farmer who

What Creameries Do. Iowa City Pre-s. About this time last year the Press was urging a reform in the butter market in respect to quality and prices. That reform has come in the creameries. This summer thousands of cows whose cream could not be properly converted at home for the lack of better knowledge or facilities will pour their treasures into the creamery. The result will be, it is true, a higher price for butter, but a reliably higher quality also, and a great profit to farmers. Now w want the farmers to make the profit As they are prosperous we all gan something. As they fail in making profit we all lose something. So le the good work go on. Multiply the creameries and bring on your Jerseys and Holsteins; we want more cheese and butter to the cow, we want farmers to learn the difference between keeping cows which on the same feed and care produce $50 and $60 per head per annum than those that produce only $15 to $20. Breed and care will put upon every dairy farm cows that will give per year 12,000 to 18,000 pounds of milk. Speed the day. In the creameries here and to belie the germs of lighter labor, better homes, less debt, more leisure, refine ment and the things ineffable which belong in the farmer's life where prosperity smiles upon his flocks and

Poultry for Farmers.

There is a frequently arising inquiry among farmers as to what breed of poultry is best adapted to their wants, nor is this query confined to fowls, but is often put concerning catde, swine and the varieties of fruit. Now, the fact must be patent to all observing people that no breed or vari for some particular purpose, and the We walked down to the edge of the poultry raiser must determine what but the average farmer, who keeps wants a few boilers, a roast now and then, a few cockerels for the poultry buyer, and eggs all through the year for the kitchen, and a surplus to keep down the debtor side of the grocery account, does not have the knowledge pers for years. The question is not capable of one answer only, for all tude, all do not feed alike or have warm poultry houses in winter. Some feed wholly on core, except what the vigilant "biddy" gets from the hog trough, and quite often the roof to that class of tarmers.
