

STATE JOTTINGS.

There is only one soda fountain in Pawnee City.

These fifty of the legal voters of Gosper county have petitioned the commissioners to call a county seat election.

A young man of Blair says: "The play of the 'Hidden Hand' is a good one, but the 'hidden hand' is more interesting to him."

The West Point Republican of last week contained an stray notice, a part of which reads as follows: "A gray mare, half horse, with sore on left shoulder."

The Otse lands cannot come into market this fall, as the bill has been amended by the house and will be concurred in by the senate, which will not be accomplished this session of congress.

Deputy Treasurer Jay paid on Saturday the last registered warrant on the county general fund. This is the first time since the county was organized that the register has been clear.—Osceola Record.

Thomas Clark, a six-year-old son of Mr. John Clark while playing Tuesday evening, stepped upon a sharp stick that ran into the ball of his foot two inches. The parents tried to pull the stick out and could not, but broke it off in the foot. Dr. Holladay was called, and after some cutting extracted the stick which was large as a pipe stem and an inch and a half long.—Brownville Granger.

A boy, about fourteen years of age, employed at Frank Kent's, a few miles southeast of town, mysteriously disappeared about two weeks ago. He started in the morning to go fishing in the river, taking his dinner with him and intending to stay all day. He has not been seen or heard of since. The boy was a stranger here and had been working for Mr. Kent about six weeks. He was a very quiet and well behaved boy, and was apparently well pleased with his home. Not having any reason for running away, Mr. Kent concludes the boy must have been drowned.—Ibid Clond Argus.

On last Friday afternoon, quite a little excitement was caused in town by the discovery of a peculiar shaped cloud in the northeast, which was recognized by many to be a water-spout. From T. H. Saunders we learn that it was a tornado. It passed over the northwest corner of Butler county, about four miles east of Mr. Saunders' farm, which is near the line. A cow was carried bodily for some little distance by the wind and killed. In some places the wind cut a furrow through plowed land to the depth of three or four feet. It came in contact with no buildings or we might be called upon to chronicle something of a serious nature.—Osceola Record.

Henry Wagner, living four miles southeast of town, was alarmed about 9 o'clock Monday night by the flare of fire, upon getting up he discovered his shed containing his machinery to be on fire. It was covered with cane pumice, and was set on fire by some one. His horses were staked out and one was missing at time of fire. This horse returned about three hours after the fire coming from the west, well warmed up and evidently it had been ridden hard. The presumption is the stinger that set out this fire rode the horse, and was enough to get out of danger of pursuit. Henry lost a self-binder, hay rake and seeder. This loss came heavy, as the insurance will cover it, and the amount of money was worth at the time of fire, and he will have to buy the same new, and pay the difference.—Blue Hill Times.

A few nights since, near New Castle, Dixon county, an attempt was made to rob the residence of a widow woman, Mrs. L. S. Bishop. She happened to be away from home leaving two small children in charge of two young ladies. After the ladies had retired for the night, an unknown man broke into the house, and entering the sleeping room of the girls caught one of them by the hair, and attempted to force the other by the throat. The girls screamed and fought, and the fellow becoming frightened by the racket they made jumped out of a window and escaped. He was disguised by having a cloth over his face and a sheet wrapped around his form. A few days previous Mrs. Bishop drew a sum of money from the bank at New Castle, and it is presumed that this is what he was after.—St. Louis Journal.

Fred. Worth, the deaf and dumb printer of the Volkshat of Omaha, came near taking up his journey to that mysterious country from whose bourns no traveler returns, on last Friday while bathing in the mill race. He jumped into water over his head and became unable to swim, would have drowned, had not assistance been close at hand. As it was he had a narrow escape. Willie Malchow went first to his assistance, but Worth with that tenacious peculiar to crowning people grabbed young Malchow and they both went down. Henry Bass, a stout-limbed boy, then jumped into the water and, at a signal from Worth, got both to land after Worth had gone down for the third time. The German printer will doubtless be more careful the next time he goes swimming.—West Point Republican.

"The people of Stanton had the pleasure, though tinged with slight fear, of watching the formation and dissolution of a small cyclone on last Friday afternoon at about four o'clock. A black cloud hovered about three miles south and a little east of town, and apparently was the meeting point of two air currents. The attention of the observers was kept riveted on this cloud by noticing that a black ball was whirling in the clouds, and that it grew denser each second. Shortly this ball settled to the lower edge of the cloud, and it assumed the appearance of a funnel, gradually lengthening out toward the ground. Several times it drew back toward the cloud, and would then stretch out again longer than before. Moving gracefully through the air, it reminded every one of an elephant's trunk. It extended downward probably sixty feet, and was within one hundred feet of the ground. The end appeared to be revolving in a spiral form, and very rapidly. Even about one-third of it became detached and lit in among the hills, sending up a great column of dust, and the remainder twisted itself back into the cloud. The storm was within half a mile of the black monster, and such it really appeared, heard the roaring sound which characterized the cyclone, and immediately after the detached portion struck the ground the wind was so strong that he thought it would capsize his buggy. It was a grand sight, and one that will always be remembered.—Register.

Farm, Garden and Orchard. J. J. Pettit showed us his 101 fine wool sheep 1,000 pounds or nearly 10 to the head.—Blair Republican.

The Columbus Creamery is turning out from four to six hundred pails of butter a day, and expect in a few weeks to increase to one thousand pounds a day.

A severe hail storm did considerable damage to crops in the northwest part of Platte county. St. Bernard and Humphrey being in its course. The extent of damage is not yet known.

T. M. Gibson and Carlos Gibson arrived a short time ago from New Mexico with about ten acres of sheep. They are having them sheared at their ranch northeast of Wilsonville.—Beaver City Times.

The hardest "kickers" we have heard of lately are those farmers who sold their corn last fall for 30 cents a bushel and are now paying 60 cents for the same to feed.—Madison Chronicle.

Martin Anderson sends us in a sample of six feet and one half inches high. This was raised on the divide lands. Mr. G. A. Hunter sent us a little letter with a sample six feet eleven inches high. Next.—Indianapolis Courier.

J. L. Frame beats the world on potatoes. He planted about two-thirds of a bushel, and they, while not appearing above the ground, consequently are big proof, have good large round potatoes formed already.—Ibid Clond Argus.

The barbers say it doesn't take half as long to shave a farmer as it did a month ago. The agricultural gentleman's face has shortened six inches if we are to believe the tonsorial artist, and all on account of the splendid show for corn.—Pawnee Enterprise.

Several farmers are trying for the $25 premium offered by the directors of the Pawnee County Agricultural and Mechanical association for the best five acres of corn, raised in the county during this season. There ought to be a score or more of competitors.—Pawnee Enterprise.

Judging from a sample branch pruned from a peach tree in J. D. Schrock's orchard, no peach crop will be enormous. In one twig a foot long there were twelve well formed and good-sized peaches. Mr. Schrock has about two hundred trees and all loaded with fruit.—Blue Springs Motor.

It is a novel sight to see hogs herded like cattle and sheep; but the high price of corn has driven many farmers to try the experiment, and we are glad to state it is proving very successful. Hogs are doing nicely on the range, thus testifying to the fact that "all flesh is grass."—Bloomington Gazette.

Probably the honor of having the best garden in Furnas county belongs to Jake Struve, at Oxford, who has about twenty acres planted to all kinds of vegetables, which are looking remarkably well. He has also planted a large quantity of fruit trees and shrubbery, all of which are being artificially watered by his windmill.—Arapahoe Pioneer.

Sheep-shearing is now in full blast in our country, and reports from flock owners are to the effect that fleeces will average a trifle lighter than previous years in consequence of so much wet, cold weather. Our wool clip for this season will aggregate fully one hundred and fifty thousand pounds, and next year, it is predicted, will double the above amount.—Arapahoe Pioneer.

How much will corn grow in twenty-four hours, with such weather as we had last week? A farmer who has experimented, says three inches. Another gives as a good way to measure corn the following: Grasp the stalk of corn in the hand, draw it up to its full height, cut off square the tips of all leaves. The two outside leaves will not grow in and in twenty-four hours you can repeat the operation and find out just how much the stalk has grown by comparing the inside leaves that have grown with the outside that have not.—Pawnee Enterprise.

M. S. Malony, of Belvidere, Ill., who is interested in a large sheep ranch a few miles southeast of town, came in Monday night. He is enthusiastic over the crop prospect in Nebraska and thinks Nebraska farmers ought to be the happiest mortals on earth. Large districts in Illinois and Indiana are now being ravaged by the red cloud of the Arcus will remember that Mr. Malony last winter had a large silo constructed on his sheep ranch and he is here for the purpose of examining the structure and directing some details about filling it. He has purchased the machinery for cutting the ensilage, its capacity being ten tons per hour. He thinks 50 cents per ton will cover the cost of the ensilage in the silo. Mr. M. has thoroughly investigated the subject of ensilage and of his ultimate success with the experiment here, we have little doubt.—Red Cloud Argus.

Chas. Thompson, Franklin street, Buffalo, N. Y., has suffered for a long time with constipation, and tried almost every purgative advertised, but only resulting in temporary relief, and after "constipation" had more aggravated, I was told about your SPRING BLOSSOM and tried it, I can now say I am cured, and though some months have elapsed, still remain so. I shall, however, always keep some on hand in case of complaint recurring." Price 50 cents; trial bottle 10 cents.

NEBRASKA CITY. A Town With One Railroad—Its Advantages and Disadvantages.

Correspondence of The Bee. NEBRASKA CITY, June 26.—Nebraska City is recognized as one of the old and reliable towns in the state and this is too well known to need any description. Depending largely upon the country for its support it is at this time of the year rather quiet. Farmers are too busy to go to town if it can be avoided. After the crops are harvested Nebraska City always presents a lively appearance. The older portion of the city built nearer the river is slowly being deserted, while the business center is gradually changing. The old stores are being deserted, and in their place we find costly structures of brick farther up town. As a stranger enters the city from the depot he first sees these deserted stores and in at once convinced that Nebraska City is going backward, but he would think differently if he would understand that the places have been left for more commodious places of business farther up town. As one passes up Main street and sees the old Seymour House, with its broken windows and a general appearance of decay prevailing it, it seems like the skeleton of departed prosperity. On the contrary it points with pride to its successor, the magnificent brick structure farther up town, known as the Grand Central hotel.

It is unfortunate that the railroad depot, which is itself a most insignificant building, is so located that visitors from the city introduced to the poorest part of the city.

Considerable building is going on and several new firms have started within the past six months. Among these is the firm of Butt & Brauer, who have opened a well stocked furniture store on Main street. As both of these gentlemen were formerly connected with other houses in the same city, they have been able to work up a very fine business.

A hotel known as the Barnum house has been opened at the corner of Main street and Eighth. The location is very convenient and the house is receiving a large patronage.

Business men report trade as being more brisk at present than is usual at this time of the year. The business prospect for this fall is very good.

There is a great deal of talk in the city regarding the inconvenience of crossing the river. Parties wishing to leave the town by the railroad are obliged to cross the river on the railroad transfer to East Nebraska City at an expense of fifty cents. The greatest objection to the system is the time it takes. There is no transfer to the river, and the late train at night and those who cross are obliged to hire a skiff. The inconvenience to traveling men is sometimes very great. The citizens of Nebraska City are making an effort to induce the railroad to put up a new and more commodious depot. It is to be hoped that they will succeed as it will be a great improvement to the city.
