SEYMOUR AT THE PALACE.

ALEXANDRIA, July 14, 8 a. m.—Admiral Seymour has landed and taken possession of what remains of the Ras El Tin palace. He has officially notified his government of the occupation and sent the further information that he has, for the protection of the palace, disabled the guns of the batteries opposite the palace, having spiked those too heavy to overthrow. The guard of Admiral Seymour at the Ras El Tin is composed of a special body of marines.

8:25 A. M.—Fires throughout the city are still burning with great fury.

A CITY OF RUINS.

9 A. M.—Seymour has put a body of marines at work clearing the streets. The khedive was brought ashore by Seymour and is now lodged at Ras-el-Tin, protected by a guard of seven hundred marines.

Seymour pronounced the conduct of the officers and men splendid beyond praise.

11 A. M.—The fires in all parts of Alexandria are burning at this hour with increased fury and spreading rapidly. The city at this hour appears to be beyond all doubt doomed to utter destruction. Nothing can possibly save it. The flames have had their own way now for upward of seventy-four hours. The burning city is like a pile of burning straw. The third part of the town is burned over to almost its entire extent.

MUTILATED BODIES OF CHRISTIANS.

11:15 A. M.—A corps of sailors detached to clear the way through the streets leading to the principal wharves, report finding bodies of christians and Europeans lying everywhere. Most of them are shockingly mutilated and nearly all either charred or scorched. The sailors say the massacre must have been terrible beyond imagination.

SEYMOUR'S NARROW ESCAPE.

LONDON, July 14.—A special cable dated Alexandria, 9:30 a. m., says Admiral Seymour, under instructions of his government, made preparations to land and occupy Alexandria in the interest of the khedive in order to enable him to resume his authority there, and had selected a picked corps of 3,000 men to undertake the task. A party of Egyptians engaged to seek the city in the interest of the khedive, convinced Seymour the plan would result in the massacre of the marines, as Arabi is securely entrenched with 9,000 men just outside of the city, well officered and provisioned, and would make every effort to prevent the landing of troops or to save the city from destruction. Seymour, on receiving this statement from the scouts determined to postpone permanently occupation till he had received further instructions from England and decided to confine his occupation to the Ras El Tin palace, and his efforts to protect the khedive.

THE EGYPTIAN COCK CROWN.

ALEXANDRIA, July 14.—Arabi Bey has 9,000 men outside the city to prevent occupation. Seymour has notified his government that he can land only 3,000 men, and that it would cripple the service of the fleet; that he has postponed landing, waiting for instructions and reinforcements. Arabi Bey is pressing that England can't fight on land, and points to Seymour's inability to occupy Alexandria as proof. He says the European powers refuse to assist England, and that England has so many internal troubles that she cannot raise an army within a year. Arabi is recruiting thousands of Arabs, and tells the Egyptians that there is going to be a great war and a great battle will be fought soon. He says he lost less than a thousand during the bombardment.

THE KHEDIVE SKEWADLES.

The fire has now reached the Arabian quarters. The French consulate building is burned. Six bodies of massacred Europeans were found in its ruins. The marines now occupy the arsenal and custom house gate. Fearing a descent of Arabi the khedive has gone ashore on board the yacht Charlych.

PANIC IN CAIRO.

CAIRO, July 14.—A panic prevails from fear of massacre on the arrival of Arabi's army.

MEETING OF THE TURKISH CABINET.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 14.—At a special meeting of the Turkish grand council several influential members advised immediate armed Turkish intervention in Egypt. Durrahman prime minister, maintained that Arabi should now be treated as a rebel; also that it was useless to send orders to the khedive, as he was powerless to execute them.

IMPOTENT TEWFIK.

ALEXANDRIA, July 14.—The Khedive, after consultation with Seymour, decided it would be safer to return to the fleet in view of the possible attack by Arabi's troops. The Khedive then returned aboard one of the ships, guarded by 500 troops. On arrival he at once issued a proclamation advising the soldiers of Arabi to disband,

The Independent Wolfe.

READING, July 14.—Hon. Chas. S. Wolfe, the leader of the independent movement, addressed local independents this evening. He denied emphatically that the propositions made by the regulars to the independents were identical with what the independents proposed. He declared that the propositions were not made in sincerity, but were a trick of the regulars to have the independents withdraw, so that the machine could control everything.

Zulu.

Turf, Field and Farm, July 7, 1882. In placing this elegantly bred young stallion at the head of his farm, we are inclined to the belief that A. J. Poppleton, of Omaha, Neb., has rounded the key-note of success. Zulu is the product of Col. R. P. Pepper's establishment, South Elkhorn Farm, Frankfort, Ky., in point of strength second to none in the United States, and is by Harold, sire of Maid S, Scoticide, Mattie Graham, etc., out of Miss Davall, by Duval's Manbrino; second dam by Paddy Burns, son of Grey Eagle; third dam by Davy Crockett. Duval's Manbrino was by Mambrino Chief, dam by Imperial Gringo; second dam by Blacknose, son of Modoc. In color Zulu is a bay, was foaled 1879, and is in form and size thoroughly equipped for a first class stock horse and trotter. The farm of Mr. Poppleton is located near Omaha Douglas county, and consists of 1,200 acres.
