TROUBLING THE POOL.
 The Meeting of Freight Officials in Chicago.
 The representatives of the Iowa pool lines here had another meeting in Chicago, the details of which are given by the Times:
 The meeting of Iowa pool lines, for consideration of matters likely to affect the permanency of freight rates, took place at the office of Commissioner Daniels, yesterday. Only freight officials were present. The Burlington was represented by Mr. Ripley and Mr. Morton, the Northwestern by Mr. Wicker, and the Rock Island by Mr. Sage. The meeting resulted from the opening of the St. Paul's Council Bluffs & Chicago line was discussed to the verge of a wrangle.
 The investigation of Commissioner Daniels and Mr. Sage at the western terminus of the pool lines had justified the conclusion that the St. Paul was securing the bulk of the live stock traffic by means other than the cutting of rates. That the greater part of the line stock is being diverted to the non-pool lines was the admitted fact that demanded immediate attention. It was agreed, as a possible means of checking the diversion, to suspend the operation of the "evening up" process, to the extent of permitting such of the shippers as claimed a preference to ship by their favored route. This annuls one of the cardinal rules of the pooling compact.
 There was some objection to the suspension of this provision, on the ground that, without arbitrary equalization, some one of the pool lines would be likely to secure more than an equitable share of the traffic. It was the sense of the meeting that the rates should be maintained until further results could be developed. The opinion was expressed, during the session and afterward, that permanency of rates in the pool is dependent upon the competition between the St. Paul and Sioux City & Pacific. If either cuts its rate upon the other, the pool lines will not be able to preserve their agreed neutrality for a single day. Commissioner Daniels is directed to watch the situation closely.

ORGON'S SALMON FISHERIES.
 How the Fish are Caught, Canned, Cooked and Shipped.
 Correspondence San Francisco Chronicle.
 While wandering about this town—Astoria—upon piles, I strolled into the pioneer cannery establishment of the Columbia river for the purpose of describing the mode of transferring salmon from the boat of the fisherman to the cans and cases packed within steamers or ships bound for an eastern market. The cannery, like each of the thirty-six similar establishments upon the river, extends out into deep water. The fleet of boats arrives in the morning, after fishing all night.
 A hook attached to a rope is fastened in the gills of each fish, and it is hauled up from the boat, counted, and cast in a pile within the cannery.
 The fish is then headed, gutted and washed, passing from hand to hand until it lies piled upon tables, nice, clean and fresh, in pieces long enough to fit into an ordinary pound can. All this in-door work is done by Chin-men. A dozen or more fill the cans to their utmost capacity with chunks of salmon fresh from the water. They pass to a table, where the fish is pressed down by a revolving machine, while a jet of salt water washes the outside of the can. Then they receive a top and are passed to a machine, where they are placed sideways and are rolled down an incline, so that the edge of the top just adjusted passes through a groove filled with hot solder, which seals the head.
 They roll down the incline to three Mongolians, who critically inspect them to see if they have been well soldered. If not they pass to other Mongolians, who finish the soldering. Here they are placed in circular iron trays containing 110 cans, and a Chinaman picks a minute hole in each can for the escape of steam. They are now hoisted by means of chains and machinery and dropped into tanks of boiling water, one tray upon the other, until each tank is filled. They boil slowly for one hour and a quarter.
 Then they are melted by machinery to a dome-shaped steaming-tank of wrought boiler-iron, which holds a thousand cans, and is closed by a cover and secured by bolts and screws, and the cans undergo a steaming process of one hour and a quarter more. On being taken out the air-holes are soldered up, the cans cool, and are passed to two white girls, who rapidly and skillfully paste labels upon them. As they are labeled they pass to Chinamen, who place them in cases, two dozen in a case, nail them up, and they are ready for shipment. They are packed out the wharf to be shipped to San Francisco or Europe. The salmon thus passes from its native element—the waters of the Columbia—into cans and cases within a few hours. No fish is kept over night. The fish thus prepared is the best we get in market, as it never becomes stale and always retains its natural flavor. Everything is scrupulously clean in and about these canneries, as copious applications of water are applied to the work-rooms daily.

Having described the mode of packing on the Columbia river, it will not be out of place to give a brief review of the rise of this immense trade, its present condition, and its future prospects, with some statistical information gathered while in Astoria. The principal salmon canneries of the world are upon the Pacific coast. The Columbia river supplies more salmon to the trade than all other streams in
