A CITY ON A HILL.
 Corn and Politics the Chief Topics of Town Talk.

Progress of Business and Building in Creston.
 Correspondence of THE BEE.
 CRESTON, Ia., September 4, 1882.— At this distance from the Missouri river, the corn is not strong, and will not, even with a good fall, make a fair average crop; but it will, no doubt, make feed for stock even in a bad season.

The democratic convention held here last week nominated Geo. P.
 Williams of this city for judge of this district; P. J. Goss, of Osceola, for prosecuting attorney; and J. W. Fraeland, of Wayne county, for representative from the eighth congressional district.

The Gazette has passed into the hands of C. J. Colby, an old settler of this county, who has called around him a strong staff, and proposed to bring up The Daily Gazette to a standard becoming a growing young town like this "city on a hill"; and among the force we find brother Havens, formerly at the head of the Nonpartisan, and who is making his presence felt on the Gazette, as it was to the reading public while at the Bluffs. Walt Hunsaker as city editor, works up a strong and popular local page, and the office and working force seem cheerful and prosperous. "The Independent American" leads out with a large circular, and has already established itself as a strong county paper, of fearless and independent proclivities, while the Advertiser reflects its wisdom and collected light in sparkling handbills, as of yore.

IMPROVEMENTS
 are noticeable on every side. The bell tower and engine house have been moved off from the public square, and dumped to the northward for awhile, and the calaboose with these is expected to form the trio of city buildings.

There are quite a number of new and elegant brick blocks going up, and among these are J. C. Whipple's block, made of St. Joe brick, and planned with great care; and W. N.
 Kelley's new block across the corner, which has all the modern fashions, and cost $15,000 or $20,000. It has one apartment for photography, with 300 square feet of skylights, and W.
 K. Ball is the architect.
 The Summit house has added on a large new extension, and continues to spread out to the westward as the star of empire takes its way towards Nebraska where so many Iowa people are just now investing. Just west of the Summit the new opera house walls are reaching up to the second story, and across the track the Revier house is another favorite hotel.

KLOAS AND HEMMER
 keep their great flouring mill at work night and day, and make several brands of choice flour, and have just opened a fine stock of flour and feed in the Eagle block, as the pioneer feed store of the city, where they will keep the "all sorts." Their mill has been built three or four years, and they have established themselves as thorough business men, and really doing a strong and good business.
 Grant & Johnson, while legally settling the question of the delivery of a large corn contract, are practically under a cloud and not doing much.
 Meanwhile Dow has taken the corn in his own hands, and is shelling and delivering it to himself.

There is no signs of new railroad shops or car factory, but the county institute has just closed with a large attendance, say 150.

S. L. RUSSELL,
 the adjutant of John A. Rawlins reports of the G. A. R. at this place, post of a young but growing society, and the regular meetings are the first Wednesday of each month. A member of this post, who has several commissions as an army officer during the late unpleasantness, has Jeff Davis' commission during the Mexican war, and has a certificate or commission from the state of Mississippi as member of the confederate congress, and he should be taken under guard, with these, to the next reunion.

"#1"
 Josh Billings says: "There ain't no pi in natural history that has been et more, and that more oft than apple pi, and no medicin can cure indigestion and biliousness had so well as Evans' Blossom." Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents.

FONTANELLE
 A City of 700 Astride the Backbone of Iowa.

Correspondence of THE BEE.
FONTANELLE, Iowa, September 2.
 Edinburgh on the Frith of Forth, for centuries the abode of the Scotch monarchs, at the abbey of Holyrood, is often called the "three-hilled city," but Fontanelle is located thirty miles from Creston, and by rail 140 miles from Omaha, in the southwestern center of Adair county, on the western bank of the Nedaway, and is supposed to contain about 700 souls.

IT IS SITUATED
 a half-mile from the valley and the railroad, on a rolling prairie on a divide between the Father of Waters and the Great Muddy. The European stream called Meander, which is associated with our English word of the same spelling, and that may have given us the word we use and its meaning, because of its crooked course, might find here its counterpart in the railroad stub from Creston, with its northern terminus at Fontanelle. The crooked roads of the mountain regions wind among the hills, and the train passenger often sees but little of the track at once. But here the road seems to follow the highest ground for miles, and as we watch the approaching train from a long distance, surprising to the east and then to the west, as
