THE ANTI-MONOPOLY LEAGUE.

CENTRAL CITY, August 14.

The State Anti-Monopoly League will meet at Hastings, September 27, 1882, in connection with the State Farmers' alliance, for the purpose of putting before the voters of the state an independent state anti-monopoly ticket. All anti-monopoly leagues are requested to call special meetings to elect delegates to attend the convention.

By order of the executive committee.
 H. C. OSWEN, Secy.
 Pres. State Anti-Monopoly League.

Are you booked for the swearing train?

The state board of equalization must be abolished.

Lightning seldom strikes on the twenty first of September.

Make a clean sweep through the state house while you are about it.

Peter Schwegel will furnish the certificate for the next contingent congressmen.

Seeding for congress is almost over, and in some sections harvesting has already begun.

Church Howe is not nominated lieutenant governor he will do something desperate.

Why don't the indicted star route gang retain our Val? He made a powerful plea in congress for Brady and the thieves two years ago.

The Howard county delegation will support anybody for governor who will insure Glen Kendall another term as land commissioner.

N. K. Gause, late from Chemnitz, now feels that he is vindicated. As the blunt barber exclaimed as he boosted his last customer out of the chair—next!

Every republican congressman in Indiana has been renominated by acclamation. Acclamation in Indiana means the full vote of the party convention.

Dorsey and Brady are to be tried again, and the Chicago Times thinks there will be a great rush to get on the jury. There's millions in it.

Omaha is swarming with patriots. Every hotel is filled with candidates who are willing to cast their last vote for a fat office for themselves and friends on the altar of party patriotism.

There is no reason why Glen Kendall should have a second term. Even Governor Furnas had only one term, and he certainly was more deserving and less objectionable.

There are two republican candidates on Fifth congressional district of Minnesota, and a double-header in one of the Wisconsin districts, but the republican state conventions in Minnesota and Wisconsin have not ventured to express an opinion on the title of these candidates.

MR. WALLACE is one of the three members of the present state board of equalization. That board assessed the property of the railroads at less than one-tenth of its value. Will the republican convention endorse such highway robbery by endorsing Mr. Wallace.

The state board of discrimination must be abolished. Will the republican party of Nebraska annul the example of California in pledging itself to abolish all distinctions between the method of assessing the property of individuals and private corporations and the property of railroad corporations.

The Republican calls on the state convention to pass upon the validity of the nomination of rival candidates for congress. If it is the province of the state convention to pass upon the acts of congressional conventions, it would be their duty to pass upon the validity of legislative nominations. There always are a number of legislative districts where two sets of candidates claim regularity. It was so in 1876, but no state convention or state central committee dared to interfere with it, although the legislature involved the election of a United States senator.

THE FATE OF EGYPT.

Rebellion has been strangled in Egypt. Arabi is a prisoner, his chiefs are captives and the authority of the Khedive is acknowledged by his subjects in every portion of the country. The conquest has been completed by England alone, with the Turkish contingent still in Turkey and with the conference of the powers still wrangling over the situation and the attitude to be assumed. The most difficult problem remains to be solved. What does England propose to do with the country now that she is the practical arbiter of its destiny. Its conquest was a matter of Kitchener's difficulty. A twenty minutes skirmish, a bold bayonet charge over the entrenchments at Tel-Eli-Kobir, and the result was accomplished. Disposal of the property thus acquired in a manner which will meet with general approval at home and not too much dissatisfaction abroad. This is the puzzling problem with which Mr. Gladstone and his ministry are now confronted. In England public opinion is divided as to the best method to be pursued. There is a strong party which insists that Egypt must, in effect, be added to the colonial possessions of the Queen by the Porte's suzerainty to the England, or that, failing in this, the control of the canal must be assured by the garrisoning of Port Said, Ismailia and Suez. The first of these propositions could only be carried into effect by direct purchase, while the second involves international difficulties. Another suggestion is made, that Egypt be converted into a Mediterranean Belgium, whose national existence shall be assured by the mutual consent of the powers and in which European interests in the canal should be strictly guarded. All classes agree that the control which the British government has acquired in the country through which the canal passes must be strengthened. The war has cost great effort and has involved a heavy expense bill. England does not propose that it's results shall be thrown away. She demands compensation in influence or territory, and Mr. Gladstone cannot well afford to ignore the universal sentiment.

But if the difficulties are great at home they are far more imposing abroad. Evident rivalry among the Powers will not lack idly on while England strengthens her control over one of the great outlets of the Orient. Her armed guardianship of the Mediterranean has had continental cabinets for years. Russia will protest against any acquisition of territory by her rival in Asia, which will give her the veto over the passage of her ironclads toward India. France still claims her rights as twin protector of the canal. Turkey will never consent to give up without force control of the land of the Pharaohs and the Sultan himself as the head of the Mohammedan world cannot resign his supremacy in the Nile valley without endangering his control over his Arab subjects. The "balance of power" argument is yet to be considered, and there is but little doubt that the old bugbear of the "European equilibrium" would at once rise were annexation even seriously proposed.

These are a few of the difficulties which now face Mr. Gladstone. How will he meet them? All Europe is interested in his reply.

A WALL STREET rumor announces that Jay Gould's immediate retirement from active stock jobbing operations. The public is informed that the great railroad mogul is to devote himself only to "legitimate investments," to the presidency of the Western Union and to the supervision of his fortune, which he estimates at $100,000,000. It is impossible to know whether the announcement is based on facts, or whether it is only another rumormongering Wall street shark to gather the lambs to the fold for the shearing. Three times in years past the same rumor has obtained on the street, and three times it has been followed by a heavy stock jobbing operation which made the floor of the exchange a pandemonium and ruined hundreds of small investors who credited it. If the accumulation of wealth has been Gould's object he can find no better time for retirement than the present. With the sole exception of Vanderbilt he is probably the wealthiest man on the globe. Beginning life as a penniless rat trader, by the careful disregard of the leading principles of an upright business career he has amassed a fortune which places him a prince of millionaires.

If there has been another object of Gould's life he has acquired that also. Money is power. The possibilities to a man of Gould's immense fortune are practically limitless. That power he has employed up to the present time in adding to his gains through the purchase of congressmen and legislators and the bold-faced bribery of judges and officers of justice. With no personal ambition for political honors he has used his means to aid his tools in securing offices of honor and trust only as a means of abetting his scheme of jobbing and plunder. Perhaps, all things being taken into consideration, there is no better time than the present for the great stock manipulator to leave the arena of aggressive stock speculation. The

BAR GAINS,

NOTED BUT UNTILLED WOMAN.

NOTED BUT UNTILLED WOMAN. (From the Boston Globe.)

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Bear Friend of Women," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-long study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of it.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Embrision, irregular and painful menstruation, All Obstinate Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, Retention, nervous all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Headache, Nausea, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, resting pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only 25 cents per bottle for 25, and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as a remedial tonic.

"Mrs. Pinkham's 'Liberator' says our writer, 'are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the Liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in the special line and holds fair to equal the Compound in its popularity."

All most respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose noble mission it is to do good to others.
