TAKING POISON.

A Man Tires of Living But Still Lingers Here.

A man named Samuel Dobson, living on Third avenue, took a dose of strychnine at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, and is still lingering between life and death. Dr. Pinney was called and found his patient almost inscnsible, but by promptly administering antidotes a reaction was obtained, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the patient was some better. He still has nervous, spasmodic twitchings and the chances are against his recovery. The doctor thinks he may pull through, but it will be by the most skillful attention.

The cause of the rash act was family trouble. He has been living with a woman by the name of Mrs. Crawford for some time, and frequently abashed her. She said several times that she would leave him, and he threated to kill himself if she did. This he attempted to do and came well nigh being successful. If he recovers he will probably not try it again.

Not a drink, not sold in bar rooms, but a reliable non-alcoholic tonic medicine, useful at all times, and in all seasons, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

Losing His Grip.

Glenwood Daily Journal.

The Nonpareil "mourneth like the whangdoodle for its first love, and refuseth to be comforted." The immediate cause of its pitiful wailing is that "Mr. John T. Baldwin, who has made more money out of politics by being a republican in the past twenty-five years than perhaps any twenty-five men in the district ever made if their incomes were aggregated, is openly supporting the democratic nominee." We can assure the Nonpareil that if it is going to shed tears of sorrow over the loss of every republican in the Ninth district who supported the democratic nominee in the pending canvass he may as well prepare for a melting mood that will dissolve his entire establishment to tears, and even then the supply of lachrymal drippings will be exhausted long before the election day comes around. Why, my dear fellow, republicans are constantly going over to the support of Pusey in large numbers. A battalion might be formed in almost any county of the district of honest, well meaning republicans who cannot and will not support Major Anderson in this campaign.

But The Nonpareil thinks it "is passing strange" that Mr. Baldwin should support Mr. Pusey, and assigns as a reason for so thinking that the former gentleman in years gone by has been a government contractor! Only hear him:

"His (Baldwin's) earnings under the second administration of President Grant were enormous and variously estimated from $50,000 to $200 000. He also had numerous mail contracts throughout the west, and had various relatives holding important official positions at large salaries, but the wheel of politics has not turned in his favor of late years so well as it formerly did. This may be one reason why republican principles and fealty to party are less observed this year than they formerly were, but the party itself will probably be able to survive the shock arising from the withdrawal of Mr. Baldwin's support."

If any deduction can be drawn from the foregoing extract it is to the effect that government contracts are let out as a reward for partisan services, and not to the lowest bidders, as the terms of the conditions imply where the advertisements for mail lettings and other government contracts are inserted. * * * * * *

The fact is the nomination of Mr. Pusey has broken down the barriers that separated parties, and the people are flocking to his standard by the scores and the hundred from every party camp. The Council Bluffs editor has become so disconsolate over the loss of former party adherents that he exposes the extremity to which his candidate is reduced in almost every word he utters. He is fast losing his grip.

A Mischievous Movement.

N. Y. Times

The prohibition movement is certainly founded on misconception of the proper means of promoting moral and social reform. No intelligent and upright citizen denies or depreciates the evils of intemperance or the need of restricting them, but there is a wide difference of opinion, may be it is a question that cannot be settled by law or by politics. Each citizen has a right to his individual conviction and his personal practice until his opinion has changed or his habits interfere with the rights of others or the general good of the community. Unbelievers in total abstinence, and they are many and for the most part respectable, will never admit the right of others, though a majority, to control their opinions or practices. Laws which have not this sanction will not be respected and cannot be generally enforced.

The greatest evil wrought by prohibitory laws is the disrespect which they tend to foster for law generally. They are evaded, and their operation is defeated by men ordinarily disposed to be peaceable and law-abiding. The consequence is lessening of respect for authority and a teaching of the pernicious lesson that laws are to be obeyed only under compulsion. The evil effect is produced not only on the subjects of the law but on its ministers and agents. They find their attempts to enforce a statute futile, and they become lax in their efforts, and the entire administration of law is demoralized. No prohibitory liquor law has ever been enforced in a populous community, or even can be, but these enactments foster deceit and unworthy tricks, and gave an evil aspect to practices that without them would be harmless. It is doubtful if they diminish the manufacture and consumption of liquors except in restricted localities, and it is certain that they do not materially lessen intemperance in cities, where its evils are chiefly felt. Experience and reason both tell us that attempts to suppress the traffic in intoxicating liquors will not only be futile, but will entail upon the community evils of which no adequate compensation is wrought.

If prohibitory laws tend to weaken the popular regard for law, prohibitory constitutions will tend to weaken the popular respect for the very basis of government. It is a perilous thing to bring constitutions in contempt with people who have no purpose or wish at variance with the security and well being of the state. The law abiding spirit can be fostered only by the maintenance of laws which command the respect and ready allegiance of the great body of citizens. It is the spirit of the people rather than the machinery of administration that must be relied on to make legislation effective. Hence this movement in the west for embodying prohibitory amendments in the state constitutions can only be regarded as mischievous. It has brought a disturbing element into politics which will derange the position of parties on more important questions. Doubtless it will have to work itself out with such consequences as a majority of the people may see fit to invoke.

Would not be without it. Redding's Russia Salve, is the verdict of all who use it. Price 25c.
