The campaign will be short, sharp and decisive.

Laird and Valentine will make a spanking monopoly team.

Nebraska has enough candidates this year to suit the most fastidious.

The nominations have been made and now comes the tug of war.

Montgomery Blair is to run for congress in one of the Maryland districts. He ought to tie his boom to the Egyptian obelisk.

A congressional committee is now investigating the loss of the Jeannette and her crew. This is like looking for the horse after the barn is stolen.

W. H. Munker has been nominated for congress by the democrats of the Third district. In this connection it would perhaps be well to remind democrats of the river counties that John I. Redick is still in the field.

The ovation to the woman suffragists must have been highly gratifying to the leaders of the movement. White man is very uncertain, and the chances are that he will vote down the amendment by a very large majority.

It is high time for the people of Douglas county to look about for a suitable candidate in the place of County Commissioner Drexel. This is a matter of the very utmost importance to every tax-payer.

Newspaper writers are no trying to prove that equinoctial storms are a fiction, but the New Jersey farmers think there is more truth than fiction in the floods which inflicted $2,000,000 of damages in the central portion of the Mosquito state.

The New York Associated Press which is one of the oldest, and most exacting monopolies in existence is frightened over the prospect of Gould's securing a controlling vote in the organization. Gould says he hasn't any use for it.

The inexcusable neglect of the B. & M. telegraph company was responsible for the failure of THE BEE to publish its full report of the Hastings convention. Our dispatches were filed in ample time for delivery, and the negligence of the telegraph company defrauded our readers of the news which would otherwise have found its place in our columns. THE BEE will take good care that the failure does not occur again.

Cold chills are running down the backs of many a gallant army officer, at the announcement that Adjutant General Drum has made out a list of the good places in the army and their tenants, which is to be submitted to Secretary Lincoln and General Sherman, with a view to reassignments. The soft service brigade is all broken up, and when congress assembles in December the expostulations and protests of members will be heard on behalf of their favorites. It is time that other less favored but no less worthy officers who have been doing hard work on the frontier should have a chance to occupy positions whose duties require less exposure and hardship.

OLIVER AMES, a son of the sainted Oakes Ames, and now a republican candidate for lieutenant governor of Massachusetts is described as a young man who lifted the estate of Oakes Ames out of bankruptcy to high credit after paying every indebtedness dollar for dollar. A contemporary remarks that he is a very able man, fertile of resource quick to grasp and solve a difficult business problem and should be bringing to bear the same splendid executive quality which has characterized his career as superintendent of a great manufacturing industry, he may achieve a brilliant success in the higher walks of life to which he aspires. The business principles which enabled him to discharge an indebtedness of $8,000,000 out of a bankrupt estate, pay $1,000,000 of bequests at their face and continue the business for the benefit of the heirs to the enrichment of them all, might be applied to the public service with good results.

A FAIR FIELD AND NO FAVORS.

Various corporation organs throughout the state are now busily engaged in reading THE BEE and its editor out of the republican party, because we have dared to expose fraudulent party methods and opposed the dictates of corporate monopoly. If the railroad coppers enjoy the job they are welcome to attempt its performance. THE BEE asks only for a fair field, and no favors from the corporations. In has survived their attacks for eleven years. It cannot be frightened or cajoled from its course at this late day, nor bulldozed into falsifying the record or turning traitor to its convictions.

THE BEE will certainly not refrain from comment or criticism on party abuses because its editor happens to be a life long republican and the majority of its readers members of the same party. As a fearless and outspoken journal it will never flinch from reflecting public opinion or from telling the truth about public men and measures. If public opinion and sentiment are overwhelmingly against the corrupt jobbers and rascals who are disgracing the name of republicanism by playing the party into the hands of the railroads, party leaders, and not THE BEE, are responsible for the situation. With all the historic principles of republicanism this journal is in full accord. The achievements of the past are as much a matter of pride to its editors as the record of its early leaders. With every honest republican who prefers patriotism to party, THE BEE will support party principles and party nominees just so long as they remain consistent with true republicanism. But when party organization is perverted into an engine of oppression instead of a medium for the expression of public sentiment the paper will refuse its countenance and deny its support to the change. It will not advocate fraud because committed under the name of party. It will not cover up abuses because maintained and countenanced by party leaders. And it will always, as it has done in the past, exercise the privilege and duty of an honest journal in criticizing men and methods of whatever party, with that freedom which is born of conviction and backed by a large and intelligent constituency.

The editor of THE BEE believes that the republican party can be purified and vitalized through purification. Before it will command the full support of Nebraska republicans, it must be taken out of the hands and from under the influences of corporate monopoly. Whatever this journal can accomplish towards that end it will do in the interests of republicans and republicanism, for which it has fought since its foundation.

It demands a fair field. It asks no favors from party or party leaders. And if the time ever came when a corrupted and debauched party organization is found on one side, and all that is best and most aggressive in party on the other, there will be no serious question as to the position of THE BEE or its editor on the issue which such a situation would involve.

During the past week the eastern money market has experienced a sharp contraction. Money loaned on call as high as 20 per cent, and from 10 to 11 per cent, was for many days the prevailing quotations on loans. The prices of stocks were stiff, halting and uncertain, and Saturday's report showed that the specie of the banks was far below the reserve line fixed by law.

Three causes combined to occasion the serious condition of the eastern money market—the lack of policy in the treasury department, the heavy demand for money to be used in railroad construction and the necessity for much larger sums than ever before to move the enormous crops of the year. The new construction of railroads in the past twelve months has added not less than four hundred millions of stocks and bonds which must be carried, to the burdens of eastern financial centers. Extension of the road and the building of new lines still continues with unabated vigor, and furnish an additional demand upon the available capital of Wall street. To this must be added the movements of money from the great financial centers to the country banks of the interior. The crops have begun to move and grain buyers require large sums of money to expend in their purchases from the farmers. Thus the free circulation of money in the interior acts as a constant drain upon the bank vaults and private safes of the sea board.

But more than any other cause which is responsible for the spasmodic contraction of our currency supply is the policy which pours a $16,000,000 surplus into the national treasury and leaves its distribution again into the channels of trade in the hands of the secretary. It is becoming an axiom that the treasury department has had no financial policy apart from politics. Wall street has been kept close to its ear, and yet has been kept in aggravating uncertainty lest its call should not be heard. But just as long as the country is needlessly skinned by over-taxation, arbitrary board calls like that of last Monday will be necessary to relieve the country from impending panic and break the back of pinches on Wall street.

THE Union Pacific system is reaching out towards the Pacific coast in two directions. The Chicago Times rates that the Utah Southern, one of the leaders of the Union Pacific is rapidly approaching the Northern Arizona, its objective point being Prescott. The antagonism between the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific has been alluded to in THE BEE, and the project of the Union Pacific to build an independent line from Granger to the Pacific near Newport was also spoken of. The line connecting the Granger branch with the Pacific will be known as the Oregon Short line. The intentions of the Union Pacific people in extending their southern line are quite apparent. Prescott will not long remain the terminus of the Utah Southern when, by extending its line a few hundred miles, it can secure a connection with Los Angeles, and not only divert a large part of the extensive Central and Southern Pacific trade from those roads, but also secure a large and constantly increasing traffic from its position as the shortest route between the western and northern states and the Pacific coast at Wilmington. Chief among the advantages of an outlet at this point would be that it would enable the Union Pacific to get a portion of the immense trade destined to open up between the states and China, Japan, Australia and the South Sea islands. The people of Los Angeles are awakening to the necessity of a competitive line to the east, and a movement is on foot to extend substantial aid to the new road, which, if built, will make that city the terminus for the Union Pacific's Southwestern line.
