FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

CONDITION OF TRADE.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE.

NEW YORK, September 29.

While business as indicated by the purchase of goods shows great activity there has been some loss of confidence, owing to a number of important failures. These disasters, however, are more the result of speculative operations and individual departure from business principles than any want of soundness of trade generally. The stringent condition of the money market has added to the anxiety, though relief in this respect is leading to improvement in the feeling regarding the future.

The dry goods trade continues fairly active on the whole. Commission houses are not doing much new business, but are very busy on deliveries on old orders. In the jobbing trade business is more active than the other. Demands from the south and west have slackened somewhat. The print market is quiet, but some agents report fair deliveries. Woolen dress goods are in good demand and the general woolen trade is fairly active. At auction the demand was only fair and attendance somewhat limited, but considerable quantities of goods were placed at acceptable prices in all descriptions.

Grain prices have been tending steadily downward. The fluctuations have been slight with the exception of corn, in which there have been occasional rapid changes.

In pork and lard there have been a fair amount of business; fluctuations were quite rapid but not wide. The market on the whole has been weak, both bulls and bears seeming indisposed to engage in transactions.

Notwithstanding the receipts of cotton are quite small and the stock very moderate, in view of the very large prospective crop the market has been weak and holders who have been carrying cotton for some time have shown a disposition to throw off their load. The market has been weak throughout and prices have tended steadily downward, with the heaviest decline in the farther off months.

There is nothing of special interest in wool, the condition of trade on the whole being satisfactory.

Petroleum business is quite active. Fluctuations have been effected by varied reports in regard to the flow of oil and perhaps considerably by the tight money market, in view of all of which the oil market is unexpectedly strong.

In freights the demand is backward but the rates are steady, the supply tonnage being light.

Arrivals of butter have been fully equal to the demand. Stocks carried over from summer are still in store. Fine grades are scarce and command 31@32c, but all other kinds are weak.

Cheese is doing better. Last week's make seems considerably smaller than last year at this time and holders are encouraged to look for better figures later on. Eleven and a half cents can be obtained for best quality.

The movement in raw sugars is quiet and limited; refiners are pretty well supplied for the present; fair refining is quoted at 7⅛@7⅜; refined sugars are in only fair demand at lower prices.

Tea is still without animation and holders are dissatisfied with the condition of affairs and are not pushing to realize at present rates.

The Brazil coffee market is dull, with but little doing either by invoice or jobbing. Speculation is more active.

In American pig iron there is some considerable activity and deliveries on back orders continue quiet and heavy; prices are firm. There was a moderate business in Scotch pig iron with a tendency to better prices.

A fair business is reported in boots and shoes, duplicate orders coming well, and the season bids fair to be satisfactory.

In leather, prices are much firmer with an upward tendency, a moderate business being done, and the general condition of trade is considered healthy.
