

The Daily Bee. COUNCIL BLUFFS. Saturday Morning, Sept. 30. SUBSCRIPTION RATES: By Carrier, 50 cents per week. By Mail, $10.00 per Year.

Office: No. 7 Pearl Street, Near Broadway. M. G. GRIFFIN, Manager. E. W. TILTON, City Editor.

MINOR MENTIONS.

—J. Mueller's Palace Music Hall. —Sheridan makes photographs. —New line of cabinet frames just received at Seaman's. —Officer Morse arrested Pete Davidson for a petty assault. —Charles Bono rhymes with Romeo. They are synonymous. —The Metropolitan hotel is being enlarged by the building of an addition. —The Bee office indebted to Mrs. Thornton for a most artificially made and exotic bouquet. —There will be a regular meeting of the board of trade Monday evening. Every member should attend. —The Bee office was serenaded last evening by the Fifth Iowa volunteer band, D. A. Morgan drum major. —The Carroll band which played here so well yesterday, appeared in public for the first time. They played like veterans. —The show windows of Lindsey's shoe store were especially tempting yesterday, they being filled with new $5 bills, bearing Garfield's portrait. —Metallic Bros. clothing store showed up finely yesterday, it being adorned with the flags of all nations, the stars and stripes waving at the top. —A fellow giving his name as Jesse Scott was found by Officer Cusick lying dead drunk on Broadway after dark. He is now sobering off at the cooler. —The front of Harkness, Orcutt & Co.'s dry goods store was among those which drew special attention yesterday on account of the beauty and taste of its decorations. —Bliss' millinery and fashion headquarters presented a pleasing appearance yesterday on account of the many floral decorations and flags which graced its front. —The Bee this morning has an extra large edition for the veterans to help themselves to. Every old soldier is welcome to one, and any and all will be welcome callers at the office. —Joseph Reiter makes the Finest Suits in the latest styles, at the lowest possible prices. His merchant tailoring establishment is at 310 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs. —Presiding Elder J. Henn, of Des Moines, will preach in the German language, on Friday evening, also on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the Evangelical church, corner of Pierce street and Glen avenue. —Morgan, Keller & Co.'s undertaking establishment is being greatly enlarged and an addition is being built in the rear, making the full length of the warehouse 127 feet. A telephone has also been added to the conveniences. —The Council Bluffs news are expected to arrive from Kansas City this morning, and arrangements have been made for a game this afternoon on the grounds here, between them and the Athletics. —Therodere Lundt made an attractive decoration on Broadway yesterday, there flying besides the stars and stripes, the German flag and the Danish flag. The last named was presented to the society here by the ladies in 1880. —One young gentleman of our city was yesterday morning carried away by the pleasing strains of the reunion martial music, as he actually came him to procure a ladder, rapidly ascend the third story of a residence on — avenue, and bravely capture several flags suspended therefrom. —Mary Lanning, who has been keeping house for a man named Gates, living near the transfer, has been arrested for making threats, to extort money from Gates. It is claimed that she threatened to have Gates arrested for trying to assume the relations of a husband, unless he paid hush money. She is to have a hearing this morning before Judge Aylesworth. Her story is that Gates is the offender, not her. —Some dastardly wretch yesterday tried to take advantage of a little girl whose father and mother live on Broadway, east of Madison. The little girl was playing near the house, when the wretch tried to get her to go with him into the alley, and even attempted familiarity with her. The child, becoming frightened, ran into the house, but when the mother appeared the man slipped out. He was described as being dressed in citizen's clothes, but as wearing a star like a policeman. —The soap swindlers had a harvest of it yesterday, standing on the street corners, and plying their trade, pretending to give away large sums of money and selling very little pieces of soap. These men are licensed as street peddlers, and under this screen they carry on their nefarious business. Many a foolish fellow paid $3 for less than a dime's worth of soap, in the vain hope of securing a money prize. The chief of police and other officials know well the nature of the swindle, and yet these fellows claim the protection of a license from the city. It is true that the city of Council Bluffs cannot furnish all citizens and visitors brave enough to keep their money, and not throw it away on such sickly games, and yet it is no less a disgrace to the city, and a shame to the authorities to ply their trade under an apparent sanction of law. Now let them go the full length and license three-card monte men and confidence men of all sorts.

FOR SALE. My residence, No. 715 Fourth street (Bancroft). L. F. MURPHY.

Honorable Mention. Of all the remedies on earth that we may claim attention, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil commands special attention. For various forms of cure disease, its fame there's none can throttle. Its merits are not in the puff, but are inside the bottle. Rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, sciatica, bronchitis, diphtheria, etc., are all cured by Thomas' Electric Oil.

BRAVE BOYS. The Reunion a Grand Success Every way. The Street Parade, Sham Battle and Speech Making. The City in a Blaze of Light Last Evening.

Yesterday was the big day of the soldiers' reunion. At an early hour in the morning the main streets began to swarm with people and with teams, and everyone was crowding to get into some good sight-seeing position, so as to witness the great street parade of the veterans. There was a goodly sprinkling of the veterans themselves in the crowd, they being designated by various insignia, from a simple ribbon pinned to citizen's clothes to a full-fledged uniform, with all the brilliant trappings thereto. Broadway presented a brilliant appearance, the buildings being decorated with flags of all sizes and drapings of the national colors, and with mottoes and emblems. The crowds swayed to and fro on the sidewalks, every available resting place, such as a dry goods box, a pile of grinnstones or a door-step, was taken. Second story windows were in demand, while the street was well filled with expressmen and bus drivers of evidently sound lungs. Ten o'clock came, and a little flurry went through the crowd, as from lip to lip there passed the words "They are coming," and after much jostling and stretching out of necks, it was found to be only a squad of Col. Kretschmer's cavalry, which was on its way to General Dodge's residence to serve as an escort for that valiant veteran. They soon returned with him, and by 11 o'clock the head of the procession at last appeared on Broadway, General Dodge and Colonel Keatley at its front. Those who expected to see a grand and brilliant military demonstration were of course disappointed. The veterans made little show as a whole, for there was no uniformity of apparel, few trappings of war, and few arms. There were about 2,500 to 3,000 in the procession, and fully 1,000 more veterans, who did not fall into line but were scattered through the crowd. Col. Keatley and his staff, together with those who have been appointed to escort duty appeared mounted. Col. Kretschmer's cavalry company, the only one in the state, attracted special attention. Two or three companies appeared uniformed and armed, and most of the veterans contented themselves with being partially uniformed. Here and there through the parade appeared flags, and bands of music, with drum corps. Some of the flags were the tattered remnants of those which had been in the thick of the fight, and under whose folds these same men had shown their bravery and love of the country, in a manner which had made of them heroes, whom all love to honor. There was a tinge of sadness which could not but touch those who watched these veterans. Twenty years has placed many of them in the advancing shadows of old age, and has thinned their ranks. Those who have gone, but are not forgotten, had a place in the mind of many. In strange contrast with the tender, sombre side of the picture, was the vein of humor which ran alongside of the gladness, which these valiant comrades felt in again meeting and grasping hands. Here, marched a lieutenant, carrying a lath in lieu of the sword, a significant emblem of the return of peace. There, another officer swung a cane, as though it were a sabre. Again, two or three old soldiers appeared with the chicken, indicating the results of a forage, and not far behind two or three others with bits of board for muskets. There was a jolly side of the procession, and it cropped out in words of greeting to friends, whose heads were stuck out of second story windows, of jocose remarks, of sallies of wit. The men marched four deep and by companies, yet there was an air of informality, and the seeming of a festival, rather than the mimicry of the military, which characterizes a parade of militia. There was music from several bands and drum corps, cheers from the crowd, laughter, jostling and pushing of bystanders, and a sense of festivity which the participants will long remember. There was a dense crowd at the corner of Bryant and Broadway, at which point the veterans passed in review, that gallant soldier, that worthy citizen, General Dodge, whose presence proved such an inspiration to those who fighting under him had seen the bravery of his heart, and who associated with him in times of peace as well as war, had felt its warmth and generosity. Beside the general appeared the old flag of the regiment, and it seemed to raise the enthusiasm to a still greater pitch. He was justly the object of all observers. The line of march extended so far as the Methodist church, and then back to the fair grounds where they broke ranks. The civic societies, fire department, etc., assigned places in the column failed to materialize. Some claim that one reason was that the only invitation received by any was a general one published in the papers, and that this was not personal enough to suit some. Others explain by the fact that so many belong to different organizations as to render it difficult to get a fair representation of any one order, or society, when all turn out at the same time, and hence none attempted it. At the fair grounds there was a lively scene all day, and especially in the afternoon, when there were about 10,000 people there, crowds coming and going, and there being hundreds of little incidents of greetings and of little incidents of good-will, as they telling jokes of camp-life, and a hurrying hither and thither of visitors. In the afternoon there was the sham battle, which was a good de-sham, on account of the lack of the necessary arms and ammunition. It proved a pretty respectable skirmish, however, and created much excitement among those not used to scenes of war, and much fun among the veterans. It was a skirmish between the cavalry under the command of Col. Kretschmer and the infantry under the command of Col. Daily. There were about two hundred men engaged. The cavalry made a brave attempt to drive in the infantry's skirmish line, and the latter repulsed them but were in turn repulsed. The cavalry captured one prisoner, Major McHenry, of Des Moines. After the battle the crowd gathered to the number of several thousand in the amphitheatre, and listened to some speech making. Judge Reed served as chairman and first introduced Congressman Heppburn, who was received with much applause by his old comrades in arms. He spoke eloquently of the work accomplished by the soldiers, and of the fact that they had made the old flag to be respected all over the world as the symbol of a country where manhood was the only criterion. He gave an earnest showing of the duties of the republic towards those who had thus saved it, and the obligations resting upon the coming generation to keep the Union in its entirety and preserve its honor, as well as to cherish gratitude for its defenders. He did not believe the government could do too much for its soldiers, and he took no stock in the cry of frauds in the pension bureau. He believed in service pension. Less than fifty years after the revolutionary war every soldier was given a pension, whether wounded or not. In less than fifty years after the war of 1812, every soldier of that war was given a pension. The time was not far distant when the soldiers of the Mexican war would be treated likewise, and not many years before all soldiers in the late war would be pensioned. Too much could not be done for them. Colonel Keatley, the commandant, was introduced among cheers. He spoke very encouragingly of those who had joined the ranks of the patriot, and urged the teaching of the uprising generations to respect the same flag, for which they had fought. In behalf of the city of Council Bluffs, he thanked the veterans for thus honoring it with their presence. Dr. Hatton, the greenback nominee for congress in this district, was next called out. He gave a very practical talk, advising that the soldier should not be paid enough, and that their average monthly pay during the war was only a little over $9, considering the depreciation of the currency. The congressmen had raised their salaries, they had raised the pay of civil employees, they had paid the employees of the Pacific coast gold and silver, while the soldiers had greenbacks. He thought the government should do something to bring this pay up to what it should have been, and endorsed the sentiment that the government could not do too much for its soldiers. Major Anderson was then called out and amid applause. He did not make one of his best efforts, but gave an earnest talk, in which he ably seconded the belief that the government could not do too much for the veterans. He pictured the veterans as having completed the work begun by the revolutionary fathers, for by their sabers they cut the ulcer which was poisoning the nation's life, and made it a country free in fact as it had been in name. Capt. Thomas Houden, of Marysville, Mo., was then called out, and proved the happiest, jolliest speaker of all. He kept the crowd in a roar of laughter with personal incidents of the war, and toward the close paid a touching tribute to the women, and the cheer which the soldier heart received from them. After the speech-making there was a dress parade, on the day before. Last evening the camp-fires were lighted, and those on the grounds joined in merry groups telling stories, cracking jokes, and a general good time. There was a grand reception at General Dodge's large and elegant residence. The grounds and house were in a blaze of light, the illuminations surprising and splendid. The crowd was large, but all were most hospitably treated and all the requirements of a grand festival were provided. It was one of the greatest events and most enjoyable of the whole reunion. Last night the city was illuminated brilliantly, especially the business street and public buildings. The Bee, besides its other illuminations, sent up a number of large lighted balloons. This morning at 9 o'clock the Veterans' association meets in the amphitheatre at the fair grounds to elect officers for another year and transact other business. To-day there will be the breaking up of camp and the farewells. Universal Appreciation. By the community at large has been given to HENCKS BLOOD BROTHERS. No instance is known where dissatisfaction has been manifested by their use, or where grant but benefit followed their administration. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents. —The leading congressional candidates opposed the reunion in different ways. Mr. Pusey had his residence beautifully decorated in a patriotic manner, contributed liberally and liberally his part of the expense of carrying for the veterans, and then watched the parade with his usual accuracy, feeling that his part had been well done. Major Anderson arrayed himself in the most faded old suit he could find, took a place among the private, marched in a rank, and looked satisfied at his own obsequiousness in becoming one of the caucus men for a day. A General Stampede. Never was such a rush made for any Drug store as is now at C. F. Goodman's, for a trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. All persons afflicted with Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Severe Coughs, or any affection of the Throat and Lungs can get a trial bottle of this great remedy, by calling at above named Drug store.

SIDE BY SIDE. The Comparison Between Anderson and Pusey. The following is the manner in which the editor of the Union-Arrow figures out that, as a republican, he feels justified in supporting Pusey and opposing Anderson: Believe honestly the best policy. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in controlling railroads. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in drawing pay once. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in prohibition. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Depends on where. Can be secured by law, other means. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Oppose the free pass system. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in political economy. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Don't know what you mean. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Denounce office brokerage. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Denounce blasphemy. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in temperance. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Doubtful. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in education. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Seldom study. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Encourage religion. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Doubtful. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Uphold our present banking system. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe it right to receive interest. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Uphold Lincoln and Kirkwood. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Denounce postoffice bonds. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in the purity of politics. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in the purity of society. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Consider the marriage relation sacred. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Abhor adultery. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe it wrong to break up families. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Declare it the duty of every republican to oppose bad and incompetent candidates. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No. Believe in that cardinal republican doctrine, that the will of the people is the highest law. Anderson, Yes. Pusey, No.

True to her Trust. Too much cannot be said of the ever faithful wife and mother, constantly watching and caring for her dear ones, never neglecting a single duty in their behalf. When they are assailed by disease, and the system should have a thorough cleansing, the stomach and bowels regulated, blood purified, and malarial poison exterminated, she must know that the Electric Bitters are the only sure remedy. They are the best and purest medicine in the world and only cost fifty cents. Sold by C. F. Goodman.

PERSONAL. John H. Pierce called at The Bee office yesterday. A. E. Dronzy, postmaster of Sioux City, Iowa, is in the city. Jacob Williams, now of Omaha, took in the reunion here yesterday. Sam G. Underwood is in the city on his return home from Harrison county. Sheriff Dan Farrell, of Mills county, is in town taking in the boys in blue's reunion. J. H. Butler, Neola's live merchant, is in attendance at the reunion and made these headquarters a pleasant call. Senator Allison in the city, a guest of the Ogden house, and found his time occupied by the swarm of friends, admirers and politicians who swarm about him. Gen. W. C. Dodge, of Burlington, ex-United States senator, and one of Iowa's most beloved and prominent citizens, is in the city, the guest of Hon. W. A. M. Pusey. Frank Meade, manager of D. & S. W. Narrow Gauge railroad at Des Moines, formerly with R. I. railroad in this city, put up at the Ogden yesterday. His many friends gave him a cordial greeting. He left over the K. C. for Kansas City. Justice John A. Frayne has returned from Chicago, where he has been spending several days, and has had the pleasure of hearing several of the stars now sparkling on the stage there. Charles Munger, the well known, formerly a partner of Mr. Evans, in the Crystal Mills, was in the city yesterday, and among the callers at The Bee office. He has now a large farm near Lincoln, Neb. Among the joyous meetings at the reunion was that between Captain Hank G. Myers of the Logan Post and C. D. Philo or "Little Charlie" of Marysville, Mo., both of whom were in company I of the Second Wisconsin. They had not met since 1865. Captain Philo had with him bugle which he carried throughout the war.
