"Mel!" "Who's that?" "Jim Baker." "Oh, Jim, what to stay all night?" "Well, strip off and pile in between the feet two on the front—there's only four of us lying here."

"That you, Tom? Pull off your boots and slip in here—lots of room left yet!" "Sins of the Fathers Visited on the Children. Physicians say that scrophulous taint cannot be eradicated; we deny it."

"A. M. Williams, of Syracuse, N. Y., says: I have been acquainted with Guernseys and Jerseys for about thirty years, and met them first on their islands, where I studied them with interest. Then the Channel island cattle all went under the common name of Alderneys, and the islands were known as the Alderney islands."

"The young man Hodges whom our Adairville reporter mentioned last week in connection with Jesse James and Dick Liddle, lives in Cross Plains. A favorite reporter met him last week, and after showing him the article in the paper the following interview ensued:

"Are you the gentleman here spoken of as having had a fight with Jesse James and Dick Liddle?" "I am."

"How many times did they shoot at you?" "Sixteen, and only one ball hit the mark. My father was shot once through the thigh. Three of the bullets came very near hitting me—they went through my umbrella, which was tied on the back of my saddle."

"How close were you to the men?" "I could have knocked James' pistol from his hand could I have gotten a fair lick at it."

"Were you excited?" "Not the least bit."

"Did you suspect they were some of the James gang?" "Had no idea who they were—and didn't care. It was a life-and-death matter with me, and I soon gave them to understand that I wasn't afraid."

"Did you or your father go to Alabama to identify Liddle, as the paper stated?" "I didn't, and if father did I don't know it. I don't think he did, however."

"The Mr. Hodges here spoken of is a native of Marion, Crittenden county, Ky., and at that time lived there. The battle was fought near Cross Plains, and after it was ended Mr. H. wended his way to that place and engaged lodging at the Villines house. Under this roof he met first the daughter of the host, the little brown-eyed beauty, Miss Lizzie Villines. To her and his host he related his dangerous encounter, and the sequel goes to show that, though 'Othello's occupation may be gone,' the results of the schemes to which he resorted are still the same. She listened to his story of his dangers, pined him on their account, and surrounded the fortress of her heart, to which he laid siege no less valiantly than he had defended his life against the attacks of the most noted outlaw of modern times."

"She swore, in faith 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange; 'Twas pitiful, 'twas wonderful pitiful. There were mutual interchanges of love, followed shortly by marriage, and the happy young couple, thus strangely met, are living under the same roof under which the narrative of this encounter is destined to become a part and parcel of Jesse James' history as first told."

"In the fight above mentioned James did not sustain his world-renowned reputation for being a crack shot. He was either not the marksman that he had credit for being, or something was most fearfully wrong with his nerves."

"When your wife's health is bad, when your children are sickly, when you feel worn out, use Brown's Iron Bitters."

Georgia Hospitality. As I got beyond Rossville, in riding out to the battle-field of Chickamauga, it began to rain, and the way the thunder roared and lightning flashed and the flood-gates opened was appalling. A farmer just over the Georgia line beckoned me in out of the wet, and there I stuck from 1 o'clock until dark. It was a steady storm, without a break for a minute, and there were no signs of its clearing up before midnight the man said I had better stay all night. It looked that way to me, too, but it was a log house with only one room, and only two beds for the twelve of us. There were six children, some half-grown, the farmer and his wife, an old woman, a son-in-law, a young woman and myself. It looked as if some of us would have to stand up to sleep, and along about 9 o'clock I began to get nervous. Perhaps the man noticed it, for so on after that hour he said:

"Stranger, we'll step out and look at the weather."

"We went to the barn, and after a look at the horse returned and found all the women in one bed and the light out."

"Shake off and jump into the 'log bed,' whispered the man, and I followed directions. I was no sooner in than he followed. Then came the young man, then the old one, and then three boys lay across our feet, the upper one resting across my knees. It was impossible to move or turn, but in ten minutes all were snoring away as if that was their usual way of going to bed. I heard the old clock strike 11, 12, 1 and 2, and was finally dozing off when some one opened the door, walked in, and began to undress. I was awakened the farmer, who carefully called out:

"Who's that?"

"About it. A rotten street apple will cure that black eye in three or four days, and salt and water will tighten your front teeth in a week or so. I feel fifty per cent. better, and I'm ever so much obliged. No long to you!"

The Pig in Agriculture. Rural New Yorker. The pig has recently been spoken of in contempt when compared with our domestic animals. But if we examine his good qualities at all critically we must award him a high place in agriculture. He is found to produce a pound of product from less food than either cattle or sheep, and is, therefore, the most economical machine to manufacture our great crop into marketable meat. Our people are becoming wiser every year, and exporting less, proportionately, of the raw material and more of condensed product. If it is true, as we have seen, that the pig on the average makes a pound of pork, as is no doubt the case, the farmer begins to see the economy of exporting one pound of pork, bacon or ham, instead of seven pounds of corn. The difference in cost of freight makes a fine profit of itself; besides, the pound of meat is usually worth more than seven pounds of corn in the foreign market. The production of pork should be encouraged on the further consideration that it carried off less of the valuable constituents of the soil than beef. The fat pig contains only three-fourths as much mineral matter per cwt. as the fat steer, and only two-fifths as much nitrogen per cwt.; and therefore the production of a ton of pork on the farm will carry off only a little more than half the fertility carried off by a ton of beef. Besides, a ton of beef will require nearly 50 per cent. more to produce it. This gives in round numbers the comparative effect of producing pork and beef. It is thus evident that the pig should have a high place in our agriculture; should be fostered in every way; his capabilities carefully noted and properly used; and the most profitable meat-producing animal on the farm. The pig is an excellent adjunct to the dairy, turning all refuse milk and even whey into cash. As he is king of our meat exports, so let us treat him with great consideration.

Balm in Gilead. There is a balm in Gilead to heal each gaping wound. In THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL, the remedy is found. For internal and for outward use, you freely may apply it. For all pain and inflammation, you should not fail to try it. It only costs a trifle, 'tis worth its weight in gold. And by every dealer in the land this remedy is sold.

Overloading Cows' Stomachs. National Live Stock Journal. When cows are changed from scanty to flush feed it often happens that the benefit of the more liberal supply is neutralized for some time by allowing them to gorge themselves to the extent of uncomfortable fullness. An excessive distension of the stomach produces inflammatory action and impedes digestion, and tends to diminish the flow of milk and to impair its quality. Overloading a cow's stomach invariably gives a strong and disagreeable odor to her milk that injures it for butter or for cheese-making, and also its healthfulness for food. Such an overloading is always indicative of a double loss—a loss from failing to utilize as fully as might be the flush feed, and a previous loss from a supply of food insufficient to enable the cows to give as much milk as they are capable of giving. When cows are fed with a liberality that develops a full flow of milk, they will not overload with a food so little concentrated as green grass and clover. The fact that they do overload is an evidence that their previous food was too scanty for profit, and consequently that loss has been endured on account of it. But when such a course of feeding has existed, and a change is to be made to a better one, loss from over-eating may be prevented by admitting the herd gradually to the new feed and supplying them with all the salt and water they desire. The increase in the new ration should never be so great as to change the flavor of the milk.

The Right Sort of General. Jacob Smith, Clinton street, Buffalo, says he has used Serrin's Bitters in his family as a general medicine for cases of indigestion, biliousness, bowel and kidney complaints, and disorders arising from impurities of the blood. He speaks highly of its efficacy. Price 50 cents, trial bottles 10 cents.

A Miner's Rice Fine. It is related of a Black Hills miner who had discovered a big thing that he went to a party in Denver to have a drawing made of the site and its surroundings, and he was asked:

"Do you intend to work this mine?" "No, I guess not."

"Will you go east and form a stock company and sell out the shares?" "I think I will."

"Then what you want of me is a sketch showing the mouth of your mine with about $300,000 worth of silver ore piled up around it. When you get to Chicago you can get an agent there to put in a river, or a railroad track, and if you go as far as Boston it will be the duty of the artist there to put three steamboats on the river, two trains on the railroad, and surround your mine with a town of 600 inhabitants."

REMEMBER THIS. If you are sick Hop Bitters will surely aid Nature in making you well when all else fails.

If you are constive or dyspeptic, or are suffering from any of the numerous diseases of the stomach or bowels, Hop Bitters are a sovereign remedy in all such complaints.

If you are wasting away with any form of kidney disease, stop tempting Death this moment, and turn for a cure to Hop Bitters.

If you are a sick with that terrible
