Special Dispatch to the Philisdelphia Press. WELLSBOROUGH, Pa, October 13 .-The other night at Charley Wilson and Nora Maynard were returning from Lectonia after dark, when within half a mile from home, Wilson discovered that an animal of some kind was keeping along near them in the brush but two or three rods from them, and thinking Miss Maynard might be alarmed he said nothing of it to her. After following them for some twenty or thirty rods it finally sprang on the hind end of the platform wagon, but Wilson struck it a blow with the butt of his whip which made it fall back a little, cing but it immediately started for them, when Wilson put his horses to their fastest gait and soon reached the clear ing and the school house, and saw no more of the animal, which proved to to be a panther. The screams of the panther so frightened Miss Maynard that she fainted. The brother of the young lady said the prints of the animal's claws can be seen on the platform where he struck. Mr. Labar, who is cutting logs for Mr. Silas Mattison, says he shot at a large panther about a week ago, and thinks this may be the same one, although he wounded it so that he tracked it for some dis-

The Astor and Other Families.

A New York journal, actuated by either the well-known amiability of newspapers, or by that dazed adulation of wealth which is so disastrously ish a refreshing drink for the sick. affecting the American mind, speaks of minister to Rome Aster as "son of one of the great Astors." Great for what. Not a single member of the family, from the old trader in mangy, musty skins down to the minister to Rome, ever gave an indication of courage, charity, intellect or any one of them fell on the sidewalk with-form of heart or brains save to have and to hold, and to reinvest the old was a young man-and a Belfastyoung Dutch furrier's fortune, which man who is not polite is not anything the uncontrollable prosperity of New York city—a city to which they have contributed absolutely nothing, save the example of high rents—has quadrupled for them. The Asker is the point of the process of brary is not a public benefice. It is only accessible to those who have large or small libraries of their own, and don't happen to find on their shelves the particular book there. shelves the particular book they at to come out of the ends and in another that moment require and the Astor instant a bright red thing-a sort of a library is only usefully available to a clique of cheap philosophers and would-be literati who are fostered by its petty-salaried places and reserve the best places in the window. the best places in the windows, the most desirable books for their cronies, who make a club-room of the books at the control of the books for their cronies, who make a club-room full on the walks at the control of th family. The present brood of Astors are not even good judges of real estate, into which their rents and it comes are turned and returned. Aleck Shepherd has more real estate sense than all the Astors who ever lived. Jay Gould, Vanderbilt, Belmont, Jim Keene, rob themultitude; that's business. It's only a rich, bustling, sharp multitude who are trying to rob them; a Cornell blind-pool multitude. But look at the good they do; look at the millions of money they see in motion by their enterprise and lauge-minded-

It is not to be gravely deplored if

when he builds a new railroad or buys a neglected old one. The roads under his control open up thousands of acres of land to the swarming settlers, bring to light as ty the touch of a magic pencil smiling farms, well filled barns, prosperous towns and villages where yesterday was a howing wilderness or a dreary waste of bad lands. Besides this, no matter how their stock is manipulated in Wall street, the grazier and the farmer don't care a snap for that. Let them fight it among themselves and the devil take the hindmost. The railroads make a market for the Nebraska and Colorado stockmen's cattle ranging on a hundred bluffs, and those on the broad plains of Kansas and Texas. By the railroads, even from far Dakota, come the farmer's grain, sheep, poultry, eggs, hogs, raised on lands which, but for the railroads, would yet be left to the buffalo, rattlesnake and coyote. The Vanderbilta set millions in motion by the purchase of yachte, horses, pictures (some bad ones, it must be confessed), and the erection of private dwellings, which honor the country to which they dwe their splen-dors. If Mr. Vanderbilt, Sr., chooses to lend "us," I mean ds, the people, who are staggering under a load of debt $60,000,000 at three and a half per cent., when he can skiely invest his coachman's money at six or eight per cent., I don't think he ought to be jeered and hooten as a bloated bond-holder or a shark. Every step that August Belmont has made in this country has left behind it evidences ef beauty, taste and liberal expenditure While he profited those around him throve and were happier. Mr. Keene sets squadrons of race horses in the field and wins victory and fame for us abroad, takes a turn in railroads and wheat, builds conservatories and fine houses. It is true all these men rob each other on Wall attent—let 'ein do it; it's business in the nineteenth century to cheat your neighbor if you can. But cheat your neighbor if you can. But they are generous to their retainers, kind to the poor and royal in their public charities and gifts. The Astors are tumble-bug millionaires. They sit and sit, with greed, gaze, to watch their dull millions roll up in the vulgar dust on the public highways, yielding nothing, glying nothing, thinking nothing but honey, money, money, safe all the time under eye and hand. No, there are no great Astors. Astora.

Worthy of Praise.

About the Ostrich,

Laramie Hormorang There is some prospect of ostrich farming developing into quite an industry in the southwest, and it will some time be a cold day when the simple-minded rustic of that region will not have ostrich on toast it he wants it. Ostrich farming, however, will always have its drawbacks The hen ostrich is not a good layer as a rule, only laying two eggs per an-num, which, being about the size of a porcelain wash bowl, make her so

The estrich is chiefly valuable for the plumage which he wears and which, when introduced into the world of ommerce, makes the husband almost with that he were dead.

Probably the ostrich will not come into general use as an article of food. few people caring for it, as the meat is coarse and the gizzard full of old hard-ware and relics of wrecked trains and old irons left where there has been a

Carving the ostrich is not so difficult as carving the quail, because the joints are larger and one can find bem with less trouble, Still, the bird takes up a great deal of room at the table and the best circles are not using them.

The ostrich does not set. She don't have time. She does not squat down over something and insist on hatching it out if it takes all summer, but she just lays a couple of porcelian cuspidores in the hot sand when she feels like it and then goes away to the seaside to quiet her snattered nerves.

Belfast (Me.) Journal. A rather sad affair took place on one of our streets the other day. A young lady with her arms full of bundles emerged from a dry goods store when one of them fell on the sidewalk withquadrupled for them. The Astor lirent by flattering the Agtor restaurant pie; and the young man straightened himself up, looking as if he wished the tail of comet No. 2 would sweep him from this fair land, and the young lady came back with dece that resembled a sunset on a 50-cent chromo, and she picked up the wire contrivance and then she went toward the east and he went toward the west, and the sun ducked his head behind a cloud to hide a smile, and three or four tooked on, laid down and laughed and doubled themselves up in a manner that would have made a mess of green apples hang their heads in
