A WILD MAN IN IDAHO.

How Two Cowboys Chased the Solitary Savage of Snake River.

Hailey Times.

Two cowboys who just came in from Camas Praire relate an experience which will probably go a great ways toward re-establishing the popular faith in the wild man's tradition. On the first day of this month two cowboys, searching for cattle lost in the storm, passed over some lava crags and were startled by suddenly seeing before them the form so often described to them. They were so terrified that they sat upon their horses, looking at it in dread. Mustering courage and drawing their revolvers they dismounted and gave chase, but the strange being skipped from crag to crag as nimbly as a mountain goat. After an hour's pursuit both young men were so completely worn out that they both laid down, seeing which the wild man gradually approached them and stopped on the opposite side of a gorge in the lava, from which point he regarded the cowboys intently.

The wild man was considerably over 6 feet in height, with great muscular arms, which reached to his knees. The muscles stood out in great knots and his chest was as broad as that of a bear. Skins were twisted about his feet and ankles and a wolf skin about his waist. All parts of his body to be seen were covered with long black hair, while from his head the hair flowed over his shoulders in coarse, tangled rolls and mixed with a heavy beard. His face was dark and swarthy, and his eyes shone brightly, while two tusks protruded from his mouth. His fingers were the shape of claws, with long, sharp nails, and he acted very much as a wild animal which is unaccustomed to seeing a man. The boys made all kinds of noises, at the sound of which he twisted his head from side to side and moaned—apparently he would not give them any "back talk;" so, wearying of eyeing him, the two boys fired their revolvers, whereupon the wild man turned a double somersault and jumped fifteen feet to a low bench and disappeared, growling terribly as he went.

It is supposed that this is the same apparition that has so often been seen before, the man no doubt, does as the Indians did for subsistence, and lives on Camas roots, which grow wild by acres, and he no doubt kills young stock, as many yearlings and calves disappear mysteriously and nothing but skeletons of them are ever found.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate in Inebriety.

DR. C. S. ELLIS, Wabash, Ind., says: "I prescribed it for a man who had used intoxicants to excess for fifteen years, but during the last two years has entirely abstained. He thinks the Acid Phosphate is of much benefit to him."

Not in the Ranks.

Detroit Free Press.

The old army overcoat that used to be such a familiar sight on our streets is one of the rarest now; indeed, it is so seldom seen that we involuntarily turn and gaze after it, as something that brings sad and often cruel memories. The other day an old man wearing a coat of this kind, which reached to his heels, stopped at a cottage a little way out of town and asked leave to rest awhile on the porch.

"I'm a bit tired," he said to the woman who opened the door, "and if you don't mind I'll sit here and rest myself for a spell."

"You're welcome," said the woman kindly, with a glance at the martial blue. Then she left him alone, but after a little while returned with a bowl of coffee and a plate of white biscuit.

"Eat," she said gently, "I had a boy who was a soldier."

"But I'm not a soldier," answered the old man. "I never was a soldier; my boy went to war and was killed. He was all I had, too. This coat was his; seems like he's near me when I have it on. I gave him to his country; the handsomest and bravest boy he was, too, in the whole regiment. God bless him. He did his duty, died on the field, and this coat was all that came back to his poor old dad. No; I never was a soldier."

The woman went in and brought out some cake and the whitest honey, and added it to the coffee and biscuit.

"Are you alone in the world?" she asked.

"Oh, no," answered the old man, cheerfully; "I've got a sister, but she's old and lame, and she has a daughter that is sickly and ailing. You see I have them to work for, and they are a sight of comfort to me. Many's the time I'd have broken down since Mary died but for them poor critters. Mary was my wife, ma'am; she was a master hand to nuss sick folks, and she thought after Tim died as it were her duty to go into the hospital service and nuss the soldiers, and she died these sixteen years ago; but she did a heap of good work first. Many a soldier has kissed her shadow on the wall! Mary, darlin', God wanted ye in the ranks up there! I've often wished that I had been a soldier, if only to be fit for the little mother and Tim; but I never was."

He drank the coffee, ate the good food thankfully and offered to pay for it with some hoarded pieces of old worn silver, but the woman shook her head.

"Put back your money. My boy was a soldier," she said.

"But I am not a soldier—well—well," as he looked into her face, "I thank you and I take it for his sake."

He wished good night to his kind entertainer and turned away. As he walked off, slow and limping, bent by infirmity, the long skirt of his army overcoat struck bright and blue against the splendor of the sunset; he shaded his eyes with one trembling hand and looked wistfully at the rose and amethyst door that seemed to open in the west. What saw he there? A little, round-shouldered woman with a small, homely face; a lank overgrown boy, with sparse red hair. Aye, and of such as these are angels made! So, watching, he passed down into the shadows and disappeared

The woman at the gate looked after him.

"No soldier?" she said gently, "but I wonder if the boy who died on his first battlefield ever fought as he has, or sacrificed as much to his country? All the soldiers didn't go into the war with flying flags and rolling drums. Some of them staid at home and fought harder battles. I'm glad I gave him a bite and a sup. He is a soldier, and a brave one, too, and one day he will know it!"

And I think she was right.

Do not be deceived. Insist on having the genuine Brown's Iron Bitters made only by the Brown Chemica Co., and take nothing else.

THE NEW YORK SWELL.

The Last Importation with Quizzing Glass, Untanned Shoes, and Green Trousers.

New York Letter to the Washington Star.

The society man of the present day in New York usually inspires a sentiment of sympathy or pity in the heart of the casual observer, so very uncomfortable does he look in trying to be stylish. A man of fashion some years ago, when loose garments were the thing to wear, presented an easy and breezy appearance, but now he cannot be stylish without being uncomfortable. The terms are synonymous. This was brought forcibly to my mind to-day by the appearance of the son of a wealthy Wall street banker. I don't suppose he would care if his name was published, as he is used to seeing it in all the society papers, and is the acknowledged leader of the more exclusive society men of New York, but I won't give it this time. His brother, who is in Washington during the session of congress, never achieved distinction as a society man, or in any other way indeed, excepting in fighting a former secretary of state who tried to corner Peru. Nor was his father ever much of a society man. He, however, lives for nothing else. He has just returned from England with an entirely new and absolutely correct wardrobe, and has already began to exhibit. He is short, but fairly well formed, and he constantly wears the single glass, while his accent astonishes Americans—and Englishmen, too, I fear. When I saw him he was coming around the corner of Twenty-eighth street into Fifth avenue, and the windows of the swell little Knickerbocker club were alive with weak-looking faces, convulsively holding the single eyeglass, and gazing eagerly at the latest imported clothes. The young man (he is about 30) did not walk easily. He had on a pair of dead black shoes, with untanned leather tops. They are decorated by fancy stripes along the side of the foot and over the toe, and were so absurdly narrow that they looked like deformed feet, and rendered the movements of the young man far from graceful, though he struggled hard to preserve appearances. His legs were covered by a pair of trousers that were simply amazing, so tight were they cut. It would almost be impossible to sit down without splitting them across the knee, as far as can be judged from appearances. They were as tight as eel-skin all the way down, fitting round the ankle as snugly as a stocking. This remarkable expose of a man's development is not advisable when his legs are not up to the standard. The trousers in question were a very light green with dark stripes. Above them was a vest that stretched from the chin to a line just even with the hip bones, and was cut straight across. The vest was of light material and looked odd, it was so extremely short. The cutaway coat was bottle green, and fitted like a jersey. It was indeed a trial of the tailor's art in one sense, but it is far too tight to be becoming. The sleeves were nearly as tight as the trousers, and the coat-tails were very long, hanging as far down behind as the knee. He wore a collar that lapped over in front, and was certainly higher than any other collar I ever saw in America. It forced his chin up in the air, and caused the sunlight to scintillate on his single glass. Around the neck was a green scarf with a hound's head in diamonds for a pin. Above it all was one of huge English Derby hats with a great curling brim and a heavy crown. He wore yellow gloves, and carried a stick with a twisted handle by its lower end, so that the handle dropped nearly to his feet. The vacant stare completed the effect, and he limped along while the others envied him! This is no ideal sketch, but a faithful picture of a society man in New York in the year of our Lord 1882.

AN ARTIFICIAL ALLIGATOR.

A Miniature Monster Made of Gold and Precious Stones.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"I have just returned from Paris. See what I have brought my wife," said a wholesale jewelry dealer, extending a small alligator to the reporter. The monster was of Roman gold with ruby eyes and a flat link in its nose. Four small diamonds were embedded perpendicularly down the back of the neck, the last one almost meeting a like row of jewels which ran out into the tail, graduating in width. Other rows were set on either side, making the entire back a mass of diamonds. While examining this fine piece of work the reporter's finger came in contact with a small spring in the alligator's tail, when the gem-encrusted back raised itself by a hinge at the neck, disclosing the face of a watch about as large as a gold dollar. The merchant then pressed another spring, which laid open the interior, a perfect system of minute works with a stem-winder attached.

Footgear that Caught Men's Eyes.

Detroit Free Press.

The costliest pair of shoes that I have ever seen covered the penal extremities of a New York lady—$39 was paid for them. The lady wore a pair of stockings which cost $90. They were made of black silk, and midway between the ankle and the knee was a green tree embroidered in silk, and resting upon the branches of the tree were bright-plumed birds, some in the act of flying. On the "bulge," or largest part of the stocking, was a huntsman, clad in red shirt and trousers, taking aim at the birds in the tree. Upon the instep was the monogram of the lady wrought in gold letters. Between the knee and the upper part of the stocking were eighteen narrow bands of many varying hues.

FROM

COL. L. T. FOSTER.

Youngstown, Ohio, May 10, 1880

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co.—I had a very valuable Hambletonian colt that I prized very highly, he had a large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame; I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons which failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express, I determined at once to try it and got our druggists here to send for it, and they ordered three bottles; I took all and I thought I would give it a thorough trial, I used it according to directions and the fourth day the colt ceased to be lame and the lumps have disappeared. I used but one bottle and the colt's limbs are as free of lumps and as smooth as any horse in the state He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I have let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles who are now using it.

Very respectfully,
