The Sin-Impelling Scalekin.

The sealskin sacque so popular among women has, says the New York Times, long been an object of masculine dread, according to the newspaper humorists. The comic department of every issue of a Chicago, Cincinnati, or St. Louis paper never fails to contain some reference to the suferings of the man who is requested to buy a sealskin-cacque for his wife, and the western father is, according to the same authority, constantly brought to the verge of bankruptcy through buy-ing sealskin exeques for his daughters. There is another grave charge which may be brought against the same at tractive and costly garment. It leads to more viciations of our revenue laws than does any other article known to importers. Seslakin sacques can be bought in Canada much more cheaply than in the United States, and the dream of every enterprising American woman is to go to Montreal, to buy a seaiskin sacree, and to smuggle it brough United States custom-houses. The chief statistician of the oustomhouse asserts that 17,000 (in round numbers) American women annually visit Canada in order to make this dream a blessed reality. Of these, 2,718 are detected in the possession of sealskin sacques, and are made to pay F. T. SEYBERT, M.
