JAMES W. DAWES is not a swift racer. Oh, Lord, teach me to number my days.

If anything will drive the railroads out of politics it would be the revelations of the Republican valley infamies.

EX-SENATOR PADDOCK wants it distinctly understood that he has not pulled out of the staple chase for the Saunders' succession.

HOVEL expenses of the tariff commission at Long Branch amounted to $6,000, and the amount of whiskey which it was found necessary to drink before deciding that there is no necessity for the tariff revision is said to foot up some $3,600.

ANNUS of M. K. Turner is very popular since the election with a certain class of pap seeking railroad organs who, if that gentleman and true republican had been elected, would have been the first to spread taffy an inch thick over him in the hope of securing patronage.

Immigration from Ireland is noticeably small at present. Only 3,415 sons and daughters of Erin arrived last month, while 17,693 Germans came to us in the same time.

The Chicago fire department has made a successful test of a telescopic water tower, which can be raised to a height of sixty-five feet, and which will distribute water from four engines.

No one can object to the proper improvement of the high school grounds. There has been a great deal of money expended in making them presentable and in removing the vices which have disgraced for so long the immediate surroundings of the building.

The version which these champion suffragists put upon the disgraceful scene at Boyd's opera house is in thorough keeping with the above. They do not say a word about the abusive harrangue of Miss Cousins in front of the court house, and her wanton assault upon Mr. Hitchcock, a repetition of which in the opera house drew forth from Mayor Boyd the retort, "It is as false as hell!"

Omaha is greatly in need of increased school accommodations. Several of the ward schools are greatly overcrowded. In the high school proper the attendances has more than doubled this year and available room is filled to its utmost capacity.

As soon as possible the larger part of the high school building ought to be given up exclusively to grammar school purposes. At least two primary schools should be erected in the district which is now supplied by the high school. These school houses would take away at least 800 of the pupils who at present study and recite in the high school building, and would leave an abundance of room for the rapidly increasing attendance on the intermediate and high school grades.

There is hope that parliament will adjourn before two weeks. The rapidity with which the work of the session has progressed is a surprise even to the friends of the government. Obstruction has been conquered, the closure has been passed and the opposition of Lord Randolph Churchill has fallen to break the ranks of the liberals.

OTHER LANDS THAN OURS. There is hope that parliament will adjourn before two weeks. The rapidity with which the work of the session has progressed is a surprise even to the friends of the government.

European comment on the military lessons gained by the English in the Egyptian war is interesting. It is agreed that the infantry fire in the field has been overrated; that is to say, the perfection of modern gunnery has not lessened the chances of tactical defense or tactical aggression.

The medical profession of this city has acquired a new addition to its ranks in the arrival of Dr. John H. Moore, a fine looking gentleman with most prepossessing manners, who has opened an office at the southeast corner of Seventeenth street and Cass street.

Dr. John H. Moore, who for the past twelve years has practiced medicine in Waterford and vicinity, has come Omaha, Nebraska, where, for the future, he will engage in the practice of his profession.

SUSAN AND PHEBE.

We are not in the habit of wasting words upon dead issues. We have, however, thought best to re-publish elsewhere, the statements given to the St. Louis reporters by Susan B. Anthony and Phoebe Cousins, concerning the woman's suffrage campaign in Nebraska, and the now historic indignation meeting at Boyd's opera house.

Miss Anthony charges the defeat of the amendment principally to ignorant foreigners, whom she credits with casting one third of the entire vote of Nebraska, and to organized opposition from the enemies of prohibition and elements of bigotry, supported by an almost solid state press.

As a matter of fact the foreign vote in Nebraska is only one fifth of the entire vote, while the amendment was voted down by more than two thirds. There was no organized opposition to the amendment, and out of one hundred and fifty Nebraska papers less than twenty-five were pronounced against it, while more than one hundred county papers were its warm champions, and supporters.

In addition to this several hundred thousand copies of suffrage campaign documents were circulated among our voters, while the opposition contended itself with the few editorials that appeared in half a dozen papers that were courageous enough to make vigorous opposition to the amendment.

No party in this state was more thoroughly organized and equipped for an aggressive campaign than the suffragists. They invaded every town and village and almost every school district with their speakers, and schools churches and public halls were everywhere at their disposal.

No speeches were made in opposition except where they were invited or challenged to joint debate and even there every advantage was given to the women. Miss Anthony challenged the editor of this Bee to public debate. Her challenge gave him the right to open and close the discussion.

She was allowed to impose on the public as the challenged party, although she was the challenger, and her demand was complied with although it gave her undue advantage. She selected Miss Cousins to act as president of the meeting without consulting her opponent, and Miss Cousins in that position was allowed to join in the debate and do what no man occupying the chair would have cared to attempt.

When the debate was concluded the president asked the audience to decide upon the merits of the debaters in the following words: "All those who favor the degradation of woman and wife-beating, will now rise and be counted. All those opposed to the degradation of woman, &c., will rise. This was what woman suffragists would call a fair way of putting the question."

The version which these champion suffragists put upon the disgraceful scene at Boyd's opera house is in thorough keeping with the above. They do not say a word about the abusive harrangue of Miss Cousins in front of the court house, and her wanton assault upon Mr. Hitchcock, a repetition of which in the opera house drew forth from Mayor Boyd the retort, "It is as false as hell!"

They seek to create the impression that the mayor used that explosive in reply to the charge that there was some fraud in the printing of the tickets. Equally incorrect is the story about the outcome of the debate between Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Cousins at Blair. It is hardly worth while to touch upon these matters were it not for the false impression they create and injustice they do.

The unkindest out of all is the ungrateful reference to the great body of Nebraska editors who made such a gallant but hopeless fight for the amendment. Not a kind or good word for them, but wholesale abuse of the entire Nebraska newspaper fraternity. This shows that republicans would, if anything, be more ungrateful with women as voters than they now are without them.

European comment on the military lessons gained by the English in the Egyptian war is interesting. It is agreed that the infantry fire in the field has been overrated; that is to say, the perfection of modern gunnery has not lessened the chances of tactical defense or tactical aggression.

The most astonishing verdict, however, concerns the relative destructiveness of the English and Krupp guns. There seems to be no doubt that the English field pieces and siege guns excel the Krupp as much as the Martini-Henry rifle, the needle gun. This discovery will have an enormous effect in estimating the power of the German army if it joins Austria in the pending war with Russia.

That reported war is not likely to take place for some time to come. The declaration of the Hungarian diet finds no official endorsement in other portions of the empire. It is true that international relations are strained, but Austria is not ready for war, because Bismarck is not yet ready to fulfill the promises of the German-Austrian alliance.

There is no question that since the Austrian seizure of the Turkish provinces, under guaranty of the Berlin conference, well-informed politicians regarded a war between the rival powers a certainty. It has been postponed thus far by the adroit management of Bismarck--in embroiling France and England in Tunis and Egypt; for Russia can not move upon the Danube until she is sure of a French army on the Rhine to check the German battalions intended for the Austrian alliance.

How near the two countries came to war last spring will not be officially known until the present manipulators of statecraft have passed away. Had Gambetta remained in power another three months, the present status of European powers might now be vastly different from what it is. It is to neutralize the influence of France and to prevent an alliance between that nation and Russia that Bismarck has been skillfully slacking the cords. Last winter war was only postponed after Skobelev's frank divagation of Russian aspirations by the swift contrivances of Bismarck, because Germany was, singularly enough, unready--diplomatically. That is, France had not been then sufficiently neutralized by the hostility of Italy and the alienation of England; now these conditions are ostensibly changed.

TOO MANY NAMES. A Mortgagee Comes to Grief for Selling His Goods. And Is Also Charged With Forgery.

A complaint has been filed in Judge Bencke's court by C.B. Tutton against Wm. J. McIntyre, charging the latter with disposing of certain mortgaged property and the defendant put under $500 bail for his appearance for a preliminary examination to-day.

A complaint is also filed against John Gallagher by Capt. J. J. Neligh, charging him with forging a name upon a note given to P. W. B. Cooke, the storage and commission man, the bill in this case being $800.

It appears that McIntyre and Gallagher are one and the same person, the former being his true name. He has been in Omaha for a considerable time, living here under the name of Gallagher, which was his mother's name by a second marriage, and which he only threw off when he came to make out the mortgage to Mr. Fulton.

The property consisted of four horses, two wagons and two sets of harness. A complaint has also been filed against the brother of the above, James McIntyre, by Alfred Forman, charging him with obtaining money under false pretences, the amount being $100. The latter was sent to jail in default of $500 bail.

The penalty for selling mortgaged property has already been mentioned in connection with a similar case and is very severe, being imprisonment for ten years and a fine of $1,000. A great many give mortgages as they would a note; they get the money and the creditor may recover it as best he can. It is a very different transaction, however, as someone may loan to their grief. A mortgagor has no right to even remove mortgaged property from one house to another in the same city without permission of the mortgagee. If a man really has an intent to defraud the holder of a mortgage, he has a very poor idea of the care taken at the present day by those who let out money on chattel security or he would not try it.
