

GOTHAM GOSSIP.

The Metropolis Shrouded in Snow.

Glimpses of Life in a Great City--Men Milliners.

NEW YORK, January 15.--For the second time within a week the metropolis has been treated to an old time fall of snow, which would have seriously checked locomotion had it not been for the elevated railroad. Stage lines and surface roads have had to submit to innumerable delays, and yet during the "10 cent hours" on the elevated lines they have been crowded. At least a part of our well-dressed citizens appreciate company, as is evidenced not only by this fact, but that any day a score or two of them may be seen just previous to half-past 4 o'clock waiting in the various depots for the "5 cent hour" to come, and the same is true in a measure of the "penny hour" at the ferries. The railroads are a great convenience in a city whose avenues run a distance of ten or twelve miles, but they have effectually banished all the winter enjoyments of the ordinary run of travelers. In the old days, when a heavy snow fell, the stage lines put on their long box sleighs with eight or ten horses and dashed down Broadway at breakneck speed, crowded inside and out, and merrily snowballed by all the urthins on the way, without fear of arrest for the crime. The most famous of the lines was that of Kipp & Brown, who had a fine field for the sleigh on Hudson street and out on Eighth avenue to Chelsea--a locality which clustered about the Episcopal Theological seminary on Nineteenth street at Ninth avenue, and whose name is now almost forgotten. Nowadays the wealthy alone can enjoy the privilege of a sleigh ride, and they have taken every advantage of this week's opportunity. There is a fair prospect that the centennial of the EVACUATION OF NEW YORK by the British, November 25, 1883, will be celebrated with popular eclat. Our city fathers have appointed a committee to see that the thing is properly done, and they mean, of course, to spend some money. But what our citizens want is to see Bartholdi's statue of liberty erected on Bedloe's island by that day. Bartholdi writes that the statue overtops the houses of Paris already, and will be finished in the spring. The pedestal can be erected in the spring and summer, and in the meantime the statue will be shipped under care of Commander Gorringe, who brought over the Egyptian obelisk. About $100,000 of the $250,000 needed for the pedestal has been already subscribed, and rumor says that Jay Gould will complete the list as soon as $150,000 has been raised by the citizens. Cyrus W. Field has assumed a large measure of personal responsibility for it, there is no danger that the project will lapse. One of the most wonderful places in the city is

Do Not be Deceived. In these times of quack medicine advertisements everywhere, it is truly gratifying to find one remedy that is worthy of praise, and which really does as recommended. Hop Bitters we can recommend for as being a true and reliable remedy, and one that will do as recommended. They invariably cure Stomach and Liver Complaints, Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary difficulties. We know whereof we speak, and can readily say, give them a trial. Malden's Intuition. Indianapolis Journal. "Jennie, darling," he said, as they sat side by side in the big old-fashioned chair, whose generous arms had often encompassed a similar pair, "my sweet girl"--and the fire crackled and blazed and mapped its lively glances of light out of the darkening room; "my dear one"--and the fitful shadows came and went in the apartment, making grotesque figures upon the handsome walls; "light of my life"--and the pretty head nestled confidently against his manly vest, through whose folds the beating of his tender heart was audible; "my beacon light"--and he pressed in his honest palm her little hand, and so little as she said, "my little pet"--and outside the wind blew fierce, while dashing rain smote hard against the pane, heightening the peaceful influence of the glowing grate; "my own dear girl"--and the tremor of his voice was born of purest love; "my guiding star"--he said--he said--well, we hardly know what else he did say, but it was enough--with a woman's intuition she knew his meaning, and scooped him in at once.

THE BAD AND WORTHLESS. Are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as the whole world is proved by Hop Bitters the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expediting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names, and which used the word "Hop" or "Hops" and which used away the heads of people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch of cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

The Best Salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all other eruptions, and positively cures piles. Willing to Pay for Advice. A prominent Detroit, who has the reputation of knowing all about horses, was coming down Woodward avenue the other day when a stranger halted him, inquired if he were Mr. S-and-S, and added: "I have walked seven miles this morning to secure your advice. Will you go to the harness shop with me?" The citizen turned back and walked three blocks to the shop. The stranger then showed him two horse brushes, and said: "This brush is 20 cents and that one two shillings. Which would you advise me to purchase?" "I'd take the dearer," replied the disgraced adviser. "Did you bring

THE SEVENTH REGIMENT is a lucky organization. It has always had the luck to "get in" with the public, and to get at the pocket as well as the ear of our best citizens and our most fashionable society. This year its luck is as usual. It has led off the ball season with a crush that coined dollars for the treasury of the regiment and made rival organizations turn green with envy.

AND SHE KEEPS UP.

It was coolly planned and deliberately executed in cold blood. They sat by the fire, and as he perused his paper she was busy with thoughts of Christmas. By and by he walked up to-day. "Did any parcels for me come up to-day?" "No, dear," she replied as her face grew white as snow. "Have you been buying anything?" "No, nothing much. I happened in at Blank's this afternoon, and as he was selling out his slippers at cost, I bought me three pairs. Guess I'll be fixed for the next ten years to come."

Her Majesty's Salary. Her Majesty enjoyed a very large income. It was voted to her in order to enable her to maintain the "state and dignity" of the crown. She lives in comparative retirement. Far from complaining of this, I think that it has its advantages; for it proves that the country gets on exceedingly well without "state and dignity" being maintained. But then one cannot help perceiving that her Majesty either has too little money when it was maintained, or has too much now that it is not; for the amount of the civil list was not calculated upon the assumption that a portion of it was to be put into a stocking. As it is, a considerable portion of the civil list is in reality a vote of money to provide means to corrupt the House of Lords, by giving those of its members who are true to their party allegiance large annual grants for walking backwards with a colored stick, or some other equally unprofitable eccentricity. Much, indeed, of the expenditure of the civil list is in no way benefits the sovereign, who is no personal gainer by sitting in a gilt coach drawn by cream-colored horses. If any one profits it is the speculator. If the tax-paying spectator desires to pay for it, let him, but it is hard on the sovereign that he should be rendered responsible. Equally so, if the tax-payer likes to pay a nobleman a few thousands per annum for walking backwards, he does what he pleases with his own money. But why should the nation be adopted that those thousands go into the pocket of the sovereign?

Booklyn has her Beecher and her Talange, and Boston has her Phillips Brooks; but we, alas! have no clergyman to work slippers for and to bow down and worship. I should say that we had none. Mr. Rainforth is only four and thirty, and is six feet four in his stockings. He is athletic in build and in habit, and can pull an oar or bat a cricket ball with the best of them. He is an Irishman, and was educated at Cambridge. The ladies of St. George's have been getting the rectory to right for a fortnight past, and it is not ready yet, but the finishing touches will soon be added.
