THE FALL OF FRANCE

Predicted by the London Times Unless a Change Takes Place Soon:

The Ex-Empress Eugenie Invited to Leave Paris by President Grevy.

Her Visit Thought to Have a Political Significance.

FRANCE.

Special Dispatches to THE BEE

THE EX EMPRESSES GAME.

PARIS, January 24 —The departure of Eugenie attracted a large crowd who evinced the warmest sympathy. The Grand Duke Constantine carried to her a private message from President Grevy that her presence in Paris was undesirable. The difficulty whether her departure is due to the message or the persuasion of her friends, all of whom were grieved by her imprudent action. There was no deep laid scheme in her coming, but on hearing of the arrest of Prince Napoleon she telegraphed Roupere that she was coming with attendants and asked to have the same rooms which were occupied by her husband in 1848 This was the only point of political significance in the whole affair. The cabinet can certainly only continue in office two or three days longer. During the excitement concerning the expulsion of pretenders, Prince Napoleon seems to be entirely lost sight of. One would think that the Orleans princes were the only persons affected by the serious proposals of the government.

MEETINGS AND EXPLANATIONS.

PARIS, January 24.—The cabinet council have held meetings at Elysee. The ministry has not resigned. They will give some explanations before the committee of the chamber of deputies this afternoon

WILL GO TO ENGLAND.

PARIS, January 24.—The ex-Empress Eugenie will start for England to-day.

ENGLAND ON FRANCE.

LONDON, January 24.—The Times, in a leading editorial on the recent events in France, says, "There can be little doubt, if statesmen continue to be wanting, that the republic will go headlong to ruin. That the French people are aware of this is an explanation of the panics caused by the difficulties of the minister so little resembling the indispensable genius of DuClerc.

DISTURBS THE SPECULATORS.

BERLIN, January 24.—The crisis in France greatly disturbs the Berlin bourse.

PARTIAL HARMONY.

PARIS, January 24.—Members of the cabinet unanimously resolved to oppose Ficquet's motion, but a complete agreement does not exist among them in regard to the provisions of the government bill. The ministers meet again to-morrow to decide finally in relation to the questions at issue. Hopes of an agreement between the ministers and the majority of the chamber of deputies have not been abandoned in parliamentary circles.

The Temps claims the disquietude existing throughout the country does not arise from an abandonment of the policy of reserve hitherto observed by princes of former dynasties, but from the fear revived by recent incidents that the republican regime is incompatible with stability of any kind. The Temps charges the government with want of coolness and directing power, and expresses the hope that reason will soon regain the upper hand.

A CONFERENCE

Duclerc, Fallieres, Doves and Billot held a conference this afternoon with the committee on bills relative to the question of expulsion of the Orleans princes. Duclerc stated he considered Ficquet's motion too extreme and offensive to the ministry, considering the rigorous measures adopted towards Prince Jerome. Billot laid stress upon the bad effect of the adoption of Ballues' motion providing for cashiering of the Orleans princes might produce upon the army. He considered inviolability of rank was a conservative principle in the army. The ministers will confer with the committee again to-morrow.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE EMPRESS.

PARIS, January 24 —The imperialists declare the ex-empress was not requested to quit France, but left only because she feared the marks of sympathy she received might develop into a political demonstration and thereby compromise her friends. Among her visitors were Marshals McMahon and Canrobert.

THE MISSION A FAILURE.

LONDON, January 24 —A Paris special says: Ex-Empress Eugenie was refused permission to visit Prince Jerome. Nobody supposed she really wanted to see him. Her mission, whatever it was, failed in its object.

The Standard correspondent has information that the ex empress expressed to Prince Napoleon her general approbation of the terms of the prince's manifesto, but added thereto the recommendation that he should formally renounce his claims as the heir of the Bonapartes in favor of Prince Victor and so seal the union of the imperialist party and confirm the testament of the prince imperial. Just before the ex-empress departed, a young priest pushed his way through the crowd of friends who surrounded the ex-empress' carriage. After kissing her hand respectfully he whispered to her a few moments. He then withdrew and joined another priest, with whom he left the station. The incident caused some sensation, as no one seemed to know who the young priest was.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS.

THE ARCTIC PARTY.

LONDON, January 24.—Some St. Petersburg newspapers state that the bodies of two members of Lieutenant Chipp's party have been found at Chatan bay, and will pass through St. Petersburg in February on the way to New York. Probably the report has the same origin as the statement of the finding of two corpses of the members of the same party, which was published in New York on the 5th inst., and afterward discredited.

JAIL OR BAIL.

DUBLIN, Jan. 24.—At the queen's bench division to day Davitt, Healy and Quinn, charged with inciting to lawlessness, were ordered to find securities for their good behavior or go to prison for six months. A week's time was allowed them to make the choice.

The emperor and empress and other members of the royal family, Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, Archduke Charles, Duke and Duchess of Edinburg and various princes and diplomatic representatives were present. The services were imposing, amid the firing of a salute of 36 guns and three salvoes from three battalions. The emperor was much affected.

NOTICE TO BRITAIN.

SOFIA, January 24.—Bulgaria has given notice to the British diplomatic agent demanding admission to the London conference on the Danubian question.

SPANISH POLITICS.

MADRID, January 24 —Members of the dynastic left party in the cortes have issued a circular ordering the formation of committees in towns and villages, and delaring that the liberals desire the constitution of two great parties, liberals and conservatives, which shall promote the interests of Spain, assure prosperity, and close the era of revolutions.

THE WRECKED STEAMER.

Additional Facts Concerning the Sinking of the Cimbria.

The Captain of the Sultan Exonerated.

Special Dispatches to THE BEE.

NOT THE CAPTAIN.

LONDON, January 24.—The rumor that Captain Vansen, of the Cimbria, has been saved and brought here by a passing steamer, is discredited and not confirmed.

A FRUITLESS SEARCH.

HAMBURG, January 24.—Four tugs have returned from a fruitless search for passengers of the Cimbria this morning.

INCIDENTS OF THE WRECK.

HAMBURG, January 24.—The incidents on board the Cimbria, of the Indian who had to be disarmed of his tomahawk, of the surgeon who leaped into the sea, and the scenes among passengers clinging to the rigging, were related by one Wegert, a cabin passenger, who, on the advice of the chief officer, climbed into the rigging. Those in the rigging say they saw a boat lowered from the steamer Sultan, probably to repair her own damage.

A Victim of the Wreck

Special Dispatch to THE BEE.

CLEVELAND, January 24.—It is now known here that among the passengers lost on the steamship Cimbria was Miss Dora Henninges, known to the lyric stage as M'lle Dorani, who was returning to her home in Cleveland from nearly a year's course of musical studies in Europe. Mapleson found her at the Cincinnati college of music and engaged her for his company last season. She made a highly successful debut as prima donna in the opera of "Fidelo" at Chicago, and after the close of the engagement went abroad to study with famous teachers. Her career promised to be a brilliant one.

Another Statement.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE

HAMBURG, January 24 —Capt. Cuttil of the Sultan says: "I had twelve passengers on board, and my first duty was to look after the condition of my own ship. An hour was occupied in shoving up the collision bulkhead, and stopping holes in the ship's bow with beds, etc. Then I set about looking for the other vessel. I burned blue lights and sounded the steam whistle for two hours after the accident. I remained in the vicinity until 8 in the morning, when, seeing nothing, and the fog being being still dense, I left for Hamburg." In answer to the inquiry whether he sent off boats he said the fog was so dense he deemed it imprudent to send boats out. In reply to a question how he accounted for the accident, the captain said: "The Cimbria should have kept on her course, seeing the Sultan's green light." His other statements all tend to exonerate him, as his lights were in a proper position, the rule being when the green light of one vessel faces the green light of another vessel for each vessel to keep her course ahead, which the Cimbria did not do.

Carver and Bogardus.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE.

CHICAGO, January 24.—The American Field will publish a reply from Dr. W. F. Carver to A. H. Bogardus in relation to the latter's proposition for pigeon matches for the world's wing championship. Carver declines Bogardus' proposition, claiming that he (Carver) is the wing shot champion and the only thing for Bogardus to do is to shoot for the champion cup. In turn he proposes to shoot Bogardus a match of 100 birds for $10,000 or less at Louisville on February 14 or any later date to suit. The articles of agreement are in the hands of Dr. Rowe, editor of The Field.

The January Corn Corner.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE.

CHICAGO, January 24.—John Given declines the appointment of commissioner of the southwestern passenger pool.

As stated yesterday, a number of members of the Board of Trade called on the board of directors, under the recently enacted rule empowering them to fix the price in case of corners above which the buyer cannot be called on for margins, the claim in this case being the corner on January corn. The decision was a decided victory for the bears, the marginal price being set at 13¾ below the closing price on 'change to-day. The board passed the following:

RESOLVED, That this board construe the object of the rule under which these proceedings were had, was intended to secure full protection to both buyer and seller rather than undertake to determine the actual value for final settlement; with this view and not desiring to be misunderstood, the board decides members of the board of trade under the rule shall have the right to call margins on contracts for No. 2 corn for delivery for January on the basis of 55 cents as the value of No. 2 corn for marginal purposes only.

Caving of a Mine.

Special Dispatch to THE BEE

WILKESBARRE, Pa., January 24.—The entire extent of the cave in at the Delaware and Hudson mines this afternoon appears to cover a space of nearly forty acres, most of which is covered with dwellings and other buildings. The disaster is accounted for upon the theory that the props put in the mine some years ago have rotted and given away. The general apprehensions are that the present is only the beginning of more serious trouble. Miners say the accident is the result of pillar robbing.

OVER THE FALLS.

An Old Philadelphia Merchant Jumps Into Niagara Rapids.

And Finds Eternity in That Dreadful Cataract.

Particulars of a Sensational Suicide

PHILADELAHIA, January 22.—Thos. Hilsen, who committed suicide at Niagara Falls this morning by jumping into the rapids above the falls, was 65 years of age. He was engaged in business as a wool broker at No. 138 Chestnut street, and has been a resident of this city for thirty years past. He was a German by birth, and was exceptionally well educated. He was a linguist, being able to converse freely in French, Greek, German, Spanish and Italian. He went into the wool business about twenty-three years ago, and previous to the war carried on a prosperous trade. He formed partnership with George W. Bond, of Boston, the name of the house in the latter city being George W. Bond & Co., and in Philadelphia as Thomas Hilsen & Co. Eight or ten years ago the firm had some financial troubles, which Hilsen claimed was due to the speculative inclinations of some of the junior partners, but at all events Hilsen left the city with all the available cash he could secure, and the announcement was made that

HE HAD DECAMPED

with $40,000 or $50,000 of the firm's funds The elder Mr Bond happened to be in Europe at the time, and receiving telegraphic information of Hilsen's flight, caused his arrest on the arrival of the steamship in which he had taken passage. M. Bond, it is said, claimed that he had frightened $5,500 out of the fugitive, but Hilsen told his intimate friends upon his return that he had voluntarily handed over the amount named to his partner and that the latter had paid that amount over and nothing more to the firm's creditors, being about 60 per cent of the obligations. This is the story as told by one of Hilsen's friends, but the exciting story of the suicide's career included also a criminal prosecution, which was brought by Gregg Brothers, the well known wool merchants, who charged him with the embezzlement of $6 000. This was in 1876, and Hilsen, having come here to witness the centennial exhibition, was arrested and tried. The jury disagreed and it is stated that the case was subsequently compromised. Among the most intimate of

MR. HILSEN'S FRIENDS

in this city were E. A. Green, of the firm of E. A. Green & Co., wool merchants in Letitia street below Market, and Kednard & Thorpe, dyers. The latter gentlemen occupied the office No. 138 Chestnut street, with Mr. Hilsen and the Camden Thread company, manufacturers of spool cotton. The firm of Kennard & Thorpe received the following letter this morning: "I found of late that I cannot make a living, and, therefore, resolved to die. I don't wish to wrong you, but I am compelled to pay you in merchandise, instead of money, by transferring to you all my property at auction price valuation, amounting to $100. I wish to pay one month's rent, having no doubt that you will have no difficulty in disposing of the place I occupied. The way our account would stand is as follows: I owe you $118 80 rent; I owe you one month, $17 07; total $135.87; off inclosed bill of sale, $100; balance $35 87, for which I inclose check of Kennard & Thorpe. I hope you will forgive a little inconvenience I had put you to in order to fill some small but sacred obligations.

Yours, etc.,

(Signed) THOS. HILSEN."

Mr. Green also received by this morning's mail

THE FOLLOWING LETTER,

which was dated January 15 and postmarked January 20:

"When I left the little keepsake with you I had made up my mind to give up life, not that I am tired of it On the contrary, I quit with regret this pleasant habit of existence. I found I never suffered from sickness, and the equanimity of my mind followed me through thick and thin. But since I opened my little shop, which would have prospered if others had treated me as liberally as you did, I found myself on an inclined plane, being unable to make expenses. I might have gone to board for $5 00 a week and locked myself in my room, but I came to the conclusion that I would not die piecemeal and live not extravagantly, but like a gentleman as long as I had something to fall back on. This something got smaller and smaller, and now is eaten up. To get along further I would have to run into debt and do all sorts of little dirty things. I won't. Therefore, good bye. I am going to go over the falls. I write to you because you have always been kind to me and I explain my step so that you may tell people the truth The kindest wishes for your happiness and prosperity. From gratefully yours,

THOS. HILSEN."

"Please give my little Ed the inclosed $5, and tell him to keep my old clothes in the wardrobe and change in the drawer."

There was no doubt in the mind of either Mr. Greeen or his other correspondents that the dead merchant had some time ago formed to take his life. "He probably made," said Mr. Green, "$2,000 or $3,000 a year, but he spent $5,000 or $6 000, and being entirely without religious scruples, and believing that the end of all came when he died by his own hand he evidently concluded that he would rather die than lead a burdensome life I always found him the very soul of honor, and he was one of the first to lend me a helping hand. I had a great many transactions with him, and they were all, on his part, those of an honest business man."

The suicide was said by some to be a widower, and by others to have a wife in Europe, who left him a dozen years or more ago. It is also stated that he has a son living in Chicago. There is no doubt in the minds of those who know Mr. Hilsen that his inability to live within his income was the sole cause of his suicidal purpose. Last Wednesday his colored office boy, Edward Butler, received a postal card from his employer, saying he would be home Sunday if he "was in the land of the living."

HIS PA GOES SKATING

Said He Was Going to Spread Himself and He Did.

Peck's Sun.

"What broke your pa up at the roller skaking riuk?" asked the grocery man.

"Oh, everything broke him up," said the bad boy. "He is spilt up so ma buttons the top of his pants to his collar button, like a bicycle rider. Well, he had no business to have told me and my chum that he used to be the best skater in North America, when he was a boy. He said he skated once from Albany to New York in an hour and eighty minutes. Me and my chum thought if pa was such a terror on skates we would get him to put on a pair of roller skates and enter him as the 'great unknown' and clean out the whole gang. We told pa that he must remember that roller skates were different from ice skates, and that maybe he couldn't skate on them; but he said it didn't make any difference what they were so long as they were skates, and he would just paralyze the whole crowd. So we got a pair of big roller skates for him, and, while we were strapping them on, pa he looked at the skaters glide around on the smooth waxed floor just as though they were greased. Then pa looked at the skates on his feet, after they were fastened—sort of forlorn like, the way a horse thief does when they put shackles on his legs, and I told him if he was afraid he couldn't skate with them we would take them off; but he said he would beat anybody there was there, or bust a suspender. Then we straightened pa up and pointed him toward the middle of the room, and he said 'leggo,' and we just give him a little push to start him, and he began to go. Well, by gosh, you'd a died to have seen pa trying to stop. You see, you can't stick in your heel and stop, like you can on ice skates, and pa soon found that out, and he began to turn sideways, and then he threw his arms and walked on his heels, and he lost his hat, and his eyes began to stick out, cause he was going right against an iron post. One arm caught the post and he circled around it a few times, and then he let go and began to fall, and, sir, he kept falling all across the room, and everybody got out of the way except a girl, and pa grabbed her by the polonaise like a drowning man grabs at a straw, though there wasn't any straws in her polonaise as I knows of, but pa just pulled her along as though she was done up in a shawl-strap, and his feet went out from under him, and he struck on his shoulders and kept agoing, with the girl dragging along like a bundle of clothes. If pa had had another pair of roller skates on his shoulders, and casters on his ears, he couldn't have slid along any better. Pa is a short, thick man, and as he was rolling along on his back, he looked like a sofa with casters on being pushed across the room by a girl. Finally pa came to the wall and had to stop, and the girl fell right across him, with her roller skates in his neck and she called him an old brute, and told him if he didn't let go of her polonaise she would murder him. Just then my chum and me got there and we amputated pa from the girl and lifted him up, and I told him for heaven's sake to let us take off the the skates, cause he couldn't skate any more than a cow, and pa was mad and said for us to let him alone, and he could skate all right, and we let go and he struck out again. Well, sir, I was ashamed. An old man like pa ought to know better than to try to be a boy. This last time pa said he was going to spread himself, and if I am any judge of a big spread, he did spread himself. Somehow the skates had got turned around sideways on his feet, and his feet got going in different directions, and pa's feet were getting so far apart, that I was afraid I would have two pa's, half the size, with one leg apiece. I tried to get him to take up a collection of his legs, and get them in the same ward, but his arms flew around and one of them hit me on the nose, and I thought if he wanted to strike the best friend he had he could run his old legs his-self When he began to separate I could hear the bones crack; but maybe it was his pants, but anyway he came down on the floor like one of those fellows in a circus who spreads himself and he kept going, and finally he surrounded an iron post with his legs, and stopped, and he looked pale, and the proprietor of the rink told pa if he wanted to give a flying trapeze performance he would have to go to the gymnasium, and he couldn't skate on his shoulders any more, cause other skaters were afraid of him. Then pa said he would kick the liver out of the proprietor of the rink, and he got up and steadied himself, and then he tried to kick the man, but he heels went up to wonct, and pa turned a back somerset and struck right on his vest in front. I guess it knocked the breath out of him, for he didn't speak for a few minutes, and then he wanted to go home, and we put him on the street car and he laid down on the hay and rode home. O the work we had to get pa's clothes off. He had cricks in his back, and everywhere, and ma was away to one of the neighbors, to look at the presents, and I had to put liniment on pa, and I made a mistake and got a bottle of furniture polish, and put it on pa and rubbed it in, and when ma came home pa smelled like a cellin at a charity funeral, and ma said there was no way of getting that varnish off pa till it wore off. Pa says holidays are a condemned nuisance anyway. He will have to star in the house all this week.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Messrs. Editors —

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. She says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."
