A Mouse that Wore a Diamond. Boston Journal.

Several months ago a lady residing on Beacon street took off a number of rings from her finger and placed them on a table. After washing her hands she returned to the room to replace her rings, when, to her astonishment, one of them, a diamond ring, was missing.

She was certain that she took the ring from her finger, and equally certain that no one could have entered the five minutes she had been in the bath room. A search was instituted, but the missing ring, valued at $300, was not found. A few weeks since the lady was much annoyed by mice. Almost nightly they held their revels. They not only destroyed her sleep, but choice loaves were mutilated. The lady procured a trap, one of the old fashioned kind, and having baited it with a tempting bit of cheese, placed it in the room of her suspicions.

On the following morning she had three fine silky mice of various sizes. One of them was so peculiarly constructed that it attracted her attention, as it appeared to have a string tied around its body. The servant girl was instructed to drown the captives and reset the trap, and she was about to throw the dead mice into the dirt barrel when her eyes were attracted by a sparkle from what proved to be the lost diamond ring which was not perceptible when the mouse was alive, but which came to light after the severe soaking which the mouse received. It is supposed that in his haste to get away he ran his head through the ring, and subsequent struggles only forced it over his forelegs, where it remained.

One voice all over the land goes up from mothers, that says, "My daughters are so feeble and sad, with no strength, little appetite, and listless at the least exertion. What can we do for them?" The answer is simple and full of hope. One to four weeks' use of Hop Bitters will make them healthy, rosy, sprightly, and cheerful.

The young people of Des Moines have developed a species of influenza, which commences with hoarseness and coughing and is attended with violent vomiting.

Enslaves for Dairy Cows. Correspondent County Gentleman.

Such grave uncertainties seem to pervade the minds of many farmers as to the use of ensilage as food for milk cows; such doubts as to a possible peculiar taste of the milk, cream or butter made from this food, that with your permission I will give my experience of last season, hoping it may lead some of the doubters to the right track.

Last year I built a silo of 200 tons capacity, wholly of stone and Rammed with a frame and roof for cover. It is a good one (I believe in no other); no water can get in; no sap from the corn can get out so many complain of when their silos are not half built, or made from stale cement, or any poor material. On account of the long extended drought in this part of New Jersey, I was able to scrape together a few good, but an indifferent lot, but dried, grown and half grown corn, some thirty tons of ensilage after cured. This, however, was enough to satisfy my mind on this subject, if there had ever been any doubts. I used it as food for cows 110 days continuously, until all was fed out. Within a week from the time we began feeding hay, and though with an addition of grain, the cows lost at least 25 per cent of milk; the cream did not make as much butter, and the butter was not of as good color or flavor. During the time of feeding ensilage we were unable to discover any other than the most satisfactory taste to milk, cream or butter. The cows were in the most perfect state of health, and kept in fine condition.

I raised a Jersey calf dropped in September, which had all it wanted of ensilage, and I will show it any day beside any man's calf six months older.

I fed for ninety days eight western steers, which averaged a gain of over one and a half pounds per day. The ration for cows and oxen was twenty-two pounds of ensilage morning and night, and fifteen pounds of cut corn-stalks at noon. The cows had three quarts of cornmeal and two quarts of wheat bran per day, and the steers had four quarts of cornmeal for the last forty-five days. Our success with the steers quite astonished my neighbors, who feed in the old way. The butcher says the cattle slaughtered well, and that the meat was remarkably fine and gave him every satisfaction. The use of poor ensilage, made from corn half ripe or frost bitten, I have reason for believing, would not give such satisfactory results. I am one who believes that to make good ensilage the corn should be cut at the right time, cut the right length, put away in a good silo and covered over nicely and then well and thoroughly weighted down. The seed planted should be the southern good seed, drilled in rows thirty to forty inches apart, and the ground cultivated the same as any corn. The ensilage should be cut three-eighths to three-quarters of an inch long. It is important to have a good water-tight silo and heavy weighting—300 to 350 pounds to the square foot of surface. I believe in giving the animals all they will eat up clear, be it more or less. Contentment means fat in the humane tribe as well as riches in the human.

THE BAD AND WORTHLESS

Are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums to put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in away to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Beware of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust no other else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.
