pany, a roomfull of girls are employed. So general has the telephone come into use for business purposes, so frequent and important are the messages dient to rules and susceptible of discipline. But their natural restraints of temper and freedom from outbursts of bad language are considered their primary recommendation. On an average every girl, while on duty, and their usus hours are from 7 or 8 in the morning until 7 in the even ing, has the supervision of eighty telephones. Under the new system each girl has a group of 100 wires, and ing that "any use of the telephone for profane, indecent or rude language, or for any purpose rather than respectful, bona fide business or social messages, shall terminate the contract," and the company insists on this to the best of its ability, although not always meeting with entire success. VULGARIANS AT THE PHONE. The young girls employed, coming from refined home, though poor, have always shown great sensitiveness against any indignity or indecorous speech reaching them through the telephones. It sometimes happens that one of them seated at her post, with the repressed air which all telephone girls get from hearing messages all day long and not being allowed to speak a syllable to each other, will burst into tears and become almost hysterical. Very often she will not tell what is said, but usually some insult has been offered, very often comand since his arrival has devoted much time to the study of English, so that he now can speak the language fluently. Quite often when the superintendent calls upon a young broker or other person to complain about an objectionable message, they say it was intended for "the other fellow," or was an "aside" directed to some one in the room, or get out of it by some such excuse.

The young woman who has accepted Ah Hong for better or worse is, or was, Miss Addie Forman, of 814 Mackinaw street. She is pretty, and about 18 years of age, and the story of the courtship smacks of the romantic. Ah Hong, who is now 24 years of age, came to this city something like five years ago, and since his arrival has devoted much it. On Thursday morning Ah Hong dropped in at Magistrate Collins' office and requested that gentleman to be we never notice such indignities prepared to marry him at 4 o'clock in prepared to marry him at 4 o'clock in the sizernoon, when he would return with the damsel. At the appointed hour he appeared with Miss Furman, and, both having answered all questions to the satisfaction of the magistrate, the connubial knot was tied in the presence of Special Officer Slater and Constables Donahue, Kane and McCarthy. In honor of the event Mr. Hong held a reception on Friday, which was largely attended by his almond-eyed countrymen and by a number of the lady friends of the bride.
