DURKEE'S SALAD DRESSING is composed of the freshest, purest and choicest condiments money will buy.

It surpasses any that can be made at home, is cheaper, saves labor and all anxiety.

Money is the unmarriageable. One of the most solid and substantial investments...

There was a crack in the kitchen door--a crevice large enough for one to put a hand under--and early in the morning Mrs. Crippe began saying: "Now, Crippe, don't let this day pass without nailing down a cleat to stop that crevice. It will let in more cold this winter than two tons of coal can drive out."

And Crippe began saying: "Certainly, my dear--certainly. That crevice shall be stopped this very day."

On fifteen different occasions in November she reminded him of the fact that he had forgotten the crevice. In December the number of occasions was twenty. During the month of January she spoke of it twenty-two times. In February she began referring to the matter at each meal, and the other day she nailed him down with the remark: "Crippe, I am going down town, and I'll stop on my way and ask a carpenter to come up and fix that door."

"I'll fix it."

"No you won't! You just let it alone. I'll have a carpenter here before night, and that door will be fixed."

"I say I'll fix it myself--right away--now," and in five minutes he had saw and hammer and cleat, and was at the job.

"Mrs. Crippe went on chucking over her victory, and upon her return her husband said: "Well the old crevice is shut up."

"You fixed it, eh?"

"Fixed it better than any carpenter you could have sent up, and in ten minutes, too. Come and see."

She took one look at his work and then sat down and whispered: "Crippe, you just missed it by a hair's breadth."

"What?"

"Being born a fool! You have nailed the cleat to the floor inside the door!"

So he had. He had shut the crevice and door, too, and when he came to realize it he walked slowly out into the back yard and tried to saw his head off on the clothes line.
