INDIAN WHALERS How the Savages of the North Capture the Levisthan.

At Neah Bay, around Cape Fiattery and down the coast from Tatoosh to Gray's harbor, live various tribes of of original men in the known world. lence, for the yelling, whooping, aing-Until the incoming of the white man ing, crouching, dancing, dusky, half and the appliances of civilization their naked figures, as they plunged in and entire support was drawn from the out the ruddy blaze of the huge driftocean, which, in their light canoes—a simple shell hollowed from the trunk of a giant sedar, they daily visited to catch the halibut and seal—the one Bob Ingersoll's famous doctrines. The catch the halibut and seal—the one furnishing their food, the other their cament. But it was to pursue a nobler game than these that brought their daring qualities into full play. It was in chase of the mighty whale they found at once their greatest pastime and the main source of their livelihood. With no boats but their canoes, with ne weapons but their bone. noes, with ne weapons but their bone pointed spears, and for lines, ropes made of twisted sealskin or the tough inner bark of the cedar they sought the levisther on the days and solutions. It is left but a few well-stripped bones, on and over which the village to bone to bone to bone t the leviathan on the deep and slew him. These exploits form the theme of many of their songs and stories, sure directly around the stories, axtending entirely around the stories in the animal and including the dorsal fin, is large and comfortable houses on the coast and at the potlaches and other festivities with which they fill in the coast and at the potlaches and other festivities with which they fill in the coast and at the potlaches and other poor was the first to strike the whale. THE HOMES OF THE WHALES. The Indians on the coast are not the drunken, worthless vagabonds that so many of their brethern on the sound have become. The fatal influences of the white man's "civilization" have reached them, but in a moderate degree, and so far have tended rather to elevate than degrade them. They still hunt the whale, but it is with the harpoon and lance and whale line, and the homes to which they return with their spoils are in many cases built in strong and nest manner of sawed umber, with glass windows and paneled doors. Few of them speak any English and a great portion do not know the "Chineok," the jargon of the Indian traders. With all their primitive wants readily supplied by the expenditure of but slight toil, and with abundance of ready money from the sale of sealskins and whale oil, their condition is much better than that of many a white man who looks down with contempt on the siwarh. The whaling, which was formerly the main resource, has been superseded of late years by the much more profitable sealing business, which in the past furnished them with but their clothing but now brings them large sums f money, and as a consequence, all the conforts and even the luxuries of civilization which they either desire or know how to enjoy; but it is still followed when opportunity presents itself with all the ardor of former days. The writer, last fall, while on a visit to Quillute, some forty miles below Cape Fattery, where a small tribe of Indians live, had the pleasure to witness the capture of a whale, and more exciting sport we never engaged in. We were standing on a hill in the neighborhood of the Indian village, when a sudden commotion among the Indians attracted our attention. A shouting boy rushing wildly past was hailed, but simply uttering some wild yells and pointing toward the ocean he rushed on. Following the direction of his finger we saw the foamy spray from the nostrils of a blowing whale, thrown into the air, and a moment later a carnest man making his way to a privand jumped hurriedly into one of the larger cances, and in a few moments, mixed up in the bottom of the canoe with a collection of harpoons, seal-skin bladders, lances, ropes, etc., and amidst a chorus of yells and whoops that would have made the incurable ward of an insane asylum seem as tesy. It was Bob Burdette and his quiet as a church social before supper, invalid wife. This is an index of his we were off. Four other cances accompanied us, but the fifth, through some mishap, was capsized in the surf that has welcomed him, the converse and was delayed too late for the first with brilliant men, the club, the of the sport. The dozen or more paddles in each cance flashed like lightning, as each one strained every nerve to distance its competitors for the fireside and lived on his love and symglory and profit of getting the first pathy. harpoon.

Four or five miles were run at this rate, when his at it, and in due time we had a lecture pace slackened and the hindmost on our hands, 'The Rise and Fall o canoe was hauled cautiously past the others, and another harpoon was dextrously planted, and this canoe assumed the front place in the procession, with the others bringing up the rear. Another wild rush, but shorter than the first, and a repetition of the performance, until there were half a dozen harpoons affixed and double as many sealskin bladders drifting around the now exhausted monster, preventing his sinking or sounding. Finally, after hours of a prolonged fight for his life against his relentless foes, the coup de grace was given with the lance, a final plungs, and he was ours. A HUMORIST'S WIFE.

Making Fun for the Masses at a S Woman's Bedside.

Bob Burdette is known the country A Countryman Who Was Not, De over as the humorist of the Burlington Hawkeye. He is the most successful of our funny men. His books have a constant and increasing sale. His salary from the Hawkeye gives him a handsome income, and his little sketches command the best prices from the magazines. In addition he has $150 to $250 a night whenever he wants to take a lecturing tour of one or twenty weeks. His humor is delicate, true and abundant, and he is an honor to the lighter American writers friendly manner, sald: because of his literary achievement.

But better and more honorable than all this is the story of his hearthstone. though death should at once claim the young man, evidently a friend of the bride. The ceremony took place in assaulted youth, rushed up and defifteen minutes, the little lady being manded to know the trouble. The countryman had become warmed up

Nor was there lacking a practical reward of this devotion. Mrs. Burdette has been the inspiration of her husband's life, at once his spur and the rich quality and the spontanelty of Bob's humor and the homely fisvor ot his invalid wife. He tells himself

"One day when she was lying helpless, she said she believed that I could write a lecture and deliver it success that lecture, and, from time to time ! rebelled with tears and groans and prayers. I told her that I was too little, that I ban no voice, and that I couldn't lecture anyhow. She kept me on our hands, 'The Rise and Fall of the Mustache.' This was all right enough, but now, how to get the au-dience. I thought I would try it first at Keckuk. If I delivered it first in Burlington, even though it were tame, tamer, tamest, I thought they might put me on the book. But Keokuk hated Burlington, and I knew if it was fiat the Keokuk people would say so. Mrs. Burdette said, as she was responsible for that lecture, she was going to hear it delivered. So I carried her aboard the cars. We went to Keokuk, and the people pronounced it

From the New York Tribune

A thrifty-looking countryman, probably sixty years of age, bent on seeing all that was on view in the shop win-dows and the streets, attracted a large crowd when he reached Murray street and Broadway yesterday morning. A young man dressed in the height of reshion and wearing a tall silk hat, walked up to the country-man, and putting his hand out in a
