MARRIED BY THE MAYOR.

A Son of George Francis Train United to a Daughter of the Late Charles B. Thorne's Widow.

New York Journal.

There was unusual interest yesterday morning in the mayor's office, in consequence of the notice given some days before of the marriage to be celebrated by his honor between a son of Mr. George Francis Train and a daughter of the widow of the late Charles B. Thorne, the well-known actor.

Soon after 10 o'clock a party of ladies escorted by two young gentlemen entered the mayor's office and signified a wish that Mr. Edson should perform the marriage service for two of their number. The young men were Elsie McHenry Train and Geo. Train, and the ladies were Mrs. Geo. Train, and the former was the prospective bridegroom. Their sister, Miss Eliza Willing Brown, of Philadelphia—and with her was her mother in the deepest mourning. Holding the bride's hand, she looked at the bridegroom with a pretty, faltering smile. There were two or three dozen of spectators, and all the party were pretty little bouquets which had been sent down by Mr. Train, senior.

The usual routine was gone over, but it was observed that the objectionable word "obey" was not spoken in reference to the request of the bridegroom's father. Accompanying the basket of bouquets was a card on which Mr. Train had written one of those peculiar poetical orations for which he is famous, the main theme being about the Elevated Train, which, of course, meant cars and not George Francis. Neither the mayor nor the groom kissed the bride at the conclusion of the ceremony. After the wedding ring had encircled her finger, however, her mother and bridesmaids embraced her warmly. The bride is about 20 years of age, a brunette, with handsome features, dark eyes and a wealth of hair. She was plainly dressed in a traveling suit of brown cloth, and was evidently ready to start on her wedding tour. The groom is 24 years of age, and is an athletic, well built young fellow. Both are said to be comfortably well off in their own right.

While this ceremony was going on a Morning Journal representative saw Mr. George Francis Train sitting on a bench on the north side of Madison Square, his hat off and his fine gray hair rustling in the breeze. He was quite alone, even the romping children who were usually in a swarm at his feet, seeming to be impressed with the idea that he did not wish to be approached. On the seat at one side was the basket or hamper in which the flowers had been sent down; on the other side was a bundle embracing perhaps all the morning papers of the day. In the left lapel of his coat was the invariable small bouquet. He had paper and pencil in his hands, and was evidently deeply absorbed in some mathematical calculation, or perhaps idyllic composition. Passers by stared at him and whispered to each other, but he paid no heed to them. He was manifestly in the affairs had taken, and a little party of friends assembled at the house, on the day named, to see the romance of the life of the city until yesterday afternoon, when they departed for his home in Texas. De Garmo proved to be very wealthy, and while here sold 1,400 acres of fine land to Mr. J. Wash Davis.

A REAL ROMANCE.

A Wealthy Spaniard Courts a Pretty Widow by Mail and Marries Her.

Philadelphia Record.

"Mrs. Rooney," the female chimpanzee at the Zoological garden, has a very bad cold in her head, and has been taught to use a handkerchief with all the ease and grace of a well-bred human being. Yesterday she and "Pat Rooney," her husband, were, as usual, attracting a great deal of attention from the holiday visitors to the garden, but of all the varied assortment of tricks and gymnastics with which they favored their audience none created as much amusement as when Mrs. Rooney would sedately produce a small scrap of linen from a corner of the cage and proceed to gracefully blow her nose.

"How did you teach her that trick?" asked a lady of the keeper, who was gazing fondly at his pets from outside the bars.

"Oh! easy enough," was the reply; "she and Pat scarcely need any teaching, for they are so smart that if you simply do something before them once or twice and hold up a bit of sugar at the same time they will imitate your actions at once, and in a day or so can be taught a new trick perfectly."

"Do they get along well together?" asked another bystander.

"Yes—very well," said the keeper. "They are about the only pair in the garden that don't squabble together, more or less; in fact, the only pair at all, so far as I know—for even the turtle doves over in the bird house occasionally peck at each other as fiercely as a couple of game cocks. Still, I'm sorry to say that Mr. Rooney isn't as polite to his wife as he might be, and if she wasn't blessed with the temper of an angel—if there are any monkey angels—why sometimes there would be war even in this cage."

He then proceeded to give the chimpanzees their dinner, which consisted of some boiled rice and sweet potatoes. Mr. Rooney politely waited until his wife was helped, and then took his most gluttonous fashion, and then calmly scooped in what was left of his wife's portion. This act of robbery the lady only repaid with a reproving look, and then climbed to a high perch with her handkerchief and blew her nose violently, after which she laid down and went to sleep. Mr. Rooney doing the same after carefully arranging himself a comfortable nest of straw and blankets.

The Largest Hog in the World.

Clarksville (Tenn.) Democrat.

Dr. C. W. Greenfield, of Guthrie, Ky., has, perhaps, the largest hog in the world. This hog is of the big-bone Berkshire, 3 feet 7 inches high, 9 feet from nose to the tip of the tail, measures 7 feet around the body just behind the shoulders, and 11½ inches around the leg just above the hoof. He is only moderately fat, but very thick, and taking on flesh rapidly—weighs 1,200 pounds, and Dr. Greenfield thinks he will take on 300 pounds more flesh; has a sow the same age that weighs 900 pounds.

He was a singularly brave man, even for a sexton. For nearly a half a century he had been a public functionary—had performed the conspicuous duties of sexton; yet no one had ever seen him smile. Occasionally he joked, but he did it in such a general manner that no one could accuse him of levity. One day he was standing on the church steps, wiping his melancholy features with a red handkerchief. A horse stood near and three or four carriages were drawn up behind him. The notes of the organ floated out of the windows with solemn effect. A stranger came along and said: "Funeral?" And the old sexton gravely bowed his head—it was, "Who's dead?" The old man wiped his brow and gave the name of the deceased. "What complaint?" asked the inquisitive stranger. Solemnly placing his hand on his hat and covering his head, the old sexton made answer: "There is no complaint; everybody is entirely satisfied."

Childhood, Manhood, and Hoary 'ge' Exclaim in unison, "Behold the Conqueror."

During a brief visit to the ancient town of Warwick, R. I., recently, our agent extended his trip to the southeastern extremity of the town, to look about among the wonderful improvements which have been made in the appearance of Warwick Neck during a comparatively brief period, and while conversing on this subject with Col. Benjamin S. Hazard, the popular proprietor of the Warwick Neck Hotel, he learned that the greater part of the handsome residences had been erected inside of a dozen years; and he also learned that Col. Hazard had been a great sufferer from a chronic disease of the Kidney and Bladder over fifteen years, the most painful form of it being a stoppage or retention of the urine, which was so very severe at times as to disable him from his accustomed work, and even confine him to the bed, when a surgeon's assistance would be required to relieve him. He was being doctor'd a large part of the time, but could get no permanent relief. At times his sufferings were terrible from sharp, cutting pains through the Kidneys and Bladder, and he had suffered so long and so severely that he had become discouraged of getting well again, especially as the doctor stated that it was doubtful if a man of his age, with such a complicated disease of long standing, could be cured. But last summer, when he was suffering intensely from one of these attacks, a gentleman who was hovering at his hotel, urged and persuaded him to try a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, as he had known of some wonderful cures effected by it.

Mr. Hazard says he had no faith in it, but consented reluctantly to try it; and after taking it only two days, the intense pains and aches had disappeared, and he commenced to gain strength rapidly, and in less than a week was attending to his accustomed work, and has never had a return of the pains. Mr. Hazard is over seventy years of age, and on the 25th of Nov. 1882, when our agent met him, although it was a very cold and blustering day, he was in his shirt with his team at work putting up and loading turkeys, and a hearty man as you could wish, whereas last August he was unable to stand up to oversee the work then going on in this same field.

Hunt's Remedy had given him health and strength again, and he recommends it to his relatives and friends, several of whom are now taking it, as he considers it a most excellent medicine for all diseases of the Kidney and Bladder.
