COUNCIL BLUFFS ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS.

AN IMAGINARY CORPSE.

Villainous Proceedings and the Way They Work Their Victims.

Fast in the Clutches of a Dead Case, Not a Corpse, Against Him.

The bond of human sympathy is so strong among the common masses of people in this country that when we meet one who is suffering some affliction for a lost one whom they loved, it reaches deep down into our hearts, and in the case we are about to mention the pretended afflicted villain came near reaching down into an honest passenger's pocket for $25.

As mentioned in The Bee, on Friday the corpse dodge was very neatly played but failed this time to take its trick, the particulars of which are about as follows: On Friday afternoon a young man named Alfred Eytchison, who owns eighty acres of land near North Bend, in Dodge county, Nebraska, and who had been out there to look after his interests, was returning to his home near Hord, in Clay county, Illinois.

Arriving at the Union depot in Council Bluffs and taking his seat in one of the day coaches on an outgoing train on the C. & B. road, a well-dressed, pleasant looking gentleman came along reading himself near his intended victim and scraping an acquaintance, when he informed the Illinois man that a brother of his had recently died in Lincoln, Neb; that he had been out there to settle up the affairs and was on his way back to Gallegburg, Ill., where he remains, taking good care in the course of the conversation to ascertain when the Illinois man was going and about the amount of money he had, which he learned to be about $2,500.

The "sorrowing, suffering" man then went out to see his pal and fix up the check or draft for $50 on the First National bank of Gallegburg, Ill., and meeting the Illinois man on the platform the afflicted gentleman dried his tears and informed the Illinois man that brother's remains on the other side of the car and was now ready to proceed on his sad journey, and would like the company of the Illinois man as far as they traveled together. They went in the car, both occupying one seat and before the train arrived at the local depot in this city they had gone out on the platform, probably for the purpose of reviving the broken heart of the villain, when a pretended baggageman appeared on the scene and demanded pay for the transportation of the corpse. Of course the broken-hearted fellow had no money but plenty of good checks, and he presented a $40 one as mentioned, which the pretended railroad official could not cash, but said it was perfectly good, and the newly made acquaintance was asked for the loan of a paltry sum, holding the draft as security till they should reach Gallegburg or some point when they could cash the check.

The Illinois man, who had been conversant with the ways of bankers and millionaires, was somewhat surprised at the way they produced a $50 check on a national bank way back in Illinois, and was perhaps inclined to doubt just where he was, but while doubting, General Agent Hamblin, of the C. & B. Q. road and Mr. Keene, who has been watching the movements of the "afflicted" villain, introduced himself in the conversation by inquiring if those sharks were trying to borrow money on the check. About that time the "afflicted" villain and the pretended orphan, deserted train, corpse and all fled across lots for safe quarters and more verdant fields, where checks were not such a rarity as to doubt their genuineness. The parties made for the Metropolitan hotel, Oliners Brooks and Elgar following up as soon as they heard of the fracas, arresting a party named Murdoch, who proved his innocence, and the "afflicted" villain who claims his name is Hill, but thought by some here to be one, Fred Kline, who has been in the sleight-of-hand business before. At the trial the witness Eytchison, asked for and received permission to look at the prisoner, but the afflicted fellow felt so bad about having to abandon his pard and corpse that he could not gaze into the face of his former cotraveller, and smilingly gazed upon the shoes which had carried him safely across lots only the day before. After examination of witness Eytchison the case was continued till this afternoon and prisoner remanded to jail in absence of $1,000 bond. While the witness did not swear positive as to the identity of the prisoner, there is scarcely a doubt but he is the only and original fellow who was trying to get a corpse through on Friday afternoon's train on the C. & B. Q. road, and if this fellow gets clear through the little pin holes of technicalities and mistakes in law, there is no encouragement for officers to attempt to perform their duties. Any man who will attempt to deceive people on the corpse dodge should be treated so they would know how it felt to become a corpse and see if it was a pleasant subject to be trifled with.

Young man or woman, if you want big money for a small amount, insure in the Marriage Fund and Mutual Trust Association, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

The people through northwestern Iowa are waking up considerably to the prospect of the Council Bluffs & Northern railway and all along the line they are willing and anxious to help the enterprise, thus securing for themselves an outlet and connection with the great railway center of the west. Indeed the prospects for its soon becoming a reality are more than flattering.

The following change in the location of policemen for the city took place Sunday at noon: Officer Clough will take Central station; Officer Cusick will take Middle Broadway; Officer Edgar, the First

THE YANKTON SCANDAL.

A Fine Chance for the Dakota Commissioners to Obtain Wealth.

Washington Special to Philadelphia Press.

The attempt to secure a division of the territory of Dakota and the admission of the lower part into the union as a state, received a decided setback by reason of the Yankton bond scandal. Information received here from one of the prominent officers of the territory in relation to the action recently taken by the territorial legislature for the removal of the capital from Yankton forbodes an offense which will become a worse stretch in the annals of the people than the repudiation of bonds. Yankton is in the southeastern part of the territory, and the removal of the capital to a site more central has long been anticipated. There has been great rivalry among various towns in the interior for the possession of the Capital, and feeling ran so high that the legislature at last determined to disregard all rival claims and set up not only a new Capital but a new town. The competing railroads in the Territory, the Northwestern, and the Milwaukee and St. Paul, each presented two towns on their respective lines as available sites for the Capital, but the leaders in the scheme drove off both these corporations by threatening hostile legislation unless their lobbyists at Yankton were withdrawn. The threat was successful, and the companies called away the men who had been working for them in the legislature.

A bill was passed declaring the capital at Yankton removed, and appointing a commission of nine members, whose names are contained in the act, to select a new site before the 1st of July. By the terms of the act the commission is required, before designating a site, to have an offer of twenty acres of land and $100,000 in cash as a bonus for relocating the capital, the land to be used for the purposes of the territorial government and the money to be expended in erecting suitable buildings. The bill also provides that the commissioners shall not purchase or own land on the site of the new capital until after the expiration of one year from the time it shall have been located. This last clause is presumptively designed to prevent the commissioners from making fortunes in real estate through the information they will first possess of the site of the new capital.

Governor Ordway drew this extraordinary bill and modeled it after a bill by which the capital of Nebraska was located at Lincoln. The commissioners who selected Lincoln for the capital of that state made millions by the operation. It is well understood in Dakota, that while the commissioners personally under the new law may not buy up the lands around the site that may be chosen for the new capital, there is nothing to prevent their friends from buying for them. It is reported that a stock company has already been quietly formed with a capital of $1,000,000, to buy 10,000 acres of land at the point which the commissioners will select for the territorial capital.

This company will donate twenty acres and $1,000 to the territory. A spot will be chosen to which, at least, two railroad lines will be built, and the profits of the ring on their cheap lands will be enormous. There is great excitement in the territory regarding the removal of the capital, and charges of bribery and corruption are freely made.

Pony, weak, and sickly children are made healthy and strong by using Brown's Iron Bitters.

The Science of Certain Mysteries From the Boston Transcript.

When we see chairs skip about, hear male boxes play, or witness contact without the writing of untouched slate pencils, and see phosphorized tumbourines float and dash in the air above the heads of an audience, we may, and even must, admit the operation of some unclassified agency, but if we have been trained in the study of causes and effects, and in the conscientious weighing of evidence, we shall not be so glibly taken in by the illusion that our departed friends have taken these modes of entertainment. Sifted down to the most generalized form, all these furniture and slate pencil tests have one basis, a temporary interruption of the action of gravitation. These new phenomena seem to say that nerve power or will power, which is but a concentrated cerebral action, can do some of the things hereto accomplished by its muscle. As science has ceased to believe that gravitation resides unshored through space, so we must infer that this physiologic or brain movement which opposes terrestrial gravitation has its medium likewise.

This medium may be the ether of physical science, or any state, it isent likely that the metallic magnet, which also overcomes gravitation, communicates its power through space in the same way. We know by experiment that common air is not the vehicle of heat, electricity or magnetism; all three travel just as easily in a vacuum. But ether and vacuum appear to be identical; that is, what scientists have called a vacuum has the property of transferring vibrations, and so must contain something. Hence we are not left stranded by our spiritistic phenomena, but we may cling to the ether as a means of conveying brain vibrations. This, at least, is the scientific way of looking at these mystifying facts. The cheap and easy way is to set them down to spirit power.

What It Did For an Old Lady.

COSHOCTON STATION, N. Y., December 26, 1878.

GENTS—A number of people had been using your Bitters here, and with marked effect. In only one lady over seventy years had been sick for years, and for the past ten years has not been able to around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Her old remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, I sent to Depot, forty-five miles away, and got a bottle of Hop Bitters. It improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbor's, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

W. B. HATHAWAY, Agt. U. S. Ex. Co. DELAWARE, Wis., Sept. 24, 1878.

GENTS—I have not taken quite one bottle of the Hop Bitters. I was a feeble old man of 78 when I got it. To-day I am as active and feel as well as I did at 30. I see a great many that need such a medicine.

D. BOYCE.

Transplanting Teeth.

New York Mail and Express.

"Do you ever transfer teeth from one person's jaw to another, doctor?" asked a reporter of a dentist on Thirty-fourth street.

"Yes, occasionally," was the reply.

"I sometimes have a patient whose teeth are sound with the exception of one or two, and who will not be content with any artificial substitute. In such a case the thing is to find a person willing, for any reason, to part with a sound tooth corresponding in position and size. One of my cases a young man from Princeton, a theological student, who had a badly decayed front incisor and had a horror of false teeth. I went to the offices in the city, but did not find any one who wanted such a tooth extracted. People care a good deal more for a front than a back tooth."

"How do you manage the transplanting?"

"Well, I have both parties to the operation in the operating room at the same time. The tooth to be transferred is drawn, and if perfectly sound is immediately placed in the cavity from which the decayed one has been taken. Of course no time is lost, though a tooth will retain its vitality for some time after being taken out. Sometimes the tooth to be transferred is found to be slightly decayed when extracted, in which case we carefully fill it before putting it in the mouth of its new owner."

"Is it easy to find persons who will part with their teeth?"

"Yes, for a sufficient consideration. There are always men to be found who, never having lain awake with the toothache all night, care more for a ten-dollar bill than for a good tooth. A man who wants a tooth, and wants it badly enough to pay for it, can always find one for sale by going down on the docks among the longshoremen or wherever there are a large number of laborers employed. In one case that I know of a young man parted with two perfectly sound front teeth for $3 each."

"Mr. Waterman says—"

"A few months ago I was taken down with a severe sickness, which confined me to the house quite a long time, and much of the time I was so very lame as to be unable to walk, and my legs from the hip to the toes, became monstrously swollen, and I suffered extremely from the constant intense pains produced by so great inflammation. I was trying the various so-called cures, all the time, and was under the treatment of a physician seven weeks, but getting no substantial relief. At this time an advertisement of Hop Bitters appeared, and during our conversation informed me of the great benefit which he had obtained by the use of Hunt's Remedy, and urged me to try it, as he considered it a wonderful medicine. I commenced taking Hunt's Remedy, having very little faith that it would do much
