Thursday Morning, April 12.

Weather Report.

Table with columns for Stations, Barometer, Thermometer, Wind, and other weather-related data.

LOCAL BREWITIES.

—Linen dusters and winter ulsters on alternate days are now the rage.
—Johnathan Roehls, or Life in England, will be played April 25th by St. George's society.

—A wagon load of lumber broke down in front of Nave, McLeod and Brady's Tuesday. It was not very serious.
—There is a good deal of trouble at present with the Waring sewer system, the pipes not being large enough to do their work.

—The Ozema house property has been flooded with water for a day or two by a broken main, and Ninth street is being dug up to repair the leak.
—Reserved seats for Wm. J. Scanlan go on sale this morning. Mr. Scanlan presents "Friend and Foe" at Boyd's Friday and Saturday.

—The little son of Architect Dufrene, who fell down the stairs of the Millard on Sunday, is doing better and will probably escape permanent injury.
—Hon. W. P. F. Clark has been appointed acting superintendent of the Utah & Northern railway, with headquarters at Eagle Rock.

—The street railway company is building a double track on Ninth street, and the portion near the Tank Line company's house has been straggled.
—There is an elegant opening for damage suits against the city at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and California streets. The sidewalk is broken and the culvert beneath years for the reception of broken limbs.

—A birthday party was given Tuesday on Twelfth street, between Farnam and Harvey, and Philip Houck raised a disturbance during which he broke the stove and struck the host and hostess. His hearing was set for yesterday afternoon.
—Marvin and Laura Jenkins respectfully thank their friends for their kindness during their sad bereavement, and especially Mrs. J. M. Thurston for wreath of flowers. Mrs. M. J. Jenkins.

—"Baby" Barnes, "the Nebraska Giant," who left Omaha some months ago with Paddy Ryan, to become the champion pugilist of the country, returned from the east yesterday looking well. He did not come alone either.
—Invitations are out for the marriage of Mr. John S. Miller and Miss Nellie M. Munson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Munson, of this city, which will take place on Thursday, April 10th, at 8 p. m., at the North Presbyterian church. A reception at the family residence, on North Eighteenth street, will follow the wedding.

—Col. C. S. Chase, Omaha's new mayor, who has been quite sick for several days, since the election, is reported much better to-day and is expected to be able to appear on the streets to-morrow or next day. He is said to have been already sworn in by Walter Bennett, Esq., notary public, some of his anxious friends feeling alarmed and looking to the interests of Mr. Baker's succession.
—In Judge Benke's court two disturbers of the peace paid $3 and costs each, one $100 and $10 costs, and four traps were fired out of town. A colored waiter employed at the transfer was arrested for carrying concealed weapons, but proved that the weapon belonged to a friend, and that he brought it across the river to purchase cartridges. He was thereupon discharged.

—The lecture given at the South Omaha M. E. church Tuesday entitled "Army Incidents and Battle Scenes" was quite well attended by an appreciative audience, who listened with breathless attention to the speaker, the Rev. J. W. Stewart, who went into the war from one of the leading Methodist churches of Peoria, Ill., having gotten up a volunteer company, made up of lay members of his church, and joined the Sixty-fourth Illinois regiment, known as "Yates' sharpshooters," of which the reverend fighter became major and was known by his men, a great many of whom were Irish, as the "fifteen prайer, Capt. Stewart." For an hour and half the audience listened to the way in which the men fought and died to save the Union, and on the whole everybody went away well satisfied and left the officers of the church much the larger and they hope to hear him soon again.

IMPORTANT ENTERPRISE.

The Omaha Loan and Building Association.

Its Organization and Election of Officers.

An important organization was effected in Omaha Tuesday, which will be known as the Omaha loan and building association. This step has been taken in furtherance of a desire for an institution whose counterpart is to be found in all the leading cities of the east.
Two hundred and thirty-eight shares were subscribed last night, the par value being $200 per share. The initiation fee is 25 cents on each share and a monthly installment of $1 per share is paid. No stockholder can hold more than ten shares. Directors were elected for the first year as follows:
W. F. Boehl, M. H. Goble, John H. Butler, O. R. Turner, L. H. Korty, G. Anderson, E. K. Long, John Wilson and J. R. Siskiy.

The association will loan money to its members upon real estate security to be invested in building homes and improving property. It is a most important and praiseworthy enterprise.
PLEASANT PRESENTATION.
A Farewell Send Off to Mr. Wm. Fawcett.

A Barquet to the Same Gentleman Last Night.

Tuesday the employes of the Union Pacific presented Mr. Wm. Fawcett, for sixteen years past superintendent of the U. P. foundry in this city, with a splendid gold watch, purchased of A. B. Huberman & Co. On the face of the watch is a wheel within a laurel wreath, and on the reverse the monogram "W. F." On the inside of the case is engraved the following: "Presented to William Fawcett by the employes of the Union Pacific foundry, April 10, 1883."

The presentation was made at Feeney and Connolly's hall by Mr. Quinn, who said:
"Mr. Fawcett—Sir: We, the employes of the Union Pacific foundry, have requested your presence here in order that we might have the opportunity of presenting you with some trifling token of our respect and esteem, upon the eve of your withdrawal from amongst us. We feel it would be a disgrace to ourselves did we permit you to depart without our testifying to the many worthy qualities both of head and heart that you have exhibited to those under your charge during a period of almost sixteen years, and we are proud to acknowledge that while fulfilling your onerous duties towards the railroad company, in exacting the full duties of employes under your supervision, you have done so in a spirit of fairness, holding the rights and feelings of the humblest laborer as sacred as that of the most conceited mechanic. Impartiality has been your rule. Favoritism found no place and sycophancy no reward. It is for these reasons we request you to accept this small token of our regard, knowing that you who are well provided with this world's wealth will not value it at its intrinsic worth, but for the golden opinions which accompany it. It will serve to remind you that there are pleasures in life, chief amongst them that of having done one's duty so fully as to command the respect of all. While we deeply regret your departure we are consoled by the thought that our loss is your gain, and we feel confident that your career in the future will be, as in the past, one of profit to your employers, credit to yourself and pleasure to those working under your supervision. We congratulate the workmen of Griffin & Co., whose laborers you are about to conduct, in the fact that though you may tread the quarter deck, the identity of the sailor will not be lost in the rank of the captain. Assuring you of our earnest wishes for your future success, and that your course may be onward and upward, we now bid you a hearty good-bye."

Mr. Fawcett responded in a fitting manner, and the presentation ended in the usual social enjoyment.
Mr. Fawcett goes to Buffalo to take the position of general manager of Griffin & Co.'s new car wheel works, and he to night will be tendered a banquet at the Millard by his friends.

Piano Recitals.
Lovers of piano music were given a rare treat Tuesday at the concert given by Miss Harris at Max Meyer's hall.
The program was such a one as has never before been given to an Omaha audience, and from the first number in the programme, the Bach Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue to the Wagner-Liszt Splendor and Tannhauser March, all the close was played with an exactness, and at the same time a depth of feeling and conscientious interpretation that at once places Miss Harris in the front rank of American pianists.

The vocal numbers were Schubert's "Impatience," song by Mr. Pennell with his usual good taste; Welling's "Some Day," which was nicely sung by Mrs. Squires, and for which she was encored, and Harley's beautiful setting of the lines, "When shall we three meet again," which was sung by

A GOOD DEAL OF GAS.

A Reported Business Transaction Denied.

The New Gas Company and Its Advent in Omaha.

The report that the United Gas Improvement company of Philadelphia had consummated the purchase of the Omaha gas company's works has caused considerable talk.
It was stated that the purchase price was $250,000 and the purchasers were named as Messrs. Ekins, Widener, Matthews, and other stockholders of the United Gas Improvement company of Philadelphia; Mr. J. H. Millard, Mr. Wallace, and others of the Omaha National bank; Mr. Guy C. Bartor, president of the Omaha Smelting Works company; Mr. Nash, of the same company; and Mr. Edward Eddy, the owner of the Denver Gas Works, and of a newly discovered coal mine of Colorado.

A little social party at the Millard Tuesday was also said to be in honor of this important business transaction.
Mr. J. H. Millard, one of the alleged purchasers, says positively that the Omaha gas works have been bought out, but the idea that $250,000 were paid for them is propounded in view of the fact that the capital stock is only $100,000.

The Philadelphia capitalists named in connection with the affair are, in fact, very wealthy, owning among other things a valuable street railway property, and one of them being extensively interested in the Grand smelter, in Colorado. This latter gentleman is, however, not at all interested in the gas business, whatever the others may be.

Mr. Frank Murphy, president of the Omaha Gas company, denies point blank that there has been any such sale as that announced, and says that no such regulations as those reported have been in progress, or anything preliminary to a future sale. He claims that the Omaha gas company manufactures as good a gas as any company in the country and that there would be no object in making any such sale.

The little barquet at the Millard Tuesday was not in any way connected with the gas business, but was a private social affair.
