DENVER LETTER - The richest voman in Colorado, it may surprise many to know, is not a bonanza princess, nor am I aware that the smallest portion of her wealth even came in any way, either directly or indirectly through mining. So the uninitiated outsider may discover that there are other sources of making money in this new state, less hazardous though slower, perhaps, than that of shipments of mutton this year?

which the most has been told. It is something to be the richest think there is no doubt that In Colorado it is Mrs. John W. Iliff, widow of the late John W. Iliff, popularly spoken of as "the cattle king" of the state, a man who died owning, perhaps, twice as many herds as any other stockman in Colorado. Considerable over 100,000 was the number of cattle possessed by Mr. Hiff when he died, and as 10,000 or 5,000 are sufficient to make a wealthy man, t is easy to see that the lift estate was vast enough to render the widow and children the richest Er scopal Church—West side Pearl south of Willow ave. Fourteen years ago a Chicago girl came to Denver to sell machines for the Singer manufacturing company. She had wealthy brothers, who offered her a home and provision, but she had that independence too rare among young women outside of novels, refused their proffers and started out for herself. Ouce when I heard a woman, not this girl's equal, barating her brothers for not lavishing on her refrain from contrasting with her Enzabeth Frazier.

She was a slender, graceful, darkhaired lady, not handsome perhaps, but with an interesting face, full of fine womanly resolve. She determined to work for her company hard, con-stantly and faithfully; she had youth, tainly and faithfully; she had youth, health and energy, and so admirably did she bring her efforts to her work that her machines were sold by hundreds throughout the third territory. It was here she met Mr. Hiff, who became so greatly interested in the bright, animated, persevering young agent, that when, after two years stay in the west, she returned to Chicago, it was to become the great cattle dealer's bride. Theirs was a happy life until Mr. Hiff's death, a few years since; his loss was to his wife a blow from which she has never fully recovered, and probably never will. He left no will, so under the Colorado statutes one-half the mammoth estate. health and energy, and so admirably did she bring her efforts to her work br. lovely Princess of Wales. She is no nore devoted to her own children, Eins and Louise, than she is to her stepson, Willie, who fairly idolizes her in return. She is a devout member of the Methodist church and never, if her health permits, misses any of its services, not even the prayer meetings and special services too often voted by aristocratic members "a bore."

It is too common, unfortunately, to pay respect to wealth and position, to the exclusion of unadorned worth; there are those who even reach such an acme of vulgar obelsance to these as did one woman, who, fortunately, as she considered it for herself, had secured a servant who had once been employed in the family of the chie executive to the state. Thenceforth she guaged her acquaintances not by culture, nor yet by kindliness of heart, but as to how they would appear to "my girl, who has lived at the governor's." What magnigeent ma terial for a hercine such a woman would make in the caustic hands of the author of "Dalsy Miller." one must admit, though with deep regrets, an American weakness. This nothing but a broader education will effectually rid us of the plague spot, Mrs. Hiff is shrewd enough to know that much of the deference is paid not to her, but what is hers; and she were her friends, they who were her woman in Colorado."

It is often a or five thousand wethers, are preparquestion hard to decide, "Who is the David But of the Chicago marrichest woman in a state?" But I ket soon. There is an exceedingly good demand, and prices are high to what they have been. This state of affairs is due largely to the enactment of a scab law. Few sheep are driven into Montana from California and the south that are not scabby. The law now requires an examination to be made, a certificate granted permitting them to come into the state, and gives the power to take the sheep and care for them if they are found diseased, in the event of the owner failing to cure them. The law is cal culated to check, for the time, the driving of scabby sheep into the terri tory, and give a higher grade to both muston and wool. Batter stock is being brought in, and the industry is in an exceedingly prosperous condition. There has been a safe and steady profit. We have an instance of a case where an investment of $1 000 realized $4, 700 in four years. Of course, that is better than the average, but it shows the drift of affairs. We regard sheep ratsing generally safer and more satis-factory than handling cattle. A man knows where he stands, and can sell out and realize when he wants to. With cattle scattered over the territory, he's a lucky man if he can get out in three years.
