Stimson making the presentation speech in his most eloquent vein. The young ladies had decided to hang this flag in the governor's guard rooms as a trophy of their campaign. As they were not prepared to remove it from the opera house at once Mr. Melahardt, of the firm of Dittrick & Meinhardt, was re asfe keeping, to which he consented. About a week afterward the young ladies went down for the flag. Mr. Meinhardt had gone east, but the gentlemanly manager of the store promised to send it up when the expressmen should arrive with an order for it. On the following morning the expressman arrived and the order arrived, but the flog was not sickness and disgrace.

Re-enforce-ments would be furnished if needed. He claimed that the flag had been donated on condition that the young ladies kept up their organization and that the board of trustees had constituted itself a close corporation to hold the flag and see if the organization was maintained. This flank movement rather disconcerted the broom battalion. It was so startling in its originality. This was the first that had been heard of conditions, and even if there had been conditions they were evidently entitled to the flag until the conditions were broke. None of the young ladies had dreamed of becoming life members of the brigade. It was intended as a sort of "three months' service."
