DAMAJANTE'S PERIL.

The Snake Charmer Nearly Crushed by a Huge Python.

She Extricates Herself from the Deadly Embrace by a Superhuman Effort of Strength.

How She Has Been Bitten by Her Pets.

Philadelphia Press.

A thrilling incident happened in Forestpark circus yesterday afternoon, while Nala Damajante, the Hindoo snake charmer, was going through her performance of handling half a dozen quivering pythons. It was all in the twinkling of an eye, and scarcely a dozen persons in the great audience were aware that Damajante had for a moment been in deadly peril. She had finished the wonderful act of walking about the raised platform with six snakes coiled like a living head dress over her forehead, and had taken the huge python, whose weight is ninety pounds and length twelve feet, from its box, and threw it across her shoulder. As she had done with the other snakes, Damajante grasped the powerful creature a few inches back of the head. Although the air was damp, the python appeared to possess more than usual activity. It unwound its six um length from Damajante's body and quickly coiled about the upper part of her chest and throat. To those nearest the performer, the muscles of the snake could be distinctly seen working beneath the spotted skin. Suddenly, the reptile gave an hiss and darted forth its quivering tongue, and almost at the same moment the coil about the woman's throat was tightened. Damajante's eyes, who was standing near the entrance to the elephant house, appeared to know that there was a possibility of something of the kind taking place, and was keeping a keen eye on the performance. He started forward quickly but quietly, so as not to alarm the audience and had got half way down the race track, when Damajante, who had already realized her great danger, succeeded in unfastening the tail of the snake from her body. The middle and most powerful part of the python was still about her throat, and the pressure was increasing. She was very pale, but thoroughly calm. The head of the python, hissing horribly, was still grasped in her right hand. Damajante, with remarkable nerve, managed to free her left arm, and in another instant had, with all the strength she possessed in both hands, unwrapped the writhing neckless from her throat. She placed her dangerous pet back in its box, bowed, and retired.

erations going to effect the price of fruit land—such as remoteness from or proximity to large towns and the facilities for getting fruit to market. The kind of soil, whether there are improvements, such as fences, barns and houses. Thus, one might go north from this city, say from 100 miles to 120 miles, into Lake country, where many picturesque parcels of land had been offered for $30 an acre. Such parcels would be well watered and have an abundance of wood. If there were substantial improvements, of course these would raise the price of the land. But a striding agent can go out into this state to-day and buy all the unimproved fruit lands he wants at prices ranging from $15 to $30. If he gives more in some instances for these parcels, it is because they are worth it by reason of proximity to a town or village or a railway depot, or because there are soon to be these and other facilities in the immediate neighborhood. It is, of course, not easy to gauge the price of fruit lands in this state so as to hit the average, because of the great variation. But the average named will be found to be approximately correct. We do not ignore the fact that a great deal of unimproved land, suitable for vineyard purposes, may be bought in remote parts of the state for $5 an acre, or that other choice pieces of unimproved land might go up to $50 an acre, or even higher. And even parcels as high as $75 an acre might be really cheaper than other land at $5 an acre. There are a great many tracts of government land which are good for fruit culture at $1.25 as a great deal of that which has been sold at $30 an acre. What is to the point here is that a great many immigrants have this year been directed to such lands and have taken possession of them as settlers, to the astonishment of those who had been holding them without title, and had turned settlers away, until they were taught that this kind of land would be no longer tolerated.

An Extended Popularity. BROWN'S BORNCHAL TROCHES have been before the public many years. They are pronounced superior to all other articles used for relief from such ailments as Croup, Whooping Cough, Cold and Throat Diseases they have been proved reliable.

An Opened Grave. A Remarkable Discovery Seventeen Years After the Burial.

Steeleville (Mo.) Mirror.

Mrs. Jane Garven, a sister of W. C. Evans, was buried eighteen years ago, on the Whiteberg place, near Steeleville, in what was then a small family burying ground. The place has been neglected of late, and the graves are now turned out to the commons. Mr. Evans concluded to remove the remains of his sister to the cemetery at Cuba, and did so on Friday last. Strange to say, when the grave was opened the coffin was found in a fair state of preservation, and the remains of the lady was entire. Even the clothing and shoes were distinguishable. The hair was still done up at the back of the head, and all the bones were in place; the feet remained in the position in which placed and the outline of the body showed plain beneath the clothing. Even the cloth which had covered the coffin was in place. A child of Mrs. Garven's was buried by her side. This coffin was of walnut and apparently sound. The clothing and a few fragments of bones were all that remained of the little one, except the hair. The child was buried in a coffin of oak, and had been twenty years; but, strange to say, where the little head had rested was a mass of long, bright, glossy hair, which, when washed out and combed, showed the astonishing length of fourteen inches. It must have grown fully a foot after death. Small fibers of roots had penetrated the large coffin and woven a net work about the body and apparently aided in holding it in place. The coffin and remains were placed in a new case and taken to Cuba and there reinterred, where they will probably remain undisturbed till the morning of the resurrection.

Petroleum V. Nasby. D. R. Locke, Petroleum V. Nasby, (editor of the Blade) writes: I had on a forenoon of my right hand one of those pleasant pets, a round, fat finger being inflamed to a degree unbearable and swollen to nearly twice its natural size. A friend gave me HENRY'S CARBOLIC SALVE, and in twenty minutes the pain had so much subsided as to give me a fair night's rest, which I had not had before for a week. The inflammation left the finger in a day. I consider it a most valuable article for the household.

Cure the Piles, Too. Edward Reinhard, of New York, writes: It gives me great pleasure to say that a single box of HENRY'S CARBOLIC SALVE effected a complete cure of Piles, with which I had been troubled for over a year, and which nothing else that I used would cure.

A Prince's Car. The prince of Wales' new railway carriage is a marvel of esthetic design. It is fifty feet long, and contains saloon, study, two bed rooms, two dressing rooms and a bar room. The prince's bedroom is hung with old gold silk and the furniture is upholstered to match. Mirrors are let into the door panels, and the whole suit can be lighted by candles or by electricity.

An Undoubted Blessing. About thirty years ago, a prominent physician by the name of Dr. William Hall discovered, or produced after long experimental research, a remedy for all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs, which was of such wonderful efficacy that it soon gained a wide reputation in this country. The name of this medicine is DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAEM FOR THE LUNGS, and may be safely relied on as a specific and positive cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, &c. Sold by all druggists.

War Clouds in the Far West. The prospects for a railroad war in the west were never better than at the present time. The opening of the Rio Grande to Salt Lake, and the prospects of its early completion to Ogden and a connection with the Great Pacific, has had the effect to cause the managers of the other lines to a realizing sense of the importance of the "baby road." It is not probable that any direct cut in rates, either of passenger or freight, will be made at once, but should the Union Pacific increase the speed of its trains and land freight and passengers in San Francisco ahead of the Santa Fe, the latter will make its best efforts to meet the cut in time, and if this can not be done, then a reduction of rates all round will be the result.

Humor in the Stomach. Much of the distress and sickness attributed to dyspepsia, chronic diarrhoea and other ailments is occasioned by humor in the stomach. Several cases, with all the characteristics of these complaints, have been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Other cures effected by this medicine are so wonderful that the simplest statement of them affords the best proof that it combines rare curative agents and when once used secures the confidence of the people.

Sitting Hen.

This is the season of the year hens run mad, and will not be comforted unless they can hide away somewhere and sit day and night on a wooden nest egg, or an old door knob. Several men were discussing this question in a grocery store one evening recently. A man who owns a large flock of Dorking remarked, "Not even an act of congress can break up a sittin' hen." "Ever tried jammin' 'em under a barrel and pourin' water on 'em?" demanded the man on the sugar barrel. "Yes," said the Dorking man, "I've poured water on 'em till they grow web footed, like a blamed duck, and afterwards found 'em in an old coal hod sittin' away on lumps of coal." "Tie a red rag round one wing," said a man who was eating cheese and crackers. "That'll fix 'em." "Might's well offer 'em a chromo," said the Dorking man. "I tried a whole red woolen shirt on one last spring, and dog my own eye if she didn't make a nest of it and set three weeks on the bottom!" Then the grocer said it was time to close up, and each man girded up his loins and slowly filed out.

Couldn't Escrow Use It.

The Seventy-first is one of our fashionable militia regiments, and it is holding a fair this week in its armory. Pretty girls abound there, of course, and their exclamations as sellers are heart-felt. I saw a middle aged, dignified, plainly dressed gentleman stop in front of a baby carriage and regard it thoughtfully. A boy companion said to him: "That's a pretty one, father, isn't it?" "The sweet girl who had charge of the raffish book had been careful about pressing the baby carriage upon the minds of men whom she did not know to be married; but, assured by the boy's remark that this one was a father, she resolved upon a special effort. Here is the dialogue: "You are admiring the baby carriage, sir, I see. It is worth $50, and there are a hundred chances at half a dollar a chance. A beautiful thing, isn't it? And so awfully cheap. Here is the subscription book. Will you put down your name?" "I don't think—"

"See how handsomely it is fitted up, and how snug a baby would be in the midst of that dainty upholstery. I am sure, were I a baby I would be perfectly contented in a carriage like that. Will you take six chances, or four?"

"I really haven't any use—"

"But I am sure, sir, that you have a handy place to store it away. It wouldn't get out of fashion in a number of years, and if you got it for $2 or $3, you know, you could afford to pay storage until you require it."

"Very true, but—"

"I beg pardon, sir, but possibly you are a widower?"

"Oh, no; but—"

"Then I really don't see why you shouldn't buy some chances. A really sweet thing in baby carriages, isn't it? I can almost see a dimpled little darling lying back on the cushion, throwing up his plump arms and crowing with delight. Shall I take your name?"

"Really, I could make no use of it."

"I thought as you were a man of family, I was not making an inappropriate offer of such a bargain. The boy called your father, did he not?"

"O, yes, because I am a Catholic priest. And that, don't you see, is a pretty good reason why I ought not to take chances on a baby carriage."

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who has cured all other humors that she is truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman." Some of her correspondents love to call her. She is not only devoted to her work, which is the cure of a life-time, and is obliged to keep a list of her patients, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours upon her, each bearing its special order of suffering, but she is also a true friend to the vegetable compound in a medicine for good and all purposes. I have personally investigated it as I satisfied of the truth of it. On account of its proven nature, it is recommended as prescribed by the best physicians in the country. It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhoea, irregular and painful menstruation, all ovarian troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the female system. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives life and vigor. It removes fatness, restores vitality after all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Headache, Migraine, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system. It costs only $1 per bottle or six for $5, and is sold by druggists. Any doctor or physician, or special cases, send names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P. with stamp for reply to her home in Lynn, Mass. For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show. "Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best remedy for the cure of Constipation and Torpidity of the Liver. Her Blood-purifier is in its special line and bids fair to stand in its popularity." "I have used a bottle of Mrs. P.'s Compound for other ailments." Mrs. A. M. D.
