THE QUAKERS

Changes Which Have Taken Place Among Them.

Centers of Quakerism in the West.

A correspondent of The Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette says: Richmond and Plainfield have long been known as the centers of Quakerism in the west, for it is at these two places that the western yearly meetings are held. The changes that have come upon this body of religious believers within the last twenty-five years are truly wonderful. The Quaker of to-day is not the Quaker of a few years since. To quote the changes that time has wrought upon them it is necessary to go back to the establishment of their church, which took place about the middle of the seventeenth century, when a number of individuals withdrew from the communion of every visible church to seek, as they expressed it, "the Lord in retirement."

Justice Abbott went to McFall, on the St. Paul road, Saturday, and there helped to plant a post of the Grand Army of the Republic. The veterans there are enthusiastic.

A WHITE APACHE.

Incidents in the Career of a Renegade American.

THE HERMOSILLO DISPATCH SOME DAYS since announcing the wounding and capture of a white man, supposed to be L. N. Streeter, while heading an Apache foray near there, would seem to be confirmed by C. J. Wimple, who recently returned from Hermosillo, and states that Streeter has certainly been taken and his speedy execution by the Mexican authorities may be looked for.

In anticipation of his early demise the following brief account of the man may prove interesting: He is about fifty years of age and was born in California, his father being Captain of an English merchantman trading on the Pacific coast, while his mother was a native Californian. Of his boyhood or early manhood very little is known, he first coming into notice in Arizona by his connection as clerk with the San Carlos agency during Governor Safford's administration in that territory. While there he had some difficulty with the officials, caused, it is said, by his giving aid and comfort to hostile Apaches. He left there suddenly and went straight for the camp of John and Gerónimo, which was then near Janos pass, on the line between Sonora and Chihuahua.

It is stated that while at the agency he became enamored of a squaw belonging to this tribe, and it was that induced his leaving civilization to cast his fortunes with the Apaches. Gov. Safford offered a large reward for his apprehension, some stories placing the amount as high as $5,000. He was not apprehended, however, and never returned to Arizona. Since his residence in Mexico he has visited and lived many times in the towns and been employed by citizens in various civil capacities. He has been arrested a number of times by the Mexican authorities for complicity in Apache raids, but invariably was discharged for want of evidence. During the recent murdering foray of John and Gerónimo through Sonora he was engaged near Granaditas in surveying ranches and was arrested and turned loose as usual. It is stated that at the time General Torres and escort were ambushed a few months since by the Apaches, Streeter was the general. Quite a number of the escort were killed, and the remainder, with General Torres, who was severely wounded, sought safety in flight. Streeter was pursuing for a while, but finally turned up in Hermosillo, safe and sound. He is said to be very intelligent and well educated, and a manuscript now in the hands of the writer, written when Streeter was at Granaditas, goes to prove it.

To his intimate Streeter has always claimed that his trouble at the San Carlos agency was caused by his taking ground against the wholesale stealing which was practiced by the Indian ring. In trying to give the Indian his just dues he incurred the enmity of the thieves and naturally the gratitude of the Indians. When he was forced to leave the agency he was obliged to join the Indians, as the ring at that time was all powerful and he was hounded and hunted down to starvation point. He speaks the Apache dialect fluently, and is said to have great influence with them. His standing among the savages, by whom he is known as Don Caasamiro, may be seen when it is known that the eldest son of Chief Gerónimo is named after him.

During his residence in this country Mr. M. has taken upon himself the task of satisfying our numerous readers that whatever goods are manufactured in our goodly city of Great Western are of the highest grade, and as fine in quality as can be produced in any spot on the globe. Especially is this so when the skilled Pharmacologist of many years' experience resolves to extract from the finest botanical specimens of the vegetable world the most potent cure for some special disease. In proof of his assertion that Providence, R. I., affords the best, he relates an interview with an acquaintance, given him while sojourning temporarily at her residence. She says, "About a year I suffered from an excellent doctor, and trying many kinds of medicine, without any marked effect. At last a medical friend advised me to try Hunt's Specific, because he attributed my severe suffering to the bad condition of my kidneys, which were not performing their proper functions, and I commenced taking it, and in a few days the neuralgia had departed, my head had entirely cleared, the swelling in my limbs had disappeared, which it always alleviates, and I noticed the improvement as soon as I take this Remedy." This is the strengthening element, for it has made me feel much stronger, and has been very beneficial to my general health. I most heartily recommend it to all sufferers like myself. Mrs. L. G. TANNER, No. 136 Pearl street."

Great Praise. Albert G. Mann, of Cottage Home, Ill., says: "I have been prostrated for three or four years with kidney disease; at times I was not able to put on my boots; my wife had often pulled them off for me. I do not so bad as that all the time, but I never know what it was to be without pain in my back until I commenced using Hunt's Remedy. Since I began to take Hunt's Remedy I have been free from all pain, and take pleasure in saying that it is the best medicine that I ever knew for kidney and liver diseases."

When the "new ideas" first found lodgment in the minds of the young Quakers, they were strongly contended by the old-fashioned members to cut loose from their creed as laid down by the founders of the church, consequently there was a rupture in the church, which finally ended in a division, both parties laying claim to the property here. A lawsuit was the result, which gave the property all to the "Later-Day Quakers," as they are denominated. The "Old Style" Quakers secured a school-house for the meetings, and still have about half a dozen followers, who hold their meetings tri-weekly, much on the plan as propagated by Fox.

The members were bound by principles to abstain entirely "from profane and extravagant entertainments; from excesses in eating and drinking; from public diversions, from the reading of useless, frivolous and pernicious books; from gaming of every description; from vain and injurious sports, such as hunting and shooting for diversion; from unnecessary delay in funerals, funerals, and style of living; from unprofitable, seductive, and dangerous amusements, among which are ranked dancing and music; and generally from all such occupations of time and mind as plainly tend to levity, vanity, and forgetfulness of God and Savior, and they also objected to all complimentary intercourse.

In this brief review I have given of the tenets of this sect you can have fallen to see how widely different are the Quakers of to-day. Of course their notions with regard to the fundamental doctrines of their church tally closely with those of the old class, the differences being all on points of minor import.

The earliest settlers in this country were Quakers from the Carolinas, who came here in 1823. Their number rapidly increased, being constantly reinforced from Carolina, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and they soon had the controlling power in the southern part of this country. In 1850 they erected a large house of worship at Plainfield, capable of seating over 3,000 persons, and 1858 one branch of the western yearly meeting was removed here, the other being at Richmond. When they were here forty years ago they were generally dressed in modest garb, and wore on their heads the large, wide-brimmed beaver hats, which were fashioned at Beaver's famous hatter shop (a photograph of which I notice adorning the walls of the post office here) after the style of those worn by William Penn from England. They were a quiet, plain-spoken people, and followed closely the religious practices as given them by Barclay and Fox. They eschewed the vanities of the world, and tried to follow in the footsteps of the meek and lowly Savior, with no guile but the Bible, and the "inward
