

PLAIN TRUTHS

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body, and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible. If disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known, and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

Brown's Iron Bitters will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it, and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth, cause headache or constipation, and is positively not injurious.

Saved his Child.

17 N. East St., Baltimore, Md. Feb. 12, 1886.
Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried Brown's Iron Bitters as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three children by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loath to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required," and when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's Iron Bitters, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

AUGUST PHILLIPS.

Brown's Iron Bitters effectually cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Weakness, and renders the greatest relief and benefit to persons suffering from such wasting diseases as Consumption, Kidney Complaints, etc.

Recollections of Some Heavy Poker Games by an Old Stager.

Tragic Ending of a Game.

Chicago Herald.

"But by all odds the most interesting game I ever saw was on the Belle Lamar, in 1857. There were circumstances connected with it which made it an all-absorbing event to the few people who understood what it really meant. The players were two only. They are both dead, and probably all their descendants have followed them to the grave, so I may mention their names and tell you about the train of events which led to that game and its attendant tragedy. In 1856 there lived in a small town in Kentucky a beautiful girl named Alice Crayton. She had a number of suitors, but of all of them two only seemed to meet with passing favor in her eyes. One was a rich young planter named Horace Ellison, and the other a young lawyer, recently from the north, named Converse. Ellison had the advantage of his rival in looks and accomplishments. He had traveled extensively, was well read, polished, and bore the reputation of being a dare devil in affairs of gallantry, and was said to be not over upright or honorable in his affairs with women. He was the sort of a man to attract most girls. But Miss Crayton preferred Converse, a plain young fellow, and finally married him. Ellison, after swearing to be revenged, went abroad. In the course of a year Converse and wife went to New Orleans to live. Two years after their marriage Converse, returning home on the Belle Lamar after a business trip north, discovered his old rival, Ellison, among the passengers. All feelings of resentment had died out in his heart and he greeted Ellison heartily, the latter returning the handshake with well simulated warmth. For a day the two men chatted together agreeably to all appearances good friends. The next evening Ellison proposed a little game of draw to while away the monotony of the voyage. Converse readily assented, and they started the game in a large state room. Four or five others were present, but they didn't join it. At first the ante was trifling. As Converse steadily lost, he insisted on raising it with each deal, and before long a rare thing for him to do. His ill-fortune continued, and after a session of two hours he began to borrow money from his friends in the room, having lost all of his own to Ellison. The latter was cool and firm as a rock. He seldom spoke, and then in cutting accents, which added to the fast growing enmity his opponent felt toward him.

"Perhaps if Mr. Converse would finger his glass less and his cards more his game would be more interesting and less easy to beat," Ellison remarked.

"Mr. Converse can take care of himself under all circumstances," Converse retorted.

"Yes, he demonstrated his facility for looking after his own interests two years ago, when he won a great stake, but not by fair play."

"I saw Converse's face flush. He understood the allusion to the old rivalry between him and Ellison, and its covert insinuation. He started, as though to say something, but stopped. The game went on, and soon Converse had lost every penny, and his watch and diamond pin.

"Ellison laughed sneeringly. 'Mr. Converse should apply his method in love making to card playing,' he said.

"What do you mean, sir?"

"What you please. Shall we continue the game?"

"Converse was white with fury. The gambling spirit, mingled with hate and rage, was on him. As if in answer to his unspoken thoughts, Ellison said in his cold, exasperating tones:

"You lack a stake. I will hazard all my winnings against the next key of your house. We will play three hands in five for it."

"This monstrous proposition struck us all dumb. Converse bounded from his chair and gasped. He was speechless. In fact, the emotions of this great experience had deprived him of the power of words. Ellison alone was unmoved. He sat quietly toasting the pile of gold before him with his white fingers.

"Do you consent?" he asked.

"The loss Converse had sustained he could not replace. Ruin was before him. On the other hand, the privilege he was invited to hazard meant, if he lost it, a dishonor worse than death. What thoughts ran through that man's mind in a few seconds will never be known. He grasped the back of his chair, started wildly around and hoarsely muttered 'yes'.

"You may imagine how breathlessly we bent over the players now. The next Converse won. The fourth time, amid a silence in the room deep as the tomb, Ellison dealt and gave Converse two queens, a jack and two nine-spots. The latter drew one card and announced himself ready. Ellison glanced quickly at him and laid down four aces. I always thought he had staked his hand.

"You have won the key," said Converse. He drew it off the ring, and then, quick as lightning, crowded it into the barrel of his revolver.

"Take it," and pulled the trigger. Then he turned the weapon upon himself, and fell dead upon the corpse of his antagonist, whose brains he scattered the cards which had destroyed their fortunes and honor and lives."

A Fashionable Folly.

Cor. Brooklyn Ave.

I have run bump into the latest agony which is afflicting the fashionable young ladies here, and, as the bad boy said when he swallowed cod-liver oil for syrup, "It made me tired."

I was calling the other evening on a young lady, when I noticed something crawling on her dress. I called her attention to it, and she said: "Why, that is only my pet lizard." Of course I didn't want to appear ignorant and make a bit of myself, so I said: "Yes, a very handsome bird he is, too. Do you often take him out of his cage?" I knew by the expression on her face that I had made a blunder, but I saw that I was in for it, and I got reckless and remarked, "If I had that thing crawling over me I should think I had the 'jim jims,' or a torpid liver, or malaria, or something that would require my immediate presence on a fishing trip to Florida."
