-The suits of A. S. Patrick and M. T. Patrick of this city against Erwin Davis of New York, were called for trial in U. S. court Thursday morning. Then the trial was adjourned to 10 o'clock yesterday when the taking of evidence began.

-The bargains on Morse's counters are as plentiful as ever and customers as numerous. They have made some additions to their lines, and are offering 1,500 pieces French Point Valenciennes, and all variety of cotton laces at less than cost of importation; so large has Morse's trade in these laces become that they have devoted the entire counter in rear of the main staircase, making over fifty feet of counter-room to the sale and display of these goods alone.

-The music for the commencement exercises at the state university, Wednesday, was furnished by the Omaha Musical Union orchestra, under the management of Mr. Julius Meyer, and The Lincoln Journal says: "The playing of the orchestra was beyond criticism and was highly enjoyed by the audience. The 'Nebraska University March,' composed expressly for the occasion by Prof. S. Hofman, the leader of the orchestra, is deserving of special mention. It was a fine production and does credit to the musical talent of the composer."

-L. C. Gandy, of Humboldt, Neb., formerly connected with the Farmers' Advocate of that city, was in Omaha yesterday, en route to Chicago to attend the railroad exposition. Mr. Gandy is the inventor of a railroad grading machine for use in prairie country, or where the land passed over is not too rough. It is a good deal like a gulch plow, and is run by a traction engine. The inventor is confident of its merits, and will push it for all it is worth. It looks like a practical and work-saving piece of machinery.

-A mysterious case is reported of the effects of whisky or of drugs put in a man's cup, which may yet prove fatal to him. Mr. H. Weiser, in the baker at the Millard hotel, and at 3 o'clock Thursday morning he was taken to jail in a state of helpless insensibility. Here the best of care was taken of him and medical aid summoned, but up to noon Friday showed no signs of coming out of his stupor, which had then lasted twenty-one hours. It was feared that he had been drugged, and the results of the case may yet prove serious.

A LIVELY FIRE.

A Stable Burned in a Dangerous Locality.

Narrow Escape from a Serious Conflagration.

About 10 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in John Frank's stable, near his property, the California house, on Eleventh and Douglas.

The first alarm was given by the blowing of the water works whistle, and as the flames shot higher a stampede was made for the spot by the crowd, and an alarm was sent in from No. 2 engine house, which was promptly responded to by the department.

In the stable were several head of horses and three cows, all of which were gotten out before the fire spread, as it shortly did, over the whole building.

The junk store next door to the stable had a narrower escape, and in that direction the water works whistle blew, but the water would probably have gone. As it was the water was gotten on quickly, and the fire soon put out. The stable was entirely ruined, and considerable damage done to the contents of the junk store, the latter being insured to cover all losses.

MILITARY MATTERS.

The Latest Orders from Headquarters of the Department of the Platte.

Private Eugene Lyon, re-enlisted at Fort Sidney, Nebraska, is assigned to company A, Seventh Infantry, and will be sent to the station of his company on the first favorable opportunity.

Recruit Christian W. Jacobson enlisted at Fort Douglas, Utah, is assigned to company H, Sixth Infantry. Recruit David Williams, enlisted at Fort Omaha, Neb., is assigned to the Fourth Infantry.

The quartermaster's department will furnish transportation from Omaha, Neb., to Fort Robinson, Neb., for Trumpeter Edmund H. Gieseke, troop M, Fifth cavalry, on furlough without means to return to his station. His troop commander will be notified by the quartermaster furnishing the transportation that the cost of the same may be properly charged against the soldier.

To carry out the provisions of general orders No. 53, headquarters of the army, series 1882, commanding officers of posts and troops serving in the field will (commencing the target record for June) select the five best shots in each band, company and troop, (including only those of good character and habits) and institute a competitive contest to commence July 5, or as soon thereafter as practicable; no ordinary exigency of the service, field or other duty will be allowed to later here. The competition will be in accordance with instructions announced in said order, and each competitor will fire two (2) scores of five (5) shots each day at 200, 300 and 600 yards ranges. The ranges should be properly equipped, and the scoring and marking done under the supervision of a commissioned officer designated by the post or detachment commander.

The record of each competition will be sent so as to reach these headquarters not later than July 25th, and from these records competitors will be selected by the department commander and brought together at Omaha early in August.

As skirmishing matches in connection with the team contests are contemplated by the governing orders, "skirmish firing" and "estimating distance drill" will be included in the preliminary practice of competitors at their posts.

Death Record.

The funeral of the late John T. Clark, who died at Lincoln Thursday morning, took place at 2:30 p. m. yesterday from No. 508 South Fifteenth street, Rev. Dr. Stailling officiating, and the attendance being very large.

Mr. Clark was engaged in freighting in the early days, and made his headquarters at Council Bluffs. Sixteen years ago he crossed to this city and established a livery stable, better than any that the city had had, conducting it until about three years ago. He was a most public-spirited citizen, many and generous, and numbers of the friends whom he made in those days remained steadfast to him. Six years ago last winter he was stricken with apoplexy and his health was seriously impaired, but it was not until he received the second stroke a year ago that his health altogether gave way and he went to Lin-

BATTLING ELEMENTS.

A Violent Storm of Wind and Rain.

Bursting Balls of Fire—A Flood and Hurricane.

Considerable damage is reported from various parts of the city, but nothing of an extremely serious nature. The storm was worst in the west and south limits of the city, and trees were blown down, houses prostrated, cellars flooded, and so on.

The cellar of Brown's new building opposite the Paxton was filled with water and a portion of the walls caved in. Helman's cellar was again flooded, and the old steamer No. 4 was busy to-day pumping it out. The sidewalks and crosswalks were covered with mud and, and the streets run with water like rivers.

The worst effect of the storm was seen on Douglas street, where the paving work is going on. Down this street the torrents poured with a mass of debris and a force irresistible. From the corner of Thirtieth and Douglas for a distance of nearly two blocks east the "cushion coat" only had been put on of asphalt and the "blankies" at the crossings, the latter containing 5,500 pounds each of asphalt, and believed to be firmly fixed in place, although the wearing coat had not yet been put on. These were torn from their place by the flood and twisted clear around, so that they had to be partially out and dragged into place by teams this morning. A stone roller weighing 3,300 pounds was washed down the street for quite a distance and, being without the waters force except the huge steam rollers. The stream in some way forced itself under the cushion coat of asphalt and lifted it as the wind would a curtain, washing storks, corks, stone and debris generally under it for two blocks, so that both sides of the street have to be cut out, at a loss of several hundred dollars to the contractors.

The wind was quite strong. It blew down a new frame house on St. Mary's avenue, and demolished two or three other small buildings. Several families took refuge in their cellars, the suddenness of the storm's approach not allowing them time to dress themselves.

The storm extended as far west as North Platte and lasted until about 7 o'clock.

Physicians are often startled by remarkable discoveries. The fact that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and all throat and lung diseases is daily curing patients that they have given up to die, is startling them to realize their sense of duty, and examine into the merits of this wonderful discovery, resting no longer on the word of their best physicians using it in their practice. HOUSE AND HOME.

How to Decorate and Furnish Rooms—The Latest in Household Goods.

Bedroom hangings may be in one color. Soft blues or pinks or delicate greens, bright wivals, but not gaudy, and finished with the most beautiful of recent decorative innovations. The use is either etched or in barrells, and the subjects chosen are from floral, fern and anemone groups, offering a wide choice and fascinating combinations.

The current number of The Builder and Woodworker, published in New York, by Charles D. Lacey, is particularly prolific in cottage plans, a dozen or more of which are given. Some beautifully cared baseboards from the Cincinnati house of J. W. P. Dillman, the photographer and teacher of wood carving, are among the illustrations, as well as a carved fireplace and mantel executed by his pupils. A design for a book-case is also presented.

A firm in Boston is making a wood decoration that has made a specialty of carving, and can be sold at about one-tenth the figure that is demanded for the ordinary carved work. The process is a mechanical stamping of various forms upon the work, so that, after stamping, the design has very much the appearance of being hand carved. The extent to which these carvings can be used is almost unlimited.

Not only can furniture be beautified and embellished at a slight cost, but also a great variety of paperings and the like, which the expense of decorating in any way has heretofore kept plain. Tables and cases and frames and plaques are treated to the process, and it is often silvered or gilded or bronzed.

Plank frames for mirrors are made with very handsome effect. They may be covered with plush or velvet, or stained to imitate woods. If covered the material may be worked with such designs as may occur to the fancy of the amateur, flowers of brilliant and showy colors, birds with long, richly colored plumage, and a diversity of other ideas, blossoms, vines, turfs, etc. If the wood is stained, it offers an opportunity for the employment of a painting skill, and the picture may be elaborated with painted plaques or even landscape sketches, a tall tree upon the side spreading its branches over the top of the mirror, and its roots sinking into the grass shown at the bottom of the glass.—Decorator and Furnisher.

Japanese goods, says a London correspondent, are going out of fashion, excepting when genuinely ancient. This is accounted for by the deluge we have had of cheap Japanese toys and novelties. Still good old oriental china keeps its place and is as much a vogue as ever. Another very lovely item of decoration is the porcelain mosaic dado and flizes work, which is greatly used in country houses, where, by the way, the old fashioned Dutch tiles are extremely popular, as they are clean and cheerful. I see many people are already beginning to ornament the exterior of their houses with these bright and clean, quaint and picturesque tiles which are still so common in Spain, Portugal and Mexico. I need not say that flowers are more in fashion than ever, and that no room is considered complete without them, and also a quantity of growing large-leaved exotics, palms and ferns, in marble or brass vases on pedestals.

A London letter writer gossiping of styles in furniture over there says: "Early English" furniture is now entirely out of fashion. "Queen Anne" has also been shelved, and the Italian Renaissance is the thing. "Early English" was an absurd style of decoration. It belonged to no period, and was in reality only a poor, modified copy of the Japanese. The gothic has also entirely disappeared, and is now confined to ecclesiastical buildings. The ideas of gothic chairs and tables is ridiculous, as were the gothic cottages and villas which fifteen years ago were all the vogue. The Renaissance, on the other hand, permits great latitude, and, while decorative and elegant, is also convenient in an extreme degree, because it adapts itself to all the exigencies of modern life. The rich wood carving of the period, so beautifully reproduced by the modern Italians—especially in Florence and Milan,—and the equally rich and glowing hangings of silk and tapestry now employed to cover the walls, as well as drape the windows and doors, are at once picturesque and decorative.

The hall of Jay Gould's house, says the New York Journal, is lighted by Oriental lamps, in glass mosaic, the floor is of marble. On the left, the hall the reception room is placed. The walls are hung in embossed velvet of an old-gold shade. Yellow silk curtains give the chamber a softened, agreeable tint. Upon a red velvet carpet is extended a huge tiger robe trimmed with bear skin. The mantelpiece supports two curious Japanese statuettes in brass, and between them a curious French clock of enamored bronze, surmounted by a mythical figure, also of bronze. In each corner is a bronze pedestal resting upon a black marble base. The mirror, some six feet in height, is of gold, inlaid with ivory. There are only four paintings in this cosy nest of about $20,000. The parlor does not contain a single chair the upholstery of which is not embroidered by hand in the most brilliant contrasts. In the corner nearest the window facing Fifth avenue stands a marble statue of I. Panoseros. Each side of the Fifth avenue windows superb Seyres vases fit into niches made to receive them. Midway between the door and the entrance to the library, into which this apartment opens, stands a magnificent cabinet of ivory, inlaid with gold, that cost $5,000. The marvelous frescoes cost $10,000. In the library there are pictures that cost about $75,000. The dining room is richly upholstered in embossed leather. A solid mahogany extension table fills up the entire corner space, at which thirty people can sit comfortably.
