very happy." "We love each other, and shall be very happy!" repeated John mechanical-ly, and all the sunshine of his life sunk behind the heavy clouds of despair. "Yes, Jodie, I am glad, and I wish you long years of happiness." He turned away and staggered, rather than walked, to his own room. He did not stir all night. Once a deep, sobbing groan struggled to his lips, and the moon-beams struggling through the window fell full upon his face, and surprised two great tears stealing down his pale cheeks. He brushed away this evidence of weakness and sorrow, and when the morrow came, no one looking into his calm, serene eyes would have guessed how hard was the battle that had been fought and won in that lonely chamber. They were married, and the man re jected by the bride and supplanted by the groom was the first to congratulate the newly-married pair. A vacant house on the farm was fitted up for their rceep tions and John Brisben's money paid for the furnishing. "Hereafter, Jodie," he said, we will divide the profits of the farm. I don't need much, and you shall have the larger share.

Ten years passed away, and John Brisben, an old man before his time, still worked from dawn till dark that his Bronchitis and Minister's Sore Throat brother might play the gentleman and keep in comfort the large family which the years had drawn around him. It had been necessary to mortgage the old homestead, to raise mony to pay Joseph's gambling debts, for of late years he had played heaviy and had invariably lost. One day—it was in the summer of 1877 -a forged check was presented at one of the banks at the shire town, by Joseph Brisben, and the money for which it called was unhesitatingly paid over to him. He was under the influence of liquor at the time, and deeply interested in a game of cards for high stakes, which was in progress. The check was for $2,500, I think. Before daylight the next morning Joseph Brisben had lost every dollar of it. To drown his chagrin he became beastly drunk, and while in this condition an officer arrived and ap-
