CHARLEY WEIR AT THE KEY.

An Operator Whose Powers Aston-

"It was at the close of the war, 1864," writes a correspondent in the Titusville, Pa., World, "that's party of us, consisting of thirteen tramp operators, resolved you!" asked the reporter as a Normal to take in the different cities, and who school girl deposited her fair form upon ever could not get work was to be boarded by the rest, Well, we had in our party Charley Weir, now superintendent the little darlings do forget the number of the Adams Express Company at Cincinnati, Ohio, considered to be the most do have a great many of the Normal perfect operator in the business, owing to school girls, and sometimes they plague his great memery. He could store fifty us fearfully, but, bless their hearts, we words in his memory, and write it out at his leisure word for word. Well, we arrived in Buffalo, and not a man had the price of a beer. Our only salvation was in striking some friendly operators. Charley made a motion that he should lead the attack and the balance hold up lead the attack and the balance hold up the rear. It appears the Buffalo office had a great reputation for catching all the operators applying for work by putting them down to taking newspaper reports, which is very fast work. And Charley, pulling his hat over his eyes and stumbling over a chair with an intoxicated smile save. 'Hie I want a job.' The smile, says: 'Hie, I want a job.' The manager winking to one of the chiefs as a signal for him to inform New York sending reports to slide it in, turns and says:

"Well, can you copy report?"
"I recon I can—hic," says Charley, and the manager ushered him over to the report table. Charley took the chair, and closing the key, he informed New York operator to proceed. The manager got all the men in the office to come and witness the sport. He then found Charley looking for a pencil and New York send-ing at lightning speed. The boys all be-gan to laugh, and reaching over stopped New York sending, whereupon Charley again closed the key and told him to pro-ceed where he left off, and, snatching a stub of a pencil from one of the opera-tors, he flew across the sheet with lightning speed, and in less than two minutes ning speed, and in less than two minutes had caught up on his copy, although sixty words had been sent. Well, you just ought to have seen those fellows look at him. New York man increased his speed until he was tired out, and then stopped to ask if Charley was getting on at all. Charley asked him if he couldn't send faster. The manager says:

"Say, old fellow, who are you, any-how?"

"Why, my name is Charley Weir."

They had, of course, all heard of Charley, and a more ashamed crowd you never saw. They acknowledged the joke, and the manager says:

"Mr. Weir, just wait a few moments and we will go and take something."
"Oh, thanks," said Charley, "but I "Oh, thanks," said Charley, have a friend or two outside.'

"Ask them in, to be sure," says Walking to the door Charley gave a whistle, and in walked twelve American travelers.

We were given as fine a supper as ever Queen Victoria relished, at the Terrapin, corner Terrace and Main streets, and a better time I never had.

"I thought you might have been there durin' the hot spell of '67. The heat was so thick that we couldn't tell who was so thick that we couldn't tell who was around at that time. That was the year takes the cake." I got this black eye. Run agin a door, and the heat shivered up so that I didn't even know I'd struck a door until the following winter. Any objection to my closing the transom, gentlemen? I think I feel a draught!" "Must be pretty hot in that climate," remarked another of the party.

"Warmish," assented the seedy man, with a shiver. "I was in the laundry business there for a time, and I run everybody else out of the trade. None of the rest could get along without scorchin' things, but I just went ahead with pieces of hot ice and made my eternal fortune!" "Got any of it now," asked another moving up to give the seedy man room. "No, sir!" returned the seedy man with a sigh. "All the money in that country is gold, mine just melted and ran away one hot night in March! That was the month that we lost all the horses on the Isthmus. The fodder all melted and scalded the stock to death! I walked fourteen miles to find a shady spot, so I could harden up a little hay for my pet stallion, and when I got back the stal-lion's teeth had melted, and the poor brute died of hunger! I say, let the of Harrigan and Hart, New York, who, man shut the windows, won't you?' "You must have a chill," suggested

"No. I'm cold." persisted the seedy "We almost died for want of water that spring. The sea evaporated forty odd miles from the shore, and all the springs were so dry that we had to sprinthe their beds with oil to keep the dust down. There was more than 1,000,000 died of thirst, and I only kept alive because I had some quicksilver which didn't Will you be good enough to The pains, aches, and weakness increased so rapidly move that chair from in front of me? "That's one of the most curious things you ever heard of," replied the seedy "I seen the lightnin' rod on my house expandin', and that put me up to somethin'. I just took down that rod and I planted myself on one end and let her expand. In four hours I was in the piney woods of North Car'lina. You must excuse me, gentlemen; this is too cold for me. I'll go home and get my overcoat and come back."

We are aware that we are combating a prevailing prejudice of the profession and people when we assert that we can and do cure diseases of the blood with a vegetable remedy! We curselves were not easily convinced. But does it make anything less a fact simply because you do not believe it?

Turn to history and read the accounts of the discovery and application of steam, railroads, electricity, etc. Were not those who preached that it was possible to accomplish such grand results, as we see realized to-day, pronounced crazy? And did not scientists say: "incressing." We do not ask that you accept our werd! We bring corroborating testimony. In short we demonstrate by living, reliable witnesses that every word we say is true.

Ask yourself the question, could men occupying the political, social and financial position these men do, afford to endorse those engaged in a work of deception and of fraud? Now let them speak.

Every word we say in regard to our remedy is true, and the certificates we publish are from men of undoubted veracity.
