The Home of the Cow Puncher and Mosquito-The Rush for Land in the Neighborhood of Valentine.

Correspondence of the BEE.

Valentine, Neb., July 11.—When I awoke yesterday morning after an all night ride from O'Neill on a Sioux City and Pacific train, six hundred and thirty-four mosquitoes were tugging away at me.

"What a wild place!" exclaimed the woman who talked. "I'm sure I couldn't live here an instant. I can't find my shoes, oh, yes, here they are. Just look at those Indians! I believe I left my shoe-button at home. Can you tell me where the land office is, sir? I wonder if one can get anything decent to eat here? O Lord! is that the hotel? What is the matter with this shoe? Do they all carry revolvers here? My, how dangerous!"

And so on until the Burlington & Missouri clerk and myself looked weary and started for the Valentine house. If I could only make you a few sketches instead of writing, I would draw some of the crowd of Sioux Indians that were in from the Rosebud reservation yesterday to haul supplies.

This is the home of the cow-puncher. Here he stands, tall, well-formed, with muscles of iron and bronzed, generally handsome face. High boots, always white shirt and heavy pants, an immense white hat, at the hip a glistening revolver of the largest pattern, always loaded, and always carried in a belt filled with cartridges. This is the cow-boy's top.

He plays with his children play with toy-sticks, and fires it off whenever he feels like it. The night is merry with its gentle fusillade, the cow-boy shoots dogs with it, shoots at stove-pipe hats if they appear on the street, shoots at the ground in front of the "tenderfoot" and scatters the dirt over his polished shoes, he flourishes it in the moonlight, he plays tunes on it, he serenades with it. The wind blow off a stranger's stiff hat the other night, an urechin caught it and tossed it into the air, twenty revolvers were whipped out and the hat fell to the ground riddled with holes. I picked up a bullet last night which was fired into the hard ground two inches, just in front of the leading store. It was fired "just for fun."

This store is a great rendezvous. It belongs to Thatcher, Cornell & Co., who are also post-traders at Fort Niobrara. It contains everything imaginable in the way of general merchandise. The Indians are their best customers; always going away from there with their arms loaded with bundles, for which they pay cash, or hides, buffalo robes, muskoxen, pipes, bead purses and other articles.

and yesterday some white man came in to Valentine to say that the Indians had chosen a homestead, declaring that it was the land of Red Cloud. They went out again to-day to enforce their claims.

The Camp Meeting at Clear Lake. CLEAR LAKE, Iowa, July 13.—The Iowa State camp meeting last night, was one of unusual power. Mr. Harrison conducted the services. At the invitation to come forward, at least fifty persons presented themselves at the altar. The closing hour witnessed the conversion of many. Morning services to-day were given up to the relating of christian experiences. The interest is intense. At the close of the afternoon sermon Mr. Harrison led the entire audience in consecration service, even more impressive than any that preceded it. Rev. Dr. Joyce, of Cincinnati, is expected to arrive to-morrow.

The Vermont Miners' Cause. The Press. If there is any justice in rebellion or virtue in resistance, the striking Vermont miners may command respect, if not sympathy. The stand they have taken is not a strike in the common sense, but an appeal for wages already earned, and if their attitude toward their employers is menacing it is so because their needs are imperative and their sufferings great. The Vershire mine has been reputed to be one of the richest copper mines in the country. It has been operated very quietly, and its owners, a party of capitalists, have not paid the wages of the miners since April. The men, made desperate by famine, have seized the mine and the company's store in the village, have armed themselves for a struggle and pillaged the buildings of the officers of the company. For the first time in the history of Vermont the militia has been called out to quell a mob, but as yet the miners have not clouded the justice of their cause by acts of violence. The mine is a picturesque spot, lying in the valley of a small tributary of the Connecticut River. The mouth of the shaft is faced by the groups of rough shanties built on the sand and bowlders of the river's bank, and here at sunrise on Saturday morning the Vermont soldiers landed with shining bayonets and loaded muskets, ready to take the starving families with the crack of firearms. Deprived of food, sun-burned, grossly wronged, and situated in a region barren of the fruits of the soil, these miners present an unhappy picture of New England life.

The following, copied from the Lowell Daily Courier, speaks well of an article made in their city: "Hood's Sarsaparilla is fast growing in use, and doing much good. This is no 'patent medicine,' but a preparation of a standard article for specific diseases, and its effect is said to be very marked. The testimonials which they give are bona fide, from parties who have used the preparation, and cheerfully give their testimony as to its worth. Those afflicted with Scrofula, Biliousness or General Debility, should try this remedy. Hood & Co. are careful and experienced pharmacists, and their preparations can be relied on."

Crop Notes. Correspondence of the BEE. TABLE ROCK, Neb., July 10.—Crops are looking well. Corn is growing very rapidly. All small grains are ripening fast. The crops on the bottom lands along the Nemaha, that were overwatered, are of course a failure. Many have been given up, and the yield will be very small. The wheat crop was a splendid show last Friday, followed by warm weather, and the farmers are feeling very jubilant. LOGAN, Ia., July 12.—Small grain has done well the last week. Farmers all feel well. Corn never grew faster than it has this year. That little fall grain there is in good and nearly ready to harvest.

A WIDOW'S WEALTH. The Fortune of a California Railroad King Returning to Benefit a Berkshire Village.

A correspondent of the Boston Journal says: Of all the men of the east who rushed to California immediately after the announcement of the discovery of gold in California, Mark Hopkins was a leader, and subsequently he became an immense power in shaping the destinies of the State and developing its resources. He inherited his energy from his forefathers, who came to this country in 1634 from Coventry, England. The American sire of the family was John Hopkins, a merchant, who came from Cambridge, Mass., in March, 1635. The senior Mark Hopkins was a Great Barrington merchant, with Anastasia Kellogg as a wife. In 1806 he left Berkshire for Henderson, N. Y., and he had seven children, Mark being the fifth son.

Mark Hopkins was a man of great energy and enterprise. He was a member of the Massachusetts legislature, and he was a prominent member of the New York legislature. He was a successful merchant and a successful politician. He was a man of great wealth and a man of great influence.

THE TONY BURC OF CASS.

The Pale Ambient Air of Morn Knocked into Smith-creens.

The Racket Raised by a Small Firm. Journalistic and General News.

Special Correspondence of The BEE. PLATTSMOUTH, Neb., July 12.—The largest town in the county-seat of Cass county is too well known throughout the State to need any description of a detailed account of its many business advantages and business interests. Since the B. & M. bridge was completed about two years ago, and the establishing of the machine and general repair shops here, the town has steadily grown, and Plattsmouth is numbered among the best towns in Nebraska.

Business with retailers has been rather quiet during the past month or so, but now, as the prospects for an abundant crop of corn, small grain and fruit are good, trade has revived, and everything goes on in good shape and merchants are quelling and happy. This morning, at about half past three, when the plaintive mosquito had ceased his bloody skirmishing and had retired to his jungle to fall for utterance; when the festive and soft-eyed house-fly was still lingering in his last preparatory to making his morning round; when the whistles of the Perkins house boarders, the shrieking of a locomotive whistle rang out loud and long on the still night air; Everybody was awake in an instant and before any cause could be attributed to this untimely uproar, a second engine joined in, accompanied by the wail of the whistle and the ringing of all the engine bells in the yard. Finally, after all the inhabitants of Cass county were aroused, and prancing about in their night clothes, trying to find cotton to stuff in their ears, or a dose of laudanum to put them out of the misery, the deafening noise stopped, and people began to breathe easier. Some one said there was a fire. Pretty soon some heavy weight individual commenced pounding a big bell with a sledge hammer, and again all the whistles in town were heard from. People began to grow frantic, and a wicked drummer suggested that the man with the sledge hammer be visited and shot, but some cooler heads remonstrated, saying that no one would attempt to make such a noise unless he were bullet proof to start with. After the engines had begun to roar, the man with the sledge hammer became weary and tired, quiet was restored. The fire proved to be in the store of W. R. Carter, about half a mile southwest of the main business center. The building was a total loss, and was insured for $600. The stock was mostly carried out, but was considerably damaged by breakage and water.

Hon. Daniel H. Wheeler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, informed your correspondent that he had just received notice that the Altman Tailor Co. had shipped the $480 separator which was to be published in the Hall Co. agricultural society for the best exhibit at the state fair last fall. Mr. Wheeler reports the acreage of corn for 1882 at 1,750,000 and for 1883, to date, at 2,010,000. Articles of incorporation of the Plattsmouth & Southwestern railroad have been filed and will be published in a day or two. Although there is not much railroad talk there is evidently a good deal of thinking and acting going on, and as the parties named who are at the head of the enterprise are among the best business men in the state, there is little doubt about the success of the undertaking.

A game of base ball, between the Plattsmouth club and the Wabos is in progress this afternoon and drew a large crowd to the fair grounds, a mile west of the city. There was an entertainment at the Opera house last night, and to-day an itinerant combination, consisting of a man and another man is giving a ten-cent exhibition in a vacant store, and an Uncle Tom's Cabin company is expected soon, all of which goes to show that Plattsmouth is not behind in the way of amusements.

The Plattsmouth sportsman's gun club held a shooting match here last week for the silver cup held since last fall by Geo. Smith. The cup was won by C. H. Smith after a close contest in which clay pigeons were used in stead of glass balls or live birds. There is still two more Smiths to be hunted from among the other members of the club have little or no faith in winning the cup until all the Smith family have been served.

Preparations are being made for the county fair here this fall, and everyone anticipates a big time and a successful show. Local politics are being talked to quite a considerable extent and several candidates are reported as getting ready for the baby kissing, button holing and handshaking campaign.

The Journal suspended its daily edition for the present on Tuesday last, a fact which is much regretted here. The Herald is now the only daily paper in town, and keeps a large list of subscribers well informed on all subjects of interest.

A new paper, to be called The Cass County Press, will soon be launched on the uncertain sea of journalism, with M. O'Donoghue as editor and proprietor. W. F. Croll met with quite a serious accident to-day, at the Burlington & Missouri shops, by letting fall a heavy piece of iron across his foot, cutting off the great toe and otherwise bruising his foot.

For You, Madam, Whose Complexion betrays some humiliating imperfection, whose mirror tells you that you are Tanned, Sallow and disfigured in countenance, or have Eruptions, Redness, Roughness or unwholesome tints of Complexion, we say use Hagan's Magnolia Balm.

It is a delicate, harmless and delightful article, producing the most natural and entrancing tints, the artificiality of which no observer can detect, and which soon becomes permanent if the Magnolia Balm is judiciously used.
