MR. CHANDLER may rule the seas, but he can't control a New Hampshire legislature.

MAYOR CHASE, in days gone by, was one of the engineers. Now he is one of the enjoined.

HAVING assailed General Garfield's character, Steve Dorsey had better retain Bob Ingersoll again to protect his own.

The sentiment manifested throughout the State over the capitol contract steal is very ominous for the future of the office holders who helped to engineer it.

MADE and Sullivan have been matched to fight with soft gloves. If they could knock each other out of existence in three rounds, the world would be happier.

MR. TILDEN says he is not positively a candidate for the presidency, but his address until further notice will be Grammercy Park, New York.

The civil service commission in New York are examining letter carriers. The size of the calves of their legs is an important item which ought not to be overlooked.

CHIEF JUSTICE WAITE met with a serious accident on Wednesday in the Yellowstone park, being thrown from his horse. A bucking broncho is no respecter of persons.

STEVE DORSEY is expressing his opinion of General Garfield. Fortunately for the great star router, the dead General Garfield cannot express his opinion of Steve Dorsey.

COL. ILGES, who is now on trial for duplicating his pay accounts, has been twice before charged with the same offense. In Col. Ilges' case it is likely to be "one, two, three and out."

TILDEN sends two pictures to the Louisville Exposition. One is Huntington's portrait of Tilden, and the other is "A Hopeless Case." The latter refers to Mr. Tilden's candidacy for the presidency.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR will pass through Omaha on August 2nd or 3rd. A copy of the last veto which Mayor Chase didn't sign ought to be shown him as the latest product of public improvements in a growing city.

THAT notorious blatherskite, Denis Kearney, has been refused a hearing by the New York Central Labor Union. Denis' trip is proving a poor investment for the managers of the Central Pacific railroad.

OMAHA will expend $500,000 in public improvements if a corrupted council and swindling contractors do not compel our citizens to oppose the letting of any contracts through a board of public works and a mayor in whom the people have lost confidence.

The price of stock cattle is declining, and tenderfoot, having been paying for herds of 2,000 head on the range which will foot up less than 600 on the round up, are beginning to feel very sick over the prospect.

The astounding news, "General Grant dropped dead," was flashed over the wires throughout the country. There was much excitement until it transpired that the sentence was the cipher signal for the telegraphers' strike.

TWELVE thousand telegraphers are on a strike and the stories of both the employers and the men are before the public. The strike will probably end as most great strikes do in mutual concessions and a compromise. The sooner this result is attained the better it will be for all parties concerned.

The sooner President Arthur relieves the country of Internal Revenue Collector Evans, the better will be his administration. Mr. Evans is a large bull in the department china shop, and the way the crockery is flying forbodes no good for the administration's peace of mind. A man who openly asserts that he cares nothing for public censure is not a fit person to act as a high government official.

A SHAMEFUL outrage has been committed upon the American consulate at Monterey by a mob of armed Mexicans. If Mr. Frelinghuysen, who hasn't been heard of since his South American fiasco, has the spirit of a gnat he will demand a prompt explanation and apology from the Greaser government. The reports of insults to American missionaries in Madagascar do not yet seem to have reached the state department and would probably be pigeonholed if they did. Mr. Frelinghuysen, showing older in a Dutch Reformed class than he does as the secretary of state of a great government.

MAYOR CHASE AND THE JOBBERS.

Mayor Chase has gone over bag and baggage to the jobbers and robbers in the city council. In becoming a party to the sand-stone swindle in the face of remonstrances from the leading tax payers of Omaha and the almost unanimous sentiment of his constituents he has lost forever the confidence of this community. Time was when Mayor Chase in spite of his known failings and eccentricities was looked upon as an honest man who would at all hazards protect the interests of this city. But Colonel Chase has fallen into bad hands of late, and his best friends are forced to admit now that he is not only a wreck but a dangerous man in the position he now holds. Our relations with him have been cordial, but we are forced to voice the indignant sentiment of this community at his betrayal of a trust.

Mayor Chase cannot plead ignorance of the character of the job that he has endorsed. It is much more infamous than the Holly job which he helped to block. If he had taken the counsel of our honest business men half as much as he has of the corrupt gang of shysters that are employed in engineering through this outrageous defiance of public sentiment he would never have so disappointed his friends and erased his record by lending a helping hand to bribe takers, scoundrels and swindlers. It is not for us to say, at this time, what influences were brought upon Colonel Chase to serve him from the path of a plain duty. But his condition for months past has been a source of deep mortification to his friends and of congratulation to his enemies. He has steadily avoided those who would have been his best counselors in times of doubt, and has permitted himself to be led by the worst elements of this community. The result could not long be doubtful.

To those who have known the Mayor in his better days this sad ending of an honorable if eccentric official record is a sad one. The only thing that remains for our citizens is the protection of the courts. When their rights and interests were menaced before, Judge Savage stood as a bulwark between the jobbers and the people. We have no doubt that Judges Wakeley and Neville will as fearlessly do their duty.

IS THE QUEEN INSANE? It is openly asserted now in London that Queen Victoria is insane. A correspondent of a leading New York paper says that the statement is now "coldly, calmly, openly, dispassionately discussed by partisans as well as foes, by flatterers and scoffers, by the staunch adherent and fawning courtier, no less than the violent anarchist or the red republican. The mind of the queen, not her body, is affected. Her eccentricities have taken upon themselves a name, which is only a synonym for insanity. The lurking taint in the Hanoverian blood, the dementia traceable to the line of the Georges, bursting out ever and afresh in some wild or wicked freak, now seems to have unmistakably overtaken the queen."

For years the selfishness and eccentricity of the queen have been matters of daily comment. Erratic fancies, sudden caprices, unreasoning dislikes and unquerable obstinacies have been her leading mental characteristics. These have now culminated in a sudden and serious attack of protracted melancholia. Like her royal great uncle, the mind of Victoria is now clouded with undisguisable insanity.

Several reasons are given for the queen's mania. In the first place, the disease is hereditary in the Hanoverian blood. But this last and painful outbreak is undoubtedly attributable to the death of John Brown, her favorite gillie. For years, it is said, the queen has believed in the doctrine of the transmigration of souls, and has persuaded herself that the spirit of the dead Prince Albert had settled in the body of John Brown. It was for this reason that Victoria lavished her sympathies and affection on her servant and braved all public comment and private remonstrance. The death of John Brown has been followed by the appearance of symptoms of acute mania, which the queen's physicians have vainly endeavored to conceal from the public. It is on this account, if the correspondent of the New York Sun is to be believed, that her majesty has been withdrawn from all intercourse and absolutely secluded from any eyes except those of her own household.

The hints of the leading London papers are now turned into unqualified rumors that the queen of England is hopelessly insane and that many months cannot elapse before the prince of Wales will be called upon to assume the regency.

Blaine's History. We have the pleasure of announcing the approaching issue of a great historical work, covering the events of congress for twenty years, and giving an inside view of national legislation and contemporary administrations during the most momentous period of American history, with introductory chapters showing the remote and immediate causes of the civil war. As for the period chosen, only that of the revolution is comparable in importance. Even that of the revolution boasts no pre-eminence. In both periods alike, the national congress was witness to events not less tremendous and decisive than those of the battlefield itself. The upholding, in due measure, of the union cause at home. The defense of the national cause abroad; the adjustment of constitutional conflicts; the securing of practical guarantees of future loyalty; all that was included in the province of congressional discussion and enactment, in the period from 1861 onward. The proclamation of war; the call for troops; the issuing of national currency; the act of emancipation; the confederate surrender at Appomattox court house; the granting, at last, of universal amnesty; the murder of Lincoln; the proposed assassination of Seward; the attempted removal of Stanton; the impeachment of Johnson; the election of Grant; the electoral commission and seating of Hayes; the inauguration and assassination of Garfield; those

THEIR PROTECTION.

True, but the very trees you plant for a protection are just what you want, and in time will doubtless be even more useful than the fruit trees themselves, while the only expense is the planting and care. The trees in many of the orchards in this vicinity were purchased of the Crete nursery, and as they have made rapid growth, it will only be the matter of a little time until it will be proven to the satisfaction of all, that Nebraska can raise as fine fruit and as much of it as any state east or west.

AN APPEAL TO THE LAW.

Their petitions to the city council having been rejected and their remonstrances insolently spurned, the tax payers of Omaha have appealed to the courts for protection against the venal crew of jobbers and corruptionists who are endeavoring to fasten themselves upon this community to handicap its progress and to rob its treasury.

Yesterday in response to the petition of Messrs. Karbach and Frank, representing the property owners on Fifteenth and Eleventh streets, an order restraining the mayor, council and board of public works from contracting for Colorado sandstone pavements on the streets mentioned was served upon the above named officials. The case will be argued on Wednesday, when the point at issue will be the granting of an injunction on behalf of our citizens and against the jobbers and sharks of the sandstone ring. This appeal to the courts is in every respect proper and timely. Mayor Chase's cowardly surrender to the jobbers took away the last hope that our citizens had of blocking this corrupt scheme without appealing to the courts which once before saved Omaha from her own officials. It was hoped that our community would be saved this last and mortifying resort. But the necessity having a second time arisen the case will be prosecuted with all the energy which marked the fight against the Holly ring. In the face of such an utter defiance of both the spirit and the letter of our city charter, as has been exhibited by the men who have determined to force an obnoxious paving material upon our citizens, we have no doubt what the result of these suits will be when calmly and deliberately passed upon by an honest and intelligent bench. The outcome will determine for years to come whether Omaha is to be governed by the will of her citizens or ruled by the passions and cowardice of unworthy and dishonest officials.

Accordingly, the statements of Mr. Blaine, corroborated by both external and internal proof, will possess an authority which will not be questioned. Even those who may differ from his estimate of men and acts will yet be indebted to his narration, and will be interested in his views. His personal reminiscences and portraits of Lincoln, Douglas, Seward, Chase, Giddings, Hale, Stevens, Stanton, Breckenridge, Sumner, Wilson, Grant, Fremont, Hayes, Fremont and many others of the past, with incidents of many public men still living, will give to Mr. Blaine's work, to young and old alike, the fascination of biography and general history combined. Such a work, therefore, as that proposed, from his hand, is the literary event of our times. It possesses great combined political, historical and personal interest than any other work of the century. It will be welcomed by every student of modern American history. It will find a place in every library. It is sure to be one of the most popular, as well as one of the most valuable books ever offered to the public.

STOCK SHIPMENTS.

At this time last year the shipping season was well entered upon, but as yet no range cattle have been sent to the Chicago market over the Union Pacific. In the western part of Wyoming some cattle were gathered for shipment two weeks ago by a Cheyenne stockman, but they proved so "green" that they were turned loose again, and Messrs. Haas & Evans also visited North Park a short time ago with a view of beginning their usual shipments, but did not do so for the same reasons. The leader says the Bosler brothers have ordered cars for the 25th instant, at Ogallala, and theirs will be the first train load sent in 1883 to Chicago. Bosler will send over the road about 19,000 during the season. Once begun a very active shipping business may be looked for. As the season is to be shortened by a month, and the number to be shipped is about the same as last year, the market will be watched closely by many interested stockmen of the northern range.

DORSEY'S BATCH OF LIES.

For a year or more S. W. Dorsey has been scattering from Washington through the columns of every newspaper to which he could get access, a series of charges against the integrity of the late President Garfield. The President, being dead, was an object of attack exactly suited to the temper and capacity of Dorsey, who by dint of repeating lies to which his dead victim could not reply, hoped finally to make an impression on the public mind. As he knew that his own assertions, though under oath, would not be believed, he has tried to strengthen them by threats that he would publish certain damaging letters which, he alleges, came into his possession as secretary of an advisory national committee in 1880. He has at last succeeded in getting all the ancient and fish-like stories that he has started strung together and published in the New York Sun under the head of "An Abstract of the Budget of Stephen W. Dorsey," and accompanied by an ingenious editorial, which seeks to give Dorsey's rubbish some sort of dignity. This is nuts for the scurrilous star route thief, because it gives him an apparent standing in a decent journal which he has not for a long time enjoyed.

It is a dirty piece of business, however, in which he has entangled the Sun, which, in its zeal to strike the republican party, forgets what is due to its own reputation. Were it really necessary, in the interest of historical truth, and present and future good government, to blacken the name of the dead president, it would be a painful task for any honorable journalist, to be undertaken only on convincing evidence, from reputable sources, and being sustained by public use of documentary proof. But when a journal takes the unsupported word of a revengeful scoundrel whom its own columns have shown to be a robber of the treasury, a faithless senator, and steeped in corruption, and on that word, without producing one line of the documents which he pretends to possess, seeks to destroy the memory of the president, it surely sacrifices to partisan feeling much that a respectable journal holds sacred. It would be attaching more importance to Dorsey's stale stories than is worth while to examine them in detail. They have been before the public for months, and they have produced no effect whatever upon the minds of impartial men. His unconscionable brag about his part in the campaign of 1880 has been exposed long since, and to any one who cares to compare his conflicting statements they defeat themselves. So far from being the trusted director of that campaign, he was throughout a suspicious busybody. The greatest labor for which he is responsible was the labor he imposed upon the persons interested in watching him to prevent an outbreak of his unconquerable fondness for treachery. The Republican party and the present administration are fair subjects for searching criticism from their political opponents, but the effort to remain there by joining a disreputable wretch like Dorsey in defaming the memory of President Garfield is neither decent nor shrewd.

FRUIT IN NEBRASKA.

Fruit in Nebraska, has been a question with many ever since the country was first settled, and though the orchards here are yet too young to demonstrate this fact, the orchards in the vicinity of Crete, about forty miles east, are older and give promise of a good crop. Apples raised in that vicinity heretofore, are said to have been as fine as any raised in the famous orchards of New York. The finest orchard we have yet seen in Nebraska, is that belonging to the Crete nurserymen, but the effort to remain there, they have 60 acres in orchard, fruit of every variety, and for every season of the year. The Crete market was supplied with cherries during the cherry season and large quantities were shipped daily to other towns. Mr. Stephens informed us that their daily sales averaged about 250. The apples are of a fine quality, and are sold at the trifling expense of an orchard, every farmer in the country should have one. There is no doubt, that if the stock of trees selected has been raised in this climate, and properly planted and protected, but that fruit can be raised as successfully in Nebraska as in eastern states. No one, however, can be made that will enhance greater value, and return a greater profit than the amount of money and labor invested and expended on an orchard. If a man wishes to sell his farm it will command a higher price and find more ready buyers. Some say, "If I buy fruit trees for an orchard, I've got to plant forest trees for

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS!

Some of the prying gossip of Washington say that President Arthur continues to send flowers from the white-house conservatory to Miss Beckwith, the young lady with whom the match-makers used to associate his name last winter. The New York Truth, in this connection, recalls the fact that the only lady of the white house who entered it as a bride was Mrs. Tyler. "She was at that time," says The Truth, "a beautiful young lady, amiable and accomplished, and became a great favorite in society. President Tyler paid her marked attention that winter, and when the family returned to Washington the next season the attachment ripened into an engagement. It was hastened somewhat by the sudden death of her father, who was one of those killed by the explosion of the gun on board the Princeton. The marriage was performed in New York a few months before the president's term expired, and attracted increased attention from the fact that the lady was the first who had ever entered the white house as a bride." Here is a precedent for the president, and he might as well set the gossip-mongers at rest by following it.
