How a Detroit Citizen Paid $3 a Pound for Butter.

Detroit Free Press.

The other morning a citizen who had been cautioned to send up some butter as he went down town or eat dry bread for dinner stepped into a grocery store and bought and paid for three pounds. The cash tendered was in shape of a bill and the citizen did not count his change until he had traveled several squares. Then he made a discovery.

"Why, I gave him a $1 bill and he has given me back over $9," he soliloquized. "I could keep this money and he would be none the wiser, but I am not that sort of a clothes-pin. I will at once return it."

He was as good as his promise. Returning to the store with the money in his hand, he said:

"Lucky for you that I am an honest man. You gave me $9 too much in making change."

"I guess not."

"Well, I guess you did, and here it is. I want only what belongs to me."

The grocer sullenly thanked him and the citizen went on his way, but in an hour or so he made another discovery. He found the one dollar bill and missed the ten.

"It was a ten I gave him and the change was right," he gasped. "I must go to him and explain."

He started for the grocery, hung around for awhile and then started his car. "You are a vile swindler, sir!" promptly replied the grocer.

"Oh, no; I'm not. I'm simply a victim of a too honest conscience."

"You get out! I didn't like the cut of your phiz in the first place, and when you brought back the $9 I knew you had some sort of a game. Now you, sir, you travel, or I'll call the police!"

"But I'm an honest man! I tell you there is a mistake here," protested the buyer.

"You promenade! I'm on all the little games, and you can't make a cent. Boy, call in a policeman!"

The citizen talked out and kicked lamp-posts and rubbed against baby carriages, and refused to recognize his best friends. He had not only paid over $3 per pound for butter, but he had beaten himself all around. He rushed to a lawyer to see what he could do, and the lawyer replied:

"Bide your time and pass a counterfeit twenty off on him—free, $5."

BEAST OR HUMAN BEING?

The Wabash Valley Terrorized by a Wild Woman.

A wild woman, or perhaps the mate of the gorilla recently captured, has appeared near Lafayette, Ind., and is terrorizing the people. Mrs. Frank Coffman, the wife of a well-known farmer, said the other day and thus describes it: "Mrs. Coffman was passing through the timber when she suddenly saw to her right a hideous creature, formed like a woman, with long black hair floating in the wind, and the whole body covered with short, white hair. The creature was breaking twigs from a sycamore tree and eating the bark. The noise made in breaking the bush prevented its hearing Mrs. Coffman's approach. Frozen with horror the farmer's wife stood and gazed on the remarkable creature before her. Suddenly the wild woman turned, and, facing her civilized sister, glared at her with baleful light in her eyes. Raising her long, hairy arms she gave an unearthly shriek and darted away into the forest. Almost paralyzed with fear Mrs. Coffman gazed after the wild creature for a moment, then, with agonized screams, she fled homeward. Her cries of attracted her husband, who was at work in the field, and he hastened toward her, reaching her side as her knees gave way with weakness resulting from mortal terror. He carried his wife to the house, gave the alarm, and soon half a hundred men and boys, accompanied by dogs, were on the trail of the wild woman. She was nearly pursued, and several times came between being caught, but eluded her pursuers with wonderful agility and cunning. For fully half a mile of the chase she never out of sight. Her feet touched the ground but seldom. She would grab the underbrush with her long, bony hands, and swing from bush to bush and limb to limb with wonderful ease. She seemed only endeavoring to keep beyond the reach of her pursuers, until, coming to a swamp, she disappeared as suddenly and effectually as an extinguished light, and no searching served to ascertain her whereabouts."

Girls Who Want the Earth.

From a Dakota Letter.

Now, as regards the gentler sex who came here to "hold their own" claims. All over the territory you will find these little shanties. In many of them stylish and pretty young ladies take up a night's lodging every month or oftener. I have seen numbers of misses from the eastern states, who are out here "holding down" a quarter section. Others who have been in Iowa, or Minnesota, or Dakota, make monthly pilgrimages to their ranch, or, more likely, go once in two months and remain two nights, endure this sacrifice to their comfort and the shock to their nerves a few times, and become owners of valuable real estate. A Dakota girl that isn't holding down a quarter section is of no account. The only drawback to the eastern girls is the fact that they must publicly declare that they are over twenty-one before they can file their application. A hundred and sixty acres of land, you know, is not much of an inducement to an eastern girl for such an admission. But out here it is altogether different, for it only lasts six months and at the end of that time the young ladies go right back to civilization and twenty again. Indeed, it is looked upon as really romantic, despite the fact that wolves howl around at night and gophers play hide-and-seek through the shanties like rats.

Thrashing a Bridegroom.

The novel spectacle of a man and woman pursuing a fleeing 17-year-old boy up street and belaboring him at every bound with a clap-board and willow switches, attracted a crowd of people on M street, Washington, on Tuesday afternoon. The boy was Ernest C. Lowe, and he was being spanked and switched for getting married. His father is employed at the navy yard. Ernest procured a marriage license, stating to the clerk that he was over 21 years old, and in the afternoon was married to Rose I. Buckley, a damsel about his own age. Later he called at the parental mansion and introduced the fair Rosa as his bride. The surprised parents said nothing, but disappeared in a hazy way. Ernest, returning with a stout switch ordered the young woman out. He then began to belabor the boy, who stood it for a moment, but soon broke away and ran down the street, the father following plying the switch, admirably supported by the mother, who had procured a clapboard, which she used as a weapon. Ernest was finally captured and taken home, an hour later joined his bride at her father's, where they were serenaded by a brass band.

Captain Ericsson's Destroyer.

New York Sun.

The new series of trial trips of Captain Ericsson's torpedo boat, the Destroyer, cannot fail to awaken universal interest. The central feature of the new invention is submarine artillery. If it is proved in practical experiments with the vessel, under circumstances analogous to those of actual hostile operations, that the Destroyer can discharge her gun under water in such a way as to take effect against the hull of an enemy, this instrument of warfare will be exceedingly important. The series of experiments of this sort conducted some time ago, under the supervision of a naval officer, were promising, and although some conditions were then unfavorable, and the officer in question desired fuller demonstrations and some improvements, he did not fail to commend the results actually achieved. Fuller satisfaction may now be expected, as improvements have been effected. To the United States this appliance is specially important, as it may prove the sub-

Miss Barton is Made Mrs. Tunison.

Her Watchful Aunt Got Rid of at the Very Last Possible Moment.

New York, July 16.—The elopement of B. C. Tunison, a young lawyer of Jersey City, with Miss Belle Barton, of 1767 Pa., was made public yesterday. Mr. Tunison is the eldest son of the Rev. Mr. Tunison, of the Jersey City district of the Methodist church. About two or three weeks ago he made the acquaintance of the young lady who is now his wife, at the house of a friend on Sip avenue, where she was visiting. She is about 18 years old. They soon fell in love, and then Miss Barton confided to him that she was engaged to a wealthy old bachelor in her native place, whom her mother desired her to marry. She did not reciprocate the affection, but felt unable to oppose the wishes of her family. Tunison proposed an elopement, and she assented, but she said she expected her aunt would come on to Jersey City in a day or two to take her home, and if anything were to be done it must be done before the aunt's arrival.

On Saturday, July 7, Mr. Tunison called on her and discovered that the aunt had arrived unexpectedly early, but succeeded, however, in communicating secretly with the young lady, and learned that she and her aunt were to start that afternoon for their home by the Pennsylvania railroad. He hurried to the office of George H. Barron, a friend and formerly a fellow law student. To Barron he confided his secret. The pair proceeded to the depot and waited for Miss Barton and her aunt to appear. When the ladies had arrived and had entered a street car, Mr. Tunison wrote a message to the aunt summoning her to his office on Montgomery street on business of vital importance. He gave the message to a district messenger for delivery. The boy rushed into the car and handed it to the aunt, who had been describing to him. She read it, and then excusing herself for a few minutes, she went, hastened out of the depot and up Montgomery street.

No sooner was she out of sight than Mr. Tunison, who had been anxiously watching the success of this maneuver, rushed into the car and warmly greeted the bewildered young lady. He rapidly explained to her the cause of her aunt's sudden departure, and readily induced her to accompany him to this city, where they were married that afternoon by the Rev. Mr. Simpson, of Twentieth street, and set out with her to Manhattan Beach, where they stayed several days. They were returned to Jersey City, by the relatives of Mrs. Tunison, seen resigned to her marriage.

Immigration Statistics.

An interesting statement concerning immigration into the United States has just been issued by the treasury department. The number of immigrants arriving during the year ending June 30, 1883 was 599,114, being 189,878 less than the immigration during the preceding fiscal year, and 70,317 less than during the year ended June 30, 1881. The arrivals from the several foreign countries were as follows: England and Wales, 79,852; Ireland, 63,720; Scotland, 19,612; Austria, 10,517; Germany, 191,643; Italy, 31,715; Norway, 21,849; Sweden, 34,596; Canada, 64,971; all other countries, 73,849. The principal ports of districts at which this emigration was received were: Boston, 39,690; Boston, 48,188; Detroit, 17,109; Huron, 45,393; Minnesota, 1,182; New Orleans, 1,707; New York, 406,697; Philadelphia, 24,807; San Francisco, 8,191. Accompanying the statement is a report showing the extent of immigration since 1830. In that year the number of immigrants was 23,322. Ten years later it had increased to 84,069, and in 1842 it reached 100,000 for the first time, being then 104,565. In 1846 it reached 154,416, and the following year, owing to the famine in Ireland, it amounted to 234,968. In 1850 it was 310,004, and 1854 427,833. These figures were not again reached until 1873. In 1855 the arrivals were only 200,827, and the falling off continued until 1862, when immigration was down to 91,823. In 1865 a revival set in, the arrivals being 248,111, but the increase was not maintained, and after reaching 473,141 in 1875, it fell to 197,954 in 1879. In 1880, however, a great tide of foreigners again set this way, and the immigration reached 484,196, in 1881 695,163, and in 1882 the enormous number of 816,272.
