"SAVE ME FROM MY FRIEND."
Professor Aughey Compromised by the Skillful Forgeries of a Friend.

The Names of Prominent Lincolnites Placed on His Paper—The Statement of the Professor.

Parties who came up from Lincoln Saturday reported that the capital city is shaken up a great deal over the recent discovery that affects the reputation of a prominent professor in the university. About a week ago one of the curbside brokers who shaves notes, was called upon by a bank officer for an explanation. The startling discovery had been made that a note discounted for Professor Samuel Aughey bore the forged endorsement of Mr. Daniels, of Lincoln. The broker at once began an active inquiry, when it was discovered by comparison of notes that paper of Prof. Aughey bearing the forged endorsements of W. H. B. Stout, W. J. Turner, T. M. Marquette and Mr. Daniels, ranging all the way from $100 to $500, were held by various banks and parties at Lincoln. It seems that Professor Aughey had for a number of years been a borrower from shysters and sharks at cent percent rates, and that he sometimes had notes endorsed by the parties named. It will naturally be imagined that the lawyers and bankers were in a ferment. Professor Aughey was called on for an explanation. He claimed that his signature was genuine but that the endorsements were forged by a friend whose name he at first declined to give. After a week's negotiation he turned over whatever real and personal property he had to redeem some of his obligations and came to Omaha in company with an attorney to improve his friends to help him out of his trouble.

PROFESSOR AUGHEY'S STATEMENT.
 Professor Aughey was in the city Saturday and was seen by a BEE reporter. He consented to an interview, and said: "A certain person who owed me a considerable sum of money, and was unable to pay it, volunteered to get endorsers to my paper. I consented to the arrangement. As it turned out, he forged the endorsements. The whole amount of the forged notes approximates $3,000. About a week ago, one of the notes not being met when due, the endorsers were called upon to make it good, and it was discovered that the endorsement was a forgery. Subsequent investigation led to the discovery that a large amount of forged paper bearing my name was in circulation. I immediately went to work to pay off all these notes in order that the endorsers should not suffer. The larger part have already been paid and all will be within forty-eight hours. I hold in my hands a letter admitting his part in this transaction which has placed me in such an embarrassing position. A warrant will at once be issued for his arrest, and will be placed in the hands of a detective. I admit that I appear seriously compromised in this matter, but I am not guilty."

The letter referred to is as follows:
 OMAHA, Neb., July 29.
 DEAR AUGHEY: Your letter to hand, I admit it all, but can't write the confession you ask for nor make my appearance. Like yourself I did like to ask any one to go on your paper, and not being able to pay myself, and put the names on myself. But you knew I did not mean to intend any one to suffer and shall yet pay every cent and when the greatest danger is over will assume it all. Now don't put a detective on my track. I do or have a business elsewhere under another name and you know the reason.

D. C. V.
 Professor Aughey is all broken up. He says he hasn't slept for a week and appears greatly prostrated. When questioned as to the name of his guilty friend he first refused to give it, but when pressed finally produced the note signed by D. C. Vigenham. The date being Omaha, he was asked whether Mr. Vigenham lived here, and he stated that he didn't know where he lived but it was in the western part of the state. He claimed that Vigenham owes him the full amount of the notes and that he secured the endorsement in lieu of immediate payment of what he himself owed. The case is a very sad and a singular one. The forger was said to be remarkably well done, so much so that Mr. Marquette was in doubt about his own. The letter of Vigenham is written in a peculiar and illiterate style, that would hardly indicate that the writer was capable of a skillful forgery. Professor Aughey's position makes the case of more than ordinary interest, and if he is a victim it is sincerely to be hoped that the mysterious Vigenham will be overtaken by justice.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.—One of our prominent business men said to us the other day: "In the spring my wife got all run down and could not eat anything; passing your store I saw a pile of Hood's Sarsaparilla in the window, and I got a bottle. After she had taken it a week she had a rousing appetite, and did her everything. She took three bottles, and it was the best three dollars I ever invested. C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.
