Leeder thought that this matter of as phalt and all other kinds of felt had been fully settled a month ago. A Novel Event Which Added One to the Party.

There was more activity apparent on upper Farnamstreetabout noon yesterday han has been seen for a long time, and for over an hour the street was thronged with people who stopped to see and talk to a number of traveling aboriginees, en route to the Winnebago agency, in northeastern Nebraska, opposite Sioux City.

It was just noon when the train of wagons and ponies came down St. Mary's avenue and wheeled into line on 15th street. At first it created considerable surprise as the advent of the noble red men was entirely unexpected, and the size of the procession made it still more interesting. A halt was made at Farnam street and then the procession moved on to Dodge street where another stop oc-curred. The head chief and their lieutenants scattered about the streets on various errands and several of the squaws went out foraging.

Meantine a Bez reporter tried to interview some of the party but found it a difficult job as those who could talk would'nt and those who would could'nt. He managed to learn that the entire body consisted of twenty-one wagons and about tifty or seventy-five ponies while there were about two hundred in all of braves, squaws and Parooses. They have already been four days on their journey and expect to be about two days longer in reaching their destination. They are dressed in regular Indian style, painted louder than the belles of Twelfth street, wear blankets, silver ornaments and feathers and are gotten up regardless, after the Fennimore Cooper style. The number of boys and little babies was astonishing and the wagon beds were fairly alive with the latter while the boys mostly rode on horseback.

The procession was headed by a guide dressed in civilized apparel and the pear was brought up by a native clad Indian carrying a baton trimmed with ribbons, like a mar-shal of the day on the 4th of July. There were three chiefs and they were gorgeous in paint, feathers and highly colored apparel. One wore a scarlet blanket that came down from his head clear to his feet and his hat consisted of a single feather.

Another chief reclined lazily in his wagon. The vehicles were mostly light farm wagons and the ponies were by no means thoroughbreds. The whole outfit was a Paxton. medley and well worth seeing. The women were far more intelligent-looking
