NEW YORK GOSSIP.
Summer Diversions in Stocks, Politics and Fashions.
 New Tilden Organ—A Balloon Reminiscence—Art and War in the Harbor.
 Cor. Philadelphia Record.
 New York, August 17.—There is no denying that business circles in this city have been on the ragged edge of anxiety for some weeks past with grave fears of an impending panic, and it is equally evident that they are now much relieved at the idea that the expected smash in Wall street has come and gone without doing the injury that was feared, and in time to make everything smooth for all business and the moving of the crops. The most terrible predictions of a series of universal strikes, followed by a hard winter and "bread riots," have been indulged in; but the prophets now confess they were a little premature in their forecast of evil days, and that we are likely, after all, to have a very comfortable winter. The brokers have smiled serenely upon these financial Cassandras, for the stock-jobbing middlemen have not made their office rent for months, and any movement of the market, whether up or down, could not fail to bring money to their empty coffers.
 The dreaded panic has been discounted but not before it had brought back near by all the working men of the "street" to town, and closed up their summer recreation. Perhaps the cold weather has had something to do with it, for the fashionable birds of passage report that the days at Saratoga and Newport have been only endurable, while the nights were uncomfortable without the luxury of wood fires, at Richfield Springs and Saratoga. The August season has been a failure, and for this reason, great efforts have been made to secure the political conventions of the state at those localities. The republicans will go to Richfield Springs—the first time a state convention has ever been held there; but the democrats will stick to Saratoga and its healing waters. The effect of chilly days and nights at the summer resorts is also plainly noticeable upon the up-town avenues. Many a shrewd but ambitious matron is clad of the excuse to leave her expensive hotel and return to her own fireside with her domestic brood, and her plea, "it was so awfully cold, you know," passes current even among those who know her need of economy. Central Park is filled every afternoon with gay equipages, which are usually not seen there until late in September. In the meantime the principal head of the family has suspended his yachting cruise and is busily engaged in his office down town in counting up his securities and ascertaining how his bank account stands.
 In confirmation of statements recently made by leading local democrats that Mr. Tilden is figuring to secure the presidential nomination for himself it is pointed out that the Daily Graphic has passed into the hands of his friends. That spicy little sheet is to continue its independent policy for awhile, and at the proper time will run up the Tilden banner at its masthead. The Graphic has had a fair share of success as a daily newspaper, though it has failed entirely of its original design. When the original Montreal capitalist put their money into it they had a firm belief that under certain processes known to the Leggo brothers, who were then in their employ, they would be able to print in the afternoon a picture of an occurrence in the morning, which had been instantaneously photographed. The first number of the paper was printed in the spring of 1873, amid a tremendous blizzard of trumpets, and both articles and pictures were expected to revolutionize the journalistic profession. The first attempt at "illustrating the events of the day" was with the Seventh Regiment, which was photographed as it marched down Broadway to the Battery. Rather, an attempt was made to catch the boys of the Seventh "on the fly," but it did not work. The negatives were a confused mass of bayonets, legs and noses. Other attempts in the same line were equally disastrous, and then a council of war was held, and it was determined to anticipate coming events by the aid of the pencil, and to eke out the remainder of the illustrations by early copies from English illustrated newspapers. The Graphic at this point would have gone by the board but for the fact that it had shrewd Yankees at its business helm and was edited with uncommon ability. Public attention was diverted from the promised illustration of passing events by the building of the great iron bridge over the Hudson. Still, there was no sham about the balloon project. The publishers of the Graphic were so confident it would prove a success that they had in type at the time an illustrated history of ballooning, of which 700 pages had been electrolytically printed, which brought the story of air ships down to the time of their own venture. When the great canvas dome collapsed in the Caputo Park in Brooklyn, in sight of 20,000 sympathizing spectators, the electrolytically printed book was packed away with the rest of the ruins. Perhaps the new owners of the Graphic will be more successful with the Tilden balloon, and certainly the Sage of Greystown has money enough to float the concern, which is said to have languished lately for lack of faith on the part of Canadian capitalists who held a large part of its stock.
 Of the two steam heating companies in this city, one—the New York company, has proved a complete success; the other has made as thorough a failure. The American Heating and Power company, which turned off the steam from its pipes in January last because its pipes burst so frequently when steam was on, passed into the hands of a receiver in June, and its closed works in Cold street have since been in charge of a watchman. The bondholders have now brought foreclosure suits upon their mortgages, and this will wind up matters. The first engineer of the company has to bear the bulk of the blame; but, though a change of hands has occurred, it was practically defective, it was too late to save the company from financial disaster, and the general verdict is that it began operations before it had perfected its scheme and has now to bear the penalty of its undue haste. In the meantime the New York Steam Heat company is continuing its close working connections in the down-town business districts, and who use its steam and power find it to be one of those luxuries which soon become a necessity. Newspaper offices which have introduced the steam-pipes which have a pleasant experience of them during the hot days and nights of summer, the stereotyped dress men being able to work at much better advantage because of the more moderate volume of heat.

 The contract for laying the foundation for the Bartholdi statue of liberty on Bedloe's island has been awarded, and the work is already in progress under the direction of General Charles S. Stone. The greater part of the funds still remain to be collected, and nobody is making any effort to pass the hat around, but Mr. Cyrus W. Field says there will be no trouble about it and, as he has had considerable experience in the Grant and Garfield and Andre memorial purses, he will be looked to for ways and means to make his promise good.
 Two interesting experiments in harbor defense are now under way in the lower bay, without making much of a stir. These have to do respectively with Ericsson's torpedo boat and Haskell's multi-charge gun. At the first trial both of the experiments discovered flaws in their work. The multi-charge gun, now gun of the Destroyer, which will discharge the torpedo from a point ten feet under water, and Haskell has to make some alterations in order to insure continuity of discharge. The Destroyer will be ready for experiment to-morrow, and the Haskell gun ten days later. That the harbor of New York is comparatively defenseless against a foreign navy is until one of these novelties in coast defense becomes an assured success does not seem to trouble any of our patriotic citizens. Ericsson expresses confidence that his torpedo boat will be "the crowning success of his half-century of inventions."
 There is an opportunity in the theatrical world, and managers wear the rosy blush of excitement, while the theatres reek of paint and overheated actors. Three openings occur next week. These comprise the Kalfayre and $50,000 worth of spectacle and dainty Italian and French dancers in limited but showy coverings at Niblo's Garden, Maria Prescott and Oscar Wilde's Russian play of "Yem" at Union Square, and "Zenobia," Pratt's American Grand Opera, at the theatre designed for the "Passion Play," which was never played, but which played out, so to speak, the author and his backers.
 There has been a great deal of social and professional discussion for some days past in regard to Frank Bangs's singular accusation against his bride of twenty days. The tide of sympathy has run in the direction of the poor woman, whose sole crime is said to be her wealth and whose main offense seems to be her desire to retain it. Her late published statement is quiet and dignified, but an experienced eye might detect a great deal of untold yellow-covered stories between the lines. The lady has claimed that she herself respect has sealed her utterance. Mr. Frank Bangs has displayed a desire for publicity which, considering the details, does not elevate his manhood in general esteem. Inside the profession of matrimony it is related in regard to his past private career. These were known him for more than a quarter of a century, he is now in the hands of the public, and he is an exceedingly sick woman in bed, actors and actresses are loud in unfavorable comment. I saw two of the original cast yesterday who urged that the time had come when the stage should be purified. "How will you do it?" asked a youngster behind the footlights. "Easy enough," responded the other; "refuse to play in the pieces which contain a Bangs or a Tealie, and then these gentry would learn that Thespian and the second of the American theatre, the American theatre, you may say, a great deal of dirt to be uncovered when Mrs. Bangs lawyers get to work.
 Mapleson is coming; so is Abbey; so are Patti, Gerster, Pappenhelm, Nilsson, Semblich, Schaleh, Trebelli, Campanini, and all the vocal hosts of Europe. Irving Place is being placed in battle array, and macaroni and garlic are already at a premium.
 They are now trying to work an American boom for Booth and an English boom for Irving, who brings, besides his special company, his special critic. Let us hope that the Forrest and Macready business is not about to be duplicated.
 A bottle of Angostura Bitters to flavor your lemonade, or any other cold drinks with, will keep you free from Dyspepsia, Colic, Diarrhoea, and other ailments originating from the digestive organs. Be sure and get the genuine Angostura, manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. SIEGERT & SONS.

Two Women.
 The unhappiest woman I know is a brilliant woman of semi-Bohemian literary society. Envied but not enviable, admired but not loved. The wittiest woman of her city, her bon mots are the clearest and the most clever, and her thinking woman, her work is clear and thoughtful. She says: "I would rather be the weakest, least talented woman in the world; the homeliest wife of an honest man; who would love me and let me love him, than the most beautiful, successful woman of the world. I would rather be the slave of a household than a queen usurping masculine rights."
 The happiest woman I know lives in a small one-story cottage, behind which are two tiny rows of corn and a patch of sunflowers, and a little brook that thirstily hurries along to find more water. All she has in the world is a horse and a strong-limbed, hearty, unambitious husband, who pauses but few times from morning until night, even to wave a willing hand to her from a small marble quarry two rods away. She says: "I will work for Tom in my way, but he will work for me. A woman who will, may."
 Whether you prefer the sea breeze or the bracing mountain air for your summer vacation you should not omit to provide yourself with a bottle of Angostura Bitters. The acknowledged standard regulator of the digestive organs. Be sure to get the genuine article, manufactured only by Dr. J. G. B. SIEGERT & SONS.
Keep Up the Standard.
 Dr. Cundiff, who was loudly called on for a speech at a late meeting of the Missouri Shorthorn breeders, indulged in some wholesome remarks upon keeping up and improving the standard of Shorthorn. He advised using the knife on not less than one-third of the thoroughbred male calves, and even more if they did not promise to make good, square, blocky bulls, weighing over 2,000 pounds when matured. He said that a poor animal should never be permitted to spoil a sound crop. On the other hand, a good bull, he said, was found, whose progeny is superior in quality, keep him until a ripe age gathers him as James Brown's red bull, Favorite, Comet, Hubback, Belvidere, the Duke of Northumberland, and Commander-in-Chief. When such a fine breeder can not be bred any longer in one herd, change him to another, and so on round, and in this way the amount of good to be accomplished by one bull that breeds just right would be incalculable, for his good deeds would live long after him, and many a good young bull would appear in herds whose specimens now appear which do not possess all the traits of a good Shorthorn, viz: Good broad back, square rump, well let down in the twist, straight top and bottom lines, low to the ground, small muzzle, and broad between the eyes, full and mild eye, especially in the female. Good, thick coat of hair, with a mellow hide, straight leg, good round the heart and the flank, and under line generally to come down low, and on a straight line from front back, like the lower end of a bed quilt thrown over the animal for a cover. Now let us all weed out all inferior animals as a rule, and not as an exception.

 Another important point should be looked after, viz: When ever a heifer did not breed right, she and her progeny, if a heifer should be turned out in the grade pasture to breed steers and grade heifers, and if her calf should be a bull, let a sharp knife be used upon him at an early period in his life, so that he may never double the disgrace on his more favored kindred. In fact, a few spayed heifers like our friends make over in Herefordshire and Aberdeen, Scotland, would exert a healthy influence upon the raising of the Shorthorns of the future. Yes, in a two fold way. First, what a good animal even a third-rate Shorthorn would make when spayed, and fed up, and in the second, as in the case of the bull, it would stop her defects on the average made among the next crop of calves.

Something New to Snake Stories.
 Carson Appeal.
 On last Thursday night as the stage was coming from Markleville, the road seemed to get very heavy near Woodford's canon. The nearest horses could hardly drag the load, and they seemed to have harder work at every step. Finally they stopped to rest at a little knoll just this side of Woodford's station, and when the driver attempted to start the horses they could not pull an inch. He dismounted and took a lantern to examine the running gear, when, to his astonishment, he found, as he supposed, that a rope had been tied between the two wheels. Laying his hand on the rope, he started back with a yell of discovering that a live snake had twisted itself between the hind and fore wheels, and was holding the stage as securely as if the wheels had been tied with an inch rope. The reptile had evidently been trying to block the stage for several miles, and when the horses stopped for a rest improved the opportunity to tighten the coils so as to effectually prevent the stage from starting again.
 The passengers got out and tackled the snake with clubs and stones, and as the reptile thrashed about under the wheels, the horses were wild with terror. He was finally killed by a blow on the head, and it was not until after he got it disentangled from the wheels. He was the style of a snake known as the mountain runner, and measured twelve feet four inches. When stretched tightly between the wheels he was much longer.
 Beauty, that transitory flower, can only be had by using Pozzoni's mentolated complexion powder.
American Handwriting.
 Larger margins.
 Statistics are needed of the American handwriting before any generalization is attempted about it. Those who are in the way of seeing specimens of it from all parts of the country, from clergymen, clerks, farmers, lawyers, doctors, agents, merchants, etc.—always excepting the people who write like the writing-master—declare that they have no general character, and that it is a matter of indifference whether it is sprawling, flourishing, unformed, that it lacks neatness, compactness, solidity. Is this only a fancy, or is the writing a sign of superficiality and carelessness and exaggeration? There is variety enough. We certainly have not the uniformity that German or French writing enables us to tell its nationality at a glance. Are we mistaken in saying that the English hand, generally speaking, is a hand of more culture, finish, neatness? We signed the Declaration very well on the whole, but we have hardly as a people lived up to it.

THE NECESSARY FOR THE SPECIALIST.
DR. H. WAGNER,
 Has long been acknowledged and more so at this day than any other. The vast field of medical science ever increasing, and its numerous branches are brought nearer and nearer to perfection, and not one man can ever hope to master them all. Hence the necessity for dividing the labor. And it is true that the human system is affected by the ordinary organs need special study more than anything else, if we would understand and know how to treat them properly.
 DR. H. WAGNER is fully aware that there are many physicians, and some sensible people, who will endeavor him for making this class of diseases a specialty, but he is happy to know that with the most perfect refinement and intelligence a more enlightened view is taken of the subject, and that the physician who devotes himself to relieving the afflicted and saving them from a premature death, does not lose a pleasurable and beneficent labor to his race than the surgeon or physician who by close application excels in any other branch of his profession. And fortunately for humanity, the day is dawning when the false philanthropy that condemned the victims of fully or crone-like diseases, the Jewish law, to die unburied for has passed away.
A Few Reasons
 Why you should try the celebrated Dr. H. Wagner's methods of cure.
 1. "Dr. H. Wagner is a natural physician."
 2. "Few can excel you as a doctor."
 3. "You are the World's Greatest Physiologist."
 4. "The afflicted find relief only in your presence."
 5. "Dr. H. Wagner is a regular graduate from the University of Chicago, and has extensive hospital practice, and is thoroughly posted on all branches of his beloved science, especially on chronic diseases."
 6. "Dr. H. Wagner is immortalized himself by his wonderful discovery of specific remedies for private and sexual diseases."—Virginia City Chronicle.
 7. "Thousands of invalids look to see him."—San Francisco Chronicle.
 8. "The Doctor's long experience as a specialist should render him very successful in Rocky Mountain cases."
Plain Facts Plainly Spoken.
 At one time a discussion of the secret was entirely avoided by the profession, and medical works of a few years ago would hardly mention it. To-day the plain facts of a different opinion; he is aware that it is his duty—disagreeable though it may be to handle a matter without gloves and speak plainly about it; and intelligent parents and guardians will thank him for doing so.
 The results attending the curative use were formerly not understood, or not properly estimated, and no importance being attached to a subject which by its nature does not invite close investigation, it was willfully ignored.
 The habit is generally contracted by the young while attending school; other companions through their example, may be responsible for it, or it may be contracted in the office of a physician, or in the street, or in the family, and it is not infrequently inherited. The boy seeks seclusion, and rarely joins the ranks of his associates. If he is a general man, he will be found in company with the other boys of his school, or in the street, or in the office of a physician, or in the street, or in the family, and it is not infrequently inherited.
 If the practice is violently persisted in, more serious disturbances take place. Great palpitation of the heart, or epileptic convulsions, are experienced, and the sufferer may fall into a complete state of idiocy before, finally, death relieves him.
 To those engaged in the dangerous practice, I would say, first of all, stop it at once; make every possible effort to do so; but if you fail, if you have your own mind already too much shattered, and consequently your will-power broken, take some nerve tonic and aid you in your effort. Having freed yourself from the habit, I would further counsel you to go through a regular course of treatment, for it is a great mistake to suppose that one may, for some time, be it every so little, give himself up to this fascinating but dangerous excitement without suffering from its evil consequences at some future time. The number of young men who are incapacitated to fill the duties of a well-to-do citizen is alarmingly large, and in most of such cases the medical profession is unable to trace to the practice of self-abuse, which has been abandoned, the cause of the mental weakness. The use of this habit is sufficient to induce spermatorrhoea in later years, and I have many of such cases under treatment at the present day.
Young Men.
 Who may be suffering from the effects of youthful follies or indiscretions will do well to avail themselves of the services of Dr. H. Wagner, who is a specialist in the treatment of such cases. Dr. Wagner will guarantee to cure every case of seminal weakness or impotence of any kind and character which he undertakes to cure and to fail to cure.
Middle Aged Men.
 There are many at the age of 30 to 60 who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, or with nervousness, or with a general feeling of languor, or with a weakening of the system in a manner that cannot be accounted for. On examining the urinary secretions, a peculiar mucus will be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of this milky hue, again many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. W. will guarantee a perfect cure in all cases and a healthy restoration of the genital-urinary organs.

Let Your Light Shine.
 Dr. Wagner, the celebrated specialist, of Denver, Colo., 343 Larimer street, believes in letting the world know what he can do, and is doing for thousands of his fellow-men. His treatment for lost manhood is sure to win him his title, which he has already won. Ten thousand testimonials from all over the United States from those he has cured, is proof positive that he does cure the worst cases of these diseases. He has cured from chronic and sexual diseases of every kind will find him their best friend. Read his advertisement, and know you will corroborate us in saying he is the sufferer's true friend.—Rocky Mountain News.
Relief to the Afflicted.
 In medicine, as in science, the specialists are the ones who always come to the front and accomplish great results. This remark is especially applicable to Dr. H. Wagner of this city. He stands at the top of his profession, and the cure he performs for the unfortunate would seem wonderful if not properly viewed in the light of scientific attainments. He is endorsed by the most eminent of the medical faculty. His office at 343 Larimer street, where he will specify effect a cure for the suffering of either sex, no matter how complicated their complaint.—Pomroy's Democrat.
Chronic Complaints Require Time for a Cure.
 Persons at a distance who wish to be treated by Dr. Wagner need not feel backward because of inability to visit him. If they will send to the doctor a well-merited list of questions which enables him to send medicine, counsel and advice to thousands he has cured. He has put in every day, every town and station in Colorado, as well as all over the United States. See his address in his advertisement.—Union City Tribune.
Shall We Reform?
 Specific remedies for all diseases is the theory and practice at present of educated and experienced physicians, and in all large communities they have their specialties, to each in which they direct their attention. Dr. H. Wagner is a successful illustration of this modern school of specialties, and his unparalleled success in the treatment of private ailments is as wonderful as it is baffling.—Brook. A.
 Those persons who need medical relief for the most delicate of diseases will find an accomplished and successful physician in the person of Dr. Wagner, No. 343 Larimer street, who is highly recommended by the medical profession at home and abroad.—Pomroy's Democrat. Bigotry and ignorance will give way to wisdom, and wise physicians believe in letting his light shine for the glory of his fellow men. Printer's notice: Those who wish to guide in the way of health and sick one to the fountain of healing, if this article should be instrumental as a "Tonic" or "Liberator" set up on a hill to guide suffering humanity to 343 Larimer street, Denver, Colorado, it will answer the purpose for which it was written.
