KEROSENE AND CANDLES

Discovered Under a Pile of Paper

An Incipient Blaze Extinguished

Will E. Hahn Arrested on Suspicion of Having Set the Fire.

The little book and stationery store on the north side of Dodge street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth was discovered to be on fire about eleven o'clock Sunday evening and the incipient blaze extinguished. Further facts in regard to it developed after the crowd had dispersed. The glass in the door is supposed to have been broken by a passer-by. The curtains to the windows were drawn down. Chief Engineer Butler, Assistant Chief Mitchell and Capt, Donahue of the police

COMMENCED TO INVESTIGATE. been jerked forward to put out the blaze, and the boards around were burned black. The floor was saturated with kerosene. Here, and also in two places under the long row of show cases on the other side of room were found ingeniously contrived piles of paper boxes with three short candles under each pile, each set in the midst of a ring of shavings. Just behind the pyramid of boxes were placed was found by a reporter yesterday the scene of the fire looking over the property, which he had sold Hahn on long time. The door was guarded by a policeman. Mr. Seaman had the insurance papers, which read that the insurance money should be paid to him until the debt was satisfied. There were two policies in the Phoenix, each for $2,000.

Hahn was owing Seaman about $3,300.

"If he did this," said Mr. Seaman, "I don't see what made him, because all the book trade know that our best business is done in the coming three months." The store was considerably upset. On top of one of the counters some one had written about noon, having waived examination. Although this is a strong case of circumstantial evidence, every latitude should be shown in drawing conclusions upon it, because there is a possibility, and everyone hopes that it may become a reality, that Mr. Hahn may prove his entire in nocence. He is a young man who has grown up in Omaha, who is well liked and favorably known here, who has always been considered upright in all his transactions. He carried a fine stock of books, and although in debt had every prospect of relieving himself from that gradually, because his custom was steadily increasing and becoming fixed.

A Brutal Bully, DENVER, Col., September 10.—This morning Edward D. Cowan, city editor of the Leadville Herald, was brutally assaulted by Alderman Joy of that city. The parties were discussing local politics, when Joy took exception to a remark of Cowan's, knocked him down and with a drawn revolver kept the crowd at bay, jumped on his face with heavy boots, and kicked and stamped him until he was almost unrecegnizable and will probably die. Joy escaped by the mountains.
