that Manley, Cooper & Co. should have a contract if he could avoid it. With respect to the work on the vaults, safes and locks for public buildings, the committee express the opinion that for all such work the proposals should be elerated by public advertisements at least once a year. It says the giving of orders continually for a term of years to one firm without any opportunity for competition, by invitation of public proposals, is in direct condict with the letter and spirit of the law. With regard to the purchase of elevators of one particular make, and failure to advertise for competition, the committee says the architect was dereliet in his duty.
