Dan Murphy, of Omaha, was on this side of the river yesterday, with one or two of his friends, and while taking dinner left their team standing back of the police station. On returning to the rig in the course of a half hour found that his buffale robe had been stolen by some cheeky fellow, right in view of the eyes of the boys in blue.

One of the railway conductors of the K. C., lost his pocketbook at the dummy depot, an honest boy found it and left it at the tinket office where the conductor afterward got it. The knight of the punch left a bright new dollar for the boy's reward, but the boy has not appeared on the scene yet. If he will call pleting the arrangements for the build at the dummy depot he can get the dol-
