A QUIET CONTEST.

The Election in the City an Unusually Tame Affair.

But Handsome Majorities are Rolled Up for Some of the Best Men.

A Few Offices Still in Doubt,

The election of Tuesday was, so far as heard from, a quiet one throughout the city and county. The total vote polled Heins 75, Ijams 65 in the county is a light one as will be seen from the returns, a great many voters not being registered and many not In order to accommodate all at the New even going to the polls to have their votes England dinner at the Paxton ice cream par- sworn in. The returns are pretty full lors to-day, the early dinner will begin at thus far as compared with those made within the same space of time last year, So far as can be figured up from the count as reported. Savage will go out of the county with a large majority. The contest between Heins and Ijams is close and the friends of both claim their election. Miller is probably elected sheriff, with Rush for treasurer, Leavitt clerk, Chadwick county judge, Corliss commissioner, Kent coroner and Smith surveyor. Neville and Wakeley of course had no opposition. The figures so far as received are as follows:

The Paxton house, which never does things by halves, had provided a manifi-cent feast for the boys. The table was set in the alcove which opens into their grand dining room and very inviting it ooked with its load of fruit and other delicacies. A detachment of sable-hued and snowy-clad waiters was soon busied in attending to the party, who, with the proverbial modesty of newspaper men, gave their orders from the following elegant

It will be a matter of regret to posterity that a short-hand writer was posterity that a short-hand writer was not present to record the speeches of those who usually talk only through the Faber, but it is enough to say that the toasts were appropriate and the responses sincere and expressive, as well as witty and eloquent.

Mr. Annin made a neat speech expressing his regret at leaving the field of pressing his regret at leaving the field of journalism and Mr. Rosewater paid him compliment in his response that any man might be proud to receive. "Little pared, but he turned in the following little poem in honor of the occasion.

Upon the inky paper field,
We've sacrificed each other,
We've cut and slashed without a yield, In warlike strife to smother
Our deadly foes, and boom our friends,
And s' Ading die without amends.
But no in peace our wranglings cease,

In truce are journalistic foes,
Disciples true of Caxton,
Who respite seek from office woes,
Around the board at Paxton,
Where dainties plentiful abound,
Mirth, wit and song in gay resound,
To cheer his breast, our honored guest,
That drew us to the Paxton.

Rosewater, Polack, Parson Nye, To-night have spiked their cannon, Kent, Sorenson and Woodbridge try, What nice reports they're plannin' What nice reports they to make the compliment our trusty friend, Who hies him to Nebraska's end, Where happiness may ever bless, Our genial brother, Annin.

The eloquence around this board,
The sharp-edged puns and rank wit,
In books are worthy to be stored,
From this right regal banquet,
Where in fraternal joy we meet,
Our dear departing friend to greet,
And from our heart, regret to part,
The guest of this last banquet.

When on Ft. Robinson's battled walls,
Mid blizzard blasts he's stan'in',
And list'ming to the wintry squalls,
And lightning flashes scannin',
He'll think of us in warm delight,
The friends that round him here to-night,
With tearful eye, to say "Good-bye,"
And blessings with thee, Annin.
