"SOJER BOYS."

How Recruits for the General Army are Accepted—The Struggles They Pass Through.

Buffalo Express.

A very entertaining half hour was spent yesterday afternoon in the editorial rooms of the Express with a representative of this paper. He has been reporting about a month, during which he has attended a dozen midnight fires, explored the interior of a sewer for a distance of half a mile, was knocked down and half killed at an enthusiastic First Ward political gathering, and experienced several other little pleasures common to the profession.

"I climbed the stairway to the door and pulled the bell. A pleasant-looking baldheaded gentleman came to the door, wearing a military uniform and a pleasant smile. When I looked back I new that the latter adornment was somewhat sarcastic. He asked me what he could do for me, and I began to say something of my longing for glory and immortal fame. But he cut me short with 'You want to join the army? Ah, I see. Just step this way and put down your name on the list. The blottoer—don't forget the middle initial.'"

"When I had complied, he—I was told to call him Sergeant Warren—took out a book and asked me several questions. He wanted to know if I had ever been sick. I told him I was sick now—of newspaper work—and that I had passed through a siege of whooping-cough, in addition to having the measles in infancy. Then he asked if I had ever had fits. 'Not quite, but pretty near,' I answered. 'What do you mean?' says he. 'I've been working on a newspaper,' says I. Then he laughed, sobered down, and smiled. The smile, I believe, meant 'you'll come pretty close to those same fits again before you are an older.'"

"I was next sent into the basement for a bath, after which, clothed in nothing save a blue and considerable confusion, I again returned to the sergeant's room. A thorough examination he made of me from head to foot, to be sure that I was sound; and then the recruiting officer Col. Beutoni, went over me in like manner. He then told me that Dr. Trevan, the examining surgeon, would be in shortly, and that I could sit by the stove till he arrived. When he showed up he gave a more careful going over than either of my former tormentors. He scrutinized my nose and ears, looked at my teeth, tapped my chest, and then felt of my limbs as a jockey does when he buys a horse. Then he pulled out an instrument—it wasn't a stethoscope, although the name has a somewhat similar sound—at any rate he began testing my heart and lungs. When he finished I was weighed and measured as to height and circumference of chest, and they said I was all correct, and that if, after consideration, I still held to my former determination, I could be sworn in."

"I returned to the basement, closed the blinds and dressed myself, when I again went up stairs and announced my determination to allow nothing to sever the bonds which I had fastened to the welfare of my native land. They looked as if they wanted to hit me, but instead they filled out a blank for me to sign, stating my name, place of birth, age and occupation, and that I had voluntarily enlisted this blank day of blank, 1883, as a soldier in the army of the United States of America, to the period of five years, and that I accepted from the United States money, pay, rations, and clothing as are or may be established by law. This the colonel read off to me in a solemn manner, and continued, still talking in his throat: 'Isaac, hold up your right hand and swear—you won't swear! Well, then, you affirm as follows:—'"

"And I do solemnly affirm that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America, and that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States, and orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and articles of the compact to which you affirm. Do you?"

"Every time," I answered proudly, and signed my name. "I had hoped that this would make me a soldier without any further questioning, but the sergeant turned over the paper we had just filed in and pointed out a blank form headed, 'Discharge of a Recruit.' By it, after filling it out, declared that I had neither wife nor child; that I was of legal age to enlist and believed myself physically qualified to perform a soldier's duties, and that I had never been discharged from the United States army or navy, or any other service on account of disability or by sentence of either civil or military court except with good character."

"I was now taken to the clothes-room, and after trying on any number of garments at last found an entire outfitted me as snug as if made to order. The colonel told me a little airing would do them good, and I accordingly sallied forth into the street. I felt rather queer. I thought people looked at me as though they knew I was from, but I assumed a don't-care-a-dam air, and after a little experience felt natural."

The story of the unfortunate youth, above narrated, gives a very correct description of what has to be gone through with by every applicant for service in the United States army. There are three training-schools for would-be soldiers in this country, and to one of these every raw recruit is sent from the rendezvous existing here. The principal school is at David's island, in New York harbor, opposite New Rochelle, and the remaining two are located, the one at Columbus barracks, Columbus, O., and the other at Jefferson barracks, near St. Louis. The last named is the regular station for cavalry recruits. At these depois the newly-enlisted men are drilled, disciplined, and instructed thoroughly in all the duties required of them as soldiers. The time of remaining in these preparation institutions varies according to the intelligence and application of the men. Some are forwarded to regiments in a few weeks, while others may remain under instruction for three or even four months before they are fitted for active work. From the preparatory stations the men are generally assigned to some regiment in the west, it may be down in Texas, or perhaps as far away as California or Montana. Then the regular army life begins. Regular drills, inspections, and guard duty are gone through with while at the regimental depot, and in case of an Indian outbreak or other uprising the men are called on for something besides playing soldier.

Cattle in a Cyclone. Corral the cattle! Fling the lasso far! Flank the wild stragglers! Storm and sleet betide, Haste! and charging as in mimic war, Among the tawny herd hallooing ride. Important Cattle Show. CHICAGO, November 8.—The annual national fat stock show will be held here, beginning November 14. Entries have been received from all parts of the country and Great Britain. On the 10th and 15th the national convention of cattle breeders and raisers will be held here, at the call of Prof. Loring, president of the United States Treasury Cattle Commission, for the purpose of consulting in regard to the prevention and spread of contagious diseases among cattle. England, Germany and France will send commissioners to this meeting.

The Kendall dramatic company passed through the city yesterday en route for Fremont. Two years ago this company played a three night's engagement in Omaha, but this season they are passing the larger cities.

Catarrh. At this season of the year everybody has a cold and some very bad ones. By frequent exposure the mucous membrane of the nose, throat, and air passages and catarrh is an epidemic. Relief may be obtained by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For many years in succession, beginning so far back as I don't remember when, I had the catarrh in my head. It consisted of a continual flow from my nose.

Ring and Bursting Noises. In my head. Sometimes the hearing in my left ear was affected. Five years ago, about this season of the year, I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. It was helped right away, but I continued to use it until I felt myself cured.—Mrs. Edna B. Caulfield, Lowell, Mass.

THE MORAL OF IT.

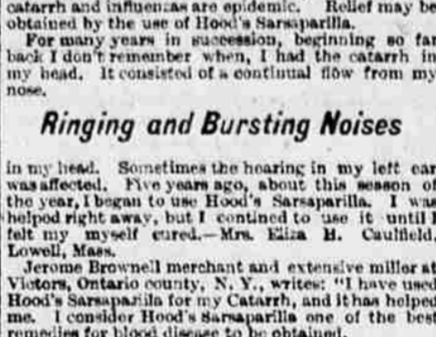

We may moralize as much as we please about pain; but the fact is, that we don't like it while it lasts, and that we want to get rid of it as soon as we can. Whether caused by rheumatism, gout, disordered liver, weak nerves, irregular kidneys, bad blood, or anything else that is just the reverse of what it should be, the sooner it is out of the system the happier we are. Whether pain is the result of imprudence or of accident, or is sent as a punishment for our sins, may be a nice question for the philosophers to argue; but people who are suffering want first to be rid of the pain, after which those who are fond of argument may argue the matter to their hearts' content.

Above all theory, argument, and philosophy, comes the delightful fact that BROWN'S IRON BITTERS drives pain away. Sufferers run no risk in trying this medicine, the only compound containing iron which carries no mischief with it. Those who have used it will tell you so; and you can try for yourself by buying a bottle of the nearest druggist.
