"Ah, old fellow, you make rather free with his Excellency's precincts!"

The visitor opened his full orbs a little more than their wont, but, without replying to the remark, kept his mind, as was his habit, steadily upon the matter in

"You know, I recommended to you and to the Kennebec regiment, before their election, a youngster from the regular army, Oliver O. Howard, a lieutenant teaching at the Military Academy of West Point."

"Oh, yes! He belongs to Maine—to Leeds; was born there. He was elected.

Will he accept?"
"Howard is already on hand," answered the Governor's visitor, "and I will fetch him up and introduce him, if you are at leisure.

"Oh, certainly, certainly! Glad he has come soon-want to know him," answered the Governor, "Let him come

While the familiar, self-possessed visitor is gone for the young man, let us take a nearer view of him.

His head was a model in size and shape, with a forehead high and broad, and, as you would expect in a strong face, a large Roman nose.

But the feature which marked this young man was those dark gray eyes, very full and very bright. He wore no beard, had a perceptible lisp in his speech, and a clear, penetrating voice, slightly masal He excelled everybody, even the nervous Governor, in rapidity of utterance. He had already been two years in the Maine House. Nobody there could match him in debate. He was, as an opponent, sharp, fearless, aggressive and most un-compromising; always had in any wordy conflict as an editor, first, and then in the House, blow for blow with ever-increasing momentum. Yet, from his con summate management of men, he became extensively popular. Such is my remem brance of James G. Blaine when he was 2,507 thirty years of age. In a few minutes 2,643 after his departure Mr. Blaine returned 2,682 to the Governor's room with the new col

The Governor looked happy. He probably felt a satisfaction in my appoint ment. His first "three years' regiment, a thousand strong, made up of his neighbors and friends, was to be commanded by one who had received a military edu cation, and who had already enjoyed some field experience.

THE GOVERNOR'S WELCOME. I was a little thin in flesh, pale, rather slender of build, and did not then give the idea of the toughness believed to be requisite for hard war; yet, somehow, my requisite for hard war; yet, somehow, my appearance, due perhaps to his near-sight-edness, gave the Governor immediate confidence. He arose quickly, took my right hand in both of his and shook it warmly. "Many congratulations, my young friend. Your regiment is already here—across the way. You must hasten and help us get it into shape. At first you will find 'the boys' a little rough, but we've got your first-rate adjutant; haven't

"Just so! Just so! How I like the true ring. We will put this rebellion down in short order with this sort of 248 spirit; eh, Blaine?" rejoined the rapid Governor.
