A Superstitious Thief.

Philip Guyer, of Paterson, lost a large sum of money by theft recently. He suspected an old woman of the neighborhood, but did not have sufficient evidence to warrant his making a complaint against What made it the more suspicious was that the woman called every morning to ask Mr. Guyer if he had got any trace of the thief. The following story is told by a Paterson police official: Mr. Guyer ascertained that she was very superstitious, and the next morning, when she called and asked, as usual, if there was any news of the thief, he replied:
"No; but I expect to know who it was

"How?" asked the woman. "Do you see those three nails?" said Mr. Guyer, showing the woman three very, old and rusty nails. "Well, they came from a coffin that had been buried for a handred years." "The Virgin save us," said the woman cressing herself.

"And do you see that paper?"

"I do."

"Well, that is a prayer which I just got from the priest. "And what are you going to do with those things? "Well," answered Mr. Guyer, slowly and impressively, looking the woman in the face, "to-night at 12 o'clock I am to go into a certain yard where there is a pear tree. I am to nail that prayer to the tree with these three nails. Every time I drive a nail I am to repeat that prayer aloud. The officers noticed that Ella was well dressed and apparently in funds, but did not speak to her. Upon returning to Brooklyn, however, they learned of the robbery of Mrs. Hall, and agreed that Ella was just the sort of person to have committed the theft. Then they proceeded to the girl's residence, charged her with having roobed Mrs. Hall, and were delighted to obtain from her a con-

In court yesterday the officer stated that the goods stolen were worth more than $25, I ut that it would take considerable testimony to prove the fact. They were of opinion that it would be a saving of expense to the county to accept a plea of guilty to petty larceny.

"I won't do that without the district attorney's consent," said Justice Walsh. 'This girl has served a year in the penitentiary on a charge of attempted burg-

The district-attorney consented to the plea, being convinced that it would be difficult if not impossible to convict of a graver offense.
